U. S. Submarine E-2 Blown Up in the New York Navy Yard

SAILORS DIE AS INTERNAL BLAST WRECKS WARSHIP

Cause of Explosion While Test of New Batteries Was Being Made in Dry Dock is Not Yet Known

New York, Jan. 15.—The United States submarine E-2 was today blown up and partially desroyed in the New York navy yard. The body of one man killed in the internal explosion was rescued and a report to Brooklyn police headquarters said seven others were killed.

The cause of the explosion, which was said to have opened up several plates of the craft, could not be learned some time after the accident occurred.

Several searching parties, which undertook to enter the submarine, were driven back by heavy gas fumes.

Pulled Out Unconscious.

Several officers who were lowered into the craft were pulled out after becoming unconscious. The one body recovered was found near a hatchway.

Newspaper men were barred from the yard and it was with much difficulty that the report of the explosion could be confirmed through yard officials and all details concerning the accident were refused.

Testing New Batteries.

It was reported that the engineers in the navy yard were testing one of the new Edison batteries installed in the craft at the time of the explosion. These batteries were intended to obviate the danger to the crews of submarines from gas fumes. Recently submarines were reported to have made successful trips with batteries in use.

Later reports that came from the navy yard were that twelve men had been taken out of the hold seriously injured and twenty with lighter injuries. They were removed to the navy yard hospital.

Was Afire Inside.

One man was killed outright and at least nine others were injured in the explosion, according to a navy yard employe who was near the scene of the accident.

The submarine was afire inside, he said, and in order to put out the flames the little craft was flooded. At the time of the explosion the E-2 was on the stocks in dry dock No. 2.

Two of the injured died shortly after they reached the naval hospital.

While Recharging Batteries.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels was at the National Democratic club in this city at the time of the explosion delivering a lecture on national preparedness. He was notified of the accident, but after the interruption went on with his address.

The explosion occurred while the submarine's batteries were being recharged, according to a statement made at the navy hospital by one of the injured men. It was caused by hydrogen gas, he said.

Men working near the E-2 heard a terrific detonation and then saw a great burst of flames shoot from one of the hatchways.

INSTALLED NEW BATTERIES.

E-2 Was First Submersible to Be So Equipped.

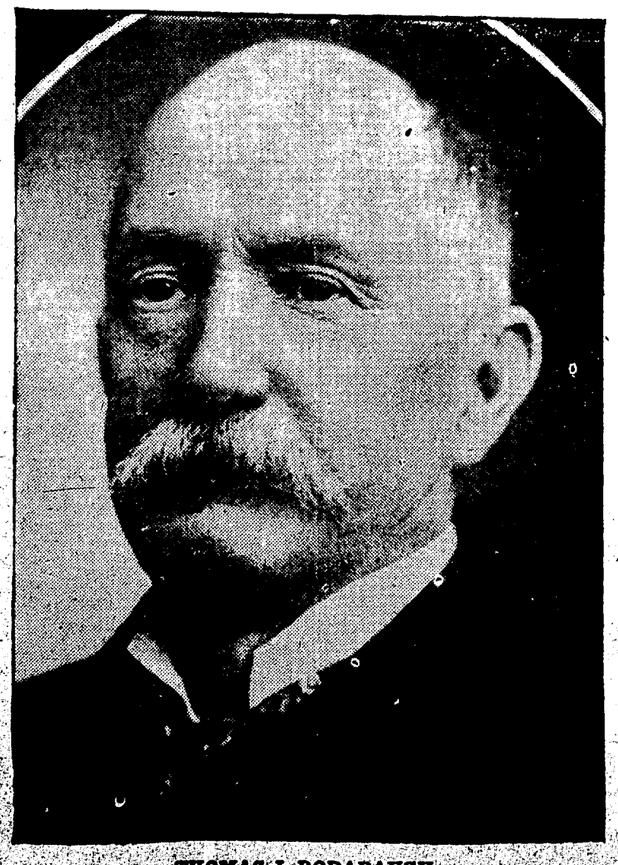
NEW RESTRICTIONS ON GOLF AMATEURS

Chicago, Jan. 15.—New restrictions on the activities of golf amateurs were adopted here today by the executive committee of the United States Golf association. The ruling brings the golf amateur to the plane of experts in track and field athletics so far as getting indirect profits as a result of proficiency in the game is concerned.

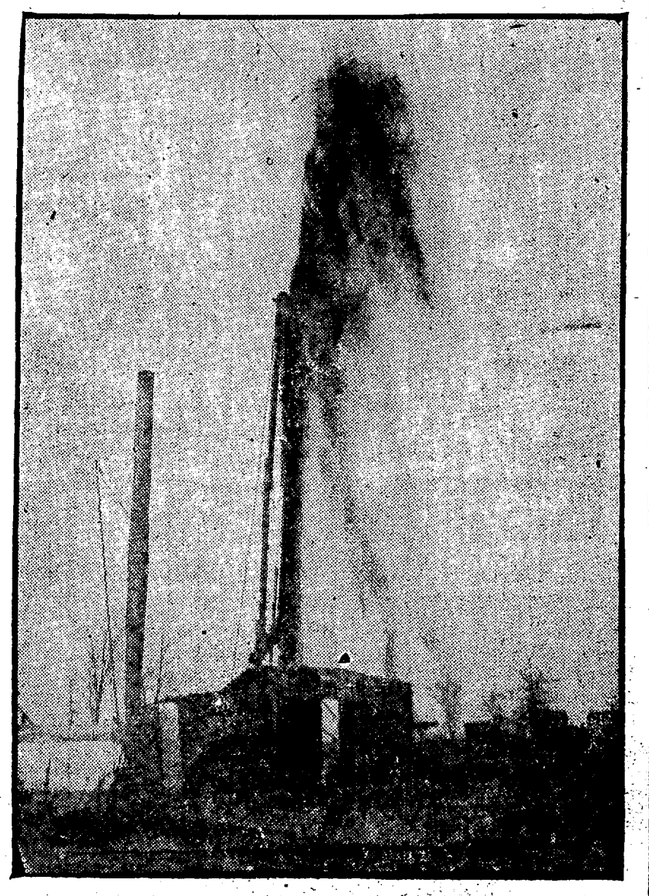
Under it amateurs "are prohibited from accepting or holding any position as agent or employee that includes as part of its duties the handling of golf supplies; or engaging in any business wherein one's usefulness or profits arise because of skill or prominence in the game of golf."

DEATH COMES TO WIDELY-KNOWN VETERN RAILWAY SHOPMAN.



THOMAS J. RODABAUGH.

FIRST PUBLISHED PHOTOGRAPH OF WOODBURN OIL WELL SHOT.



This is the first photograph of the shooting of the Woodburn oil well to be published, and was snapped by J. R. Lindemuth, a Woodburn photographer, the moment the oil shot out of the well. The spray can be seen fully sixty feet above the ground.

DEATH SUMMONS AGED RETIRED CAR PAINTER

Thomas J. Rodabaugh Had Been Employed by the Railroads 56 Years.

A year's illness due to a complication of diseases resulted in the death Friday evening of Thomas Johnson Rodabaugh, one of the best known and most highly respected retired shopmen of Fort Wayne. Mr. Rodabaugh was retired from the service of the Pennsylvania railroad nearly ten years ago after he had completed fifty-six years of active service in railroad circles.

Death came at 8 o'clock at the family home, 1116 Washington boulevard west. The end was not unexpected as he had been hovering between life and death for the past week. Mr. Rodabaugh was 80 years of age last October 9.

The deceased was born in Summit county, Ohio, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rodabaugh, early settlers of the Buckeye state. He was reared on a farm until his twelfth birth anniversary and the following three years he was employed in his father's store. In 1850 he took employment with the railroad company and five years later came to Fort Wayne, where he assisted in track-laying on the Wabash between here and Defiance.

In August of the same year he returned to Fort Wayne and learned the painter's trade under J. J. Kammer. Eight months after he had learned the trade he took employment with the Wabash railroad where he remained until June 20, 1860. At this time he took a similar position with the Pennsylvania

JUDGE POINTS DUTY TO 100 NEW CITIZENS

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 15.—Judge Joseph Buffington, of the United States circuit court of appeals, addressing 100 newly naturalized foreigners in the federal court here yesterday pointed out that they now had but one country to support and urged them to be careful about participating in labor strikes, as he thought but little good could come from them.

"You men now owe an allegiance to the United States and should support it against all enemies both domestic and foreign," said Judge Buffington. "If this country should be plunged into war, and God forbid that it ever will, you must remember that you owe allegiance to this country only even against the land of your birth."

HE WALKED OFF WITH $17,000

Four Hours Later Evansville Bookkeeper is Captured at Boonville.

SAID BANK HAD MADE AN ERROR

George H. Fink Then Disappears With Valise and Payroll Cash.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 15.—Four hours after he had walked out of the office of the Hercules Buggy company with $17,000 in currency intended for the company's pay roll, George H. Fink, assistant bookkeeper was captured at noon at Boonville by Prosecuting Attorney Ora Davis, of Warrick county.

Fink was accustomed to putting the pay roll money in envelopes for the employes of the Hercules company and today complained that the bank had made a mistake in the sum furnished. He put the currency into a valise and left, saying he would have the cashier go to the bank to have the mistake rectified. Instead he left the building.

Missed in Half Hour.

He was missed in half an hour and when it was found the money was missing search was instituted. The city police and private detectives scoured the city.

HENRY ADDRESSES NEW FARMERS' CLUB

The first meeting of the Allen County Agricultural association since its organization was held Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the assembly room of the court house. A fair-sized crowd was present. George V. Kell, of Eel River township, presided and gave a short talk. The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Clarence Henry, county agricultural agent, who spoke on proper methods of feeding hogs. He reviewed the recent feeding demonstration that was conducted on the farm of Frank Butt in Maumee township by representatives from Purdue university.

RUSS FAIL IN FIVE ATTACKS

Series of Tremendous Assaults on the Austrian Lines Repulsed.

EMPEROR WILLIAM AGAIN IN PUBLIC

German Monarch is Making Satisfactory Recovery from His Illness.

Today's War News Given in Summary

The eastern field of war again resumes prominence with the resumption of the offensive by the Russians in Bessarabia. There had been a cessation of activity in that part of the fighting front for several days. Vienna now reports, however, that the Austrian lines have been subjected again to determined attacks, but that the Russian attempts to break through were repulsed, although the attacking forces in great numbers advanced five times to the assault, the Austrian artillery proving deadly in stopping the Russian offensive.

London advices indicate a belief among American commercial interests there that Great Britain will shortly announce an actual blockade of Germany, superseding the trade restrictions imposed by the orders in council.

The front in France and Belgium has been the scene of no important fighting recently. North of Saloniki where the Anglo-French forces are preparing themselves against an expected attack by the Teutonic allies there has been further blowing up of railroad bridges as a defensive measure.

Germany, in replying to Great Britain in the Baralong case, reiterates the charges made against the British auxiliary cruiser's officers, accused in affidavits of Americans on the steamer Nicosian of having refused quarter to members of a German submarine's crew. The German government declares unacceptable the British offer to submit the Baralong case to a tribunal comprised of American naval officers if Germany would submit three specified cases of alleged outrages committed by Germans on the high seas to the same court, Germany declaring that in none of the cases mentioned were German officers trying to destroy helpless persons. In view of the British declination to bring the accused officer of the Baralong to trial, Germany, the official note announces, will take matters into her own hands and adopt measures of reprisal corresponding with the provocation.

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(Via Sayville.)—The Russian offensive has been renewed on the Bessarabian front and five important attacks have been repulsed by the Austro-Hungarian troops, according to

HEAVY SNOW STORM FOLLOWS COLD WAVE

Following in the wake of the extremely cold weather of the past two days, a heavy snow storm visited Fort Wayne Saturday morning which, according to Forecaster P. McDonough, will continue over Sunday. The storm is sweeping in a northeasterly direction over the country, originating somewhere in the southwest. Warmer weather is also promised for tonight and Sunday. There is no extremely cold weather in sight such as prevailed Thursday and Friday.

BARALONG CASE PROVOKES WRATH

Germany Spurns British Proposal for American Naval Inquiry.

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(Via Sayville.)—In its reply to the British government in the Baralong case, the text of which was made public here today, Germany takes the ground that Great Britain no longer desires to observe the requirements of international law in regard to German submarines and breaks off negotiations on this subject.

In addition to announcing decision to take measures of reprisal, as made known yesterday, the German government rejects Great Britain's proposal for examination by a neutral board of the Baralong incident and also of three cases in which it is charged Germany violated international law in submarine operations. The note was delivered to Great Britain through the American embassy.

Text of the Reply.

The text of the German reply in the Baralong case is as follows:

and Kenneth Metter, twelve, were a hundred feet from shore before they realized it. Then they struck a soft spot, there was a cracking of the ice, and a scream, and a splash. The Baker boy's body was not recovered for fully an hour, the Metter lad ran safely from the place, and the little Paulson boy, knocked half unconscious by the fall, struggled from the water and crawled up the bank.

The boys had been playing about the flooded district south of the river channel and almost in the shadow of the Walton avenue bridge, and as night fell they began to dare each other to go out on the thin edges of the ice. "Bannering" they called it, and they had been out there nearly twenty minutes before the cracking ice told them of their danger.

PACIFIC COAST YET IN GRIP OF A STORM

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—California and the Pacific northwest continue today in the grip of storms and exceptional cold. In California, Oregon and Washington, heavy falls of snow in the mountain passes retard continental railroad traffic and ice in the Columbia river is interfering with navigation.

A 50 mile gale is sweeping the coast north of Puget Sound and heavy seas have prevented salvers from reaching the Japanese freighter Kenken Maru III, aground on Saturna island in the gulf of Georgia. The vessel which is loaded with 5,000 tons of cotton and railroa supplies for the Russian government, probably will be a total loss.

INDIANA ALUMNI'S BANQUET AT ANTHONY

Graduates and students of Indiana university will gather at 8 o'clock Saturday evening where the annual banquet of the Alumni association will be given. People of Fort Wayne, Allen county and adjacent counties will be in attendance and it is expected by officials in charge that the attendance will be the largest of any other year.

Dr. W. L. Bryan, president of the university at Bloomington, will be present to deliver the main address of the evening. Other speakers of interest will be present. Prof. Louis C. Ward, of the high school, and Dr. Noah Zehr are the two members on the program committee. Attorney David Rose is president of the association.

THREE POLITICAL MEETINGS ARE HELD

Democratic Committeemen Meet to Hear Primary Law Discussed.

Three important political meetings were held in Fort Wayne Saturday afternoon. At the call of District Chairman Edward G. Hoffman a meeting of the democratic precinct committeemen was held at 2 o'clock, in the circuit court room No. 2, the purpose being to discuss the new primary law and to make arrangements for the primary election, to be held March 7. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather practically all of the committeemen were in attendance and much interest was manifested.

While the democratic committeemen were in session a large number of republican workers met at the call of County Chairman Stultz in the hall above the Lyric theater. The purpose of the meeting was to talk over organization matters.

At 3 o'clock a meeting of the Traveling Men's Republican club recently organized was held in the Anthony hotel.

Arrangements were completed Saturday for a reception next Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 7:40 o'clock at the Anthony hotel in honor of Congressman John A. M. Adair, candidate for the democratic gubernatorial nomination. Following the reception he will speak at 8 o'clock in the assembly room of the court house. A series of meetings have been arranged for Congressman Adair throughout the district.

BERLIN MAKES A HOT RETORT

the German memorandum in the Baralong case by expressing doubts on the one hand of the correctness of the facts communicated by the German government, and by making an accusation, on the other hand, against German military and naval forces of having deliberately committed countless crimes against international law and humanity which had been unpunished, and compared with which the alleged offense of the captain and crew of the Baralong fades into insignificance. The British government has contented itself with mentioning without any evidence three incidents in connection with naval warfare in which German officers are alleged to have committed atrocities in violation of international law.

Germany Resents Accusations.

"The British government proposes an investigation of these cases by a court composed of American naval officers, and under this condition is ready to submit the Baralong case to the same court."

"The German government protests most sharply against the unprecedented and unprovoked accusations of the British government in regard to the German army and navy and the imputation that the German authorities have not dealt with any such crimes as have come to their attention. The German army and navy in this war observe the principles of international law and humanity and the higher authorities insist that in the event offenses are committed they shall be investigated most closely and punished sternly.

"The three cases mentioned by the British government were investigated thoroughly at the time by competent German authorities.

The Three Cases.

"First, in the case of the sinking of the Arabic by a German submarine, the investigation showed that the submarine, commander was forced from circumstances to draw the conclusion that the steamer was attempting to ram his craft. He therefore believed himself to be acting in justifiable self-defense when he attacked the ship.

"The second case mentioned—the attack of a German destroyer upon a British submarine—occurred in this manner: A fight developed in those waters between two warships, in which the submarine defended itself by gun fire. The British government can have little ground for advancing the charge that Danish neutrality was violated by the German attack, in view of the fact that British naval forces in a series of cases attacked German ships in neutral waters.

"Finally in the case of the destruction of the British steamer Ruel, the German submarine merely applied measures of reprisal announced by Germany in February, 1915. These measures are in harmony with international law because England is endeavoring by illegal means to tie up the legitimate maritime commerce between Germany and neutral countries, to cut off Germany from all natural imports and thereby starve the German people. Appropriate reprisals are permissable against measures in violation of international law.

"In all three cases the German naval forces intended only to destroy hostile ships, and in no way to slay helpless persons who were attempting to save their lives. The assertions to the contrary of the British government must be repudiated with all decisiveness as untrue."

American Inquiry Rejected.

"The German government is of the opinion that it must reject as inacceptable the British approval to submit these three cases, together with the Baralong case, to investigation by a court of American naval officers. It takes the standpoint that charges against members of the German forces must be investigated by its own competent authorities, and that the persons accused be given every surety of an unprejudiced verdict, with just punishment where necessary. In the Baralong case it has advanced to the British government no request other than this, not doubting for a moment that a court martial composed of British naval officers would inflict suitable punishment for the cowardly and perfidious murder. This request was the more justifiable because of the fact that the guilt of the commander and crew of the Baralong was established practically beyond doubt by affidavits made by Americans who are neutral witnesses, and submitted to the British government.

"The manner in which the British government has answered the German memorandum does not correspond in form and contents with the gravity of the situation and makes it impossible for the German government to negotiate further with the British government in regard to this matter. The German government, therefore, takes the ground as the final result of the negotiations that the British government, under empty pretexts, has not fulfilled the justifiable demands of the case and thereby has made itself responsible for the crime of defying international law and humanity, showing that it desires no longer to observe, in respect to German submarines one of the first rules of war—namely to spare enemies incapacitated for further action—in order to prevent them from conducting warfare at sea in accordance with established international laws.

"Inasmuch as the British government has declined to make amends for this outrageous incident, the German government feels itself compelled to take into its own hands punishment for this unatoned crime, and to adopt measures of reprisal corresponding with the provocation."

railroad and eight years later was appointed foreman of the paint shop. Several years before his retirement he was made master car painter. He was placed on the pension roll November 1, 1906.

He was a member of Plymouth Congregational church and also of Wayne lodge. F. & A. M., and of Fort Wayne lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F. He held office in the latter organization for thirty consecutive years. Mr. Rodabaugh was also a member of the volunteer fire department for sixteen years and eight months.

He was married in 1857 to Elizabeth J. Snyder, who survives him, as do a daughter, Mrs. Rose Jones, of Colorado Springs; a brother, Adam Rodabaugh, and a sister, Mrs. Jane McFerran, both of Fort Wayne.

Incident of His Retirement.

Mr. Rodabaugh was placed on the "honor roll," as the officials and the employes of the company call retiring to the pension system, November 1, 1906, shortly after his seventy-first birth anniversary. His retirement from active service was the occasion for a big demonstration by the officials, foremen and shopmen, who gathered at his home and presented him with a gold-headed cane and a magnificent electric lamp, which he ever afterwards considered among the most valued of his possessions. The gifts and the gathering were a surprise to Mr. Rodabaugh, but Mrs. Rodabaugh had been advised in advance and was prepared to furnish refreshments and provide other features of amusement for the guests, who filled the ground floor rooms and a part of the upper story of the spacious house. A few days previous the employes of the paint department presented Mr. Rodabaugh with a magnificent buggy. These incidents illustrated the warm sentiment entertained by his associates for Mr. Rodabaugh.

COUNTY AGENT WILL USE LOCAL PICTURES

Eighty of the two hundred lantern slides of pictures taken in Allen county to be used by him in his lectures were received Friday by Agricultural Agent Clarence Henry, of Allen county. The slides will be used at farmers' meetings, institutes and similar gatherings. In addition to the local pictures forty-six have been selected out of a list of 1,800 at Purdue university.

The pictures take up dairying, silos and silage, alfalfa, stock feeding, special hog work, special horse work, demonstration work, soils and other agricultural subjects.

Mrs. William Salzer Puts Her Sad Case Up to the Courts.

Anna Salzer has begun action in the circuit court against William Salzer for divorce, and states that since their marriage in 1907 he has repeatedly deserted her and that they are not now living together. It is related that once the defendant ran away from home and was arrested in Clinton, Iowa, and brought back to Fort Wayne, where he was prosecuted for neglecting his twin children, now 4½ years old. Besides this the wife says he treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner, cursing her and calling her names too vile to set out in her complaint. She asks the custody of the twins and an allowance for their support. Stephen A. Callahan is her attorney.

Notes of the Courts.

Frank V. Walters has brought suit in the superior court against George and Esther B. Crance to collect $200 on a note and foreclose a mortgage. Howard Hanthorn is attorney for the plaintiff.

Ernest C. Haines sues Louis L. Gerardot in the superior court to collect $105 on a note. McAdams & Hartzell are the plantiff's attorneys.

Jacob Flaugh has begun suit in the circuit court against Henry Flaugh for partition of real estate. McAdams & Hartzell appear for the plaintiff.

In the suit of George W. Coleman vs. Frank C. Hubler, an action for $5,000 damages for slander, a notary public has filed a motion in the circuit court to require the plaintiff to answer certain questions in examination.

In the suit of Cora A. Ely vs. Lyman D. Burnett, to recover $1,500, the plaintiff says is due her for managing certain business of the defendant and paying his taxes, the defendant has filed in the superior court a motion to require that the complaint be made more specific.

The defendants in the divorce suits of Clara Long vs. Louis Long and Nora Cheviron vs. Theodore Cheviron have been cited to appear in the superior court, January 20, to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt in having failed to obey the court's orders as to payments.

The suit of the state ex-rel, Julius Zell vs. Alfred Horstman and the Equitable Surety company for $5,000 damages, has been sent from the superior court to Huntington county for trial on change of venue.

The suit of Earl Schane vs. George A. Miller, et al., has been set for trial before a jury in the superior court January 18.

In the superior court the suit of R. L. Polk & company vs. August Klein has been settled and dismissed.

The superior court has rendered a finding for the plaintiff in the suit of Essie Alice Thorne Stone vs. Ed C. Gibbony to enforce collection of a note.

The case against George Beach for embezzlement has been dismissed from the circuit court.

The Fort Wayne Outfitters' company has filed suit in the superior court against Eve May and Frank Ashbauch for the collection of $50 and replevin of property and a similar suit against Ella D. Hicks. Somers & Kennerk appear for the plaintiff.

The circuit court has set January 19 for the hearing of the case against Henry A. Wiebke, former proprietor of the Hof Brau for violations of the liquor law.

MRS. PANKHURST IS HELD UP ONCE MORE

Detained at Ellis Island Because She Had Been in Prison.

New York, Jan. 15.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British suffrage leader, was held at Ellis island immigration station today when she arrived here on the steamer St. Paul. Federal authorities said Mrs. Pankhurst was detained because she had served a sentence in a British prison. She was similarly detailed when she arrived here more than two years ago, but was quickly released and allowed to enter this country.

Mrs. Pankhurst said her present trip unlike the visit she made to this country in the fall of 1913, is in no way connected with "votes for women," but that she is here in connection with the Serbian relief work in which she has been interested for some time. The suffrage leader intimated that she is here to make some revelations regarding the present situation in the Balkans.

The Austrian official statement follows: "On the Bessarabian front the Russians have again attempted to break through near Toporoutz and east of Rarincze. Five great attacks failed. The well-directed Austro-Hungarian artillery fire contributed eminently to the repulse of the Russians. Since the beginning of the battle in east Galicia and Bessarabia the Austro-Hungarian forces of Gens. Pflanzer, Baltin and Bothmer have taken 5,100 Russians, including thirty officers. Austro-Hungarian patrols routed Russian field guards near Karpilovka."

MAYOR HOSEY TALKS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Tells South Bend People What Fort Wayne City Plant Has Done.

Talking to a mass meeting of South Bend citizens, where a maximum rate of 10 cents is paid for electric current, Mayor William J. Hosey on Friday night showed what municipal ownership had done for Fort Wayne, not only in the matter of public lighting but in bringing down the maximum rate to 7 cents, with the possibility of another reduction in sight. The mayor found South Bend discussing a movement for municipal ownership of electric light, and interested in the project, he told them how, with an original outlay of $349,000, raised by taxation this city had acquired a modern and thoroughly equipped plant now worth $700,000, half of the cost being met out of the revenues of the city's business in selling current. The mayor pointed out that vastly more than the money raised by taxation for the construction of the plant had been saved to the people by reason of the reduction of rates the municipal plant had brought about. The city council of South Bend has a special committee at work investigating municipal ownership, though the city has made a ten-year contract with the lighting corporation there, while the old contract has not yet expired.

EXPECT TO MAKE A CONTRACT.

Park Board Receives Bids Monday for Paving Rudisill Boulevard.

From the inquiries that have been made by contractors the park board expects that eight or ten bids will be submitted Monday afternoon for the paving of Rudisill boulevard from Piqua avenue to Broadway. Three Fort Wayne contractors are expected to submit proposals, while the others will come from out of town construction companies. The pavement is to be of asphalt macadam and the specifications are "open," so that all brands of asphalt may be proposed. It is understood that there will be no further legal obstacles raised to the paving of the street. The board expects to be able to award a contract to some one of Monday's bidders.

CITY ASPHALT PLANT REPORT.

The annual report of William C. Droege, superintendent of the city asphalt repair plant shows that during the year just closed the city kept its asphalt streets in repair at a cost of 74 cents a square yard, whereas it formerly cost under the contract system about $1.35 a square yard. For private work performed by the plant during the year the sum of $1,306.35 was received.

PREPARING SEWER PLANS.

Plans for the big sewer system that is to give a large territory in the far east end of the city much needed drainage are now under way and will be reported to the board of works at an early day.

RETAINING WALL COMPLETED.

The retaining wall constructed along the south side of the Wabash track elevation from Pine street to Taylor street to protect the abutting private property has been completed by the Carmichael-Cryder Engineering company. The earth from the excavation was used to make the fill for approaches to the Harrison street bridge and was hauled there over three different steam railroads.

LAUNCHES STILL AT THE WORK OF RESCUE

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 15.—Launches are still busy in the lower Ohio river rescuing people who have waited until the last minute to leave their homes in the bottoms. Reports reaching here today indicated that between 75 and 100 families have been taken to places of safety. Boats are also in demand to move corn.

The weather bureau today announced that the river will come to a standstill here Monday or early Tuesday with a crest short of 44 feet here. While portions of outlying residence sections will be partly inundated at this stage, the city proper and railroad communications will not be affected.

SEVERAL LODGES INSTALL OFFICERS

Several Fort Wayne lodges initiated recently elected officers Friday evening as follows: Sion S. Bass post, No. 40, G. A. R., and Woman's Relief corps, joint installation; Division No. 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians; S. W. Stirk circle, Ladies of the G. A. R.; Wayne circle, No. 45, Ladies of the G. A. R., and Henry W. Lawton camp, No. 35, United Spanish War veterans.

Under the auspices of the Allen county board of the A. O. H., arrangements are completed for the Hibernian ball to be held Tuesday evening, January 25, at the Elks' auditorium. Carl Roembke's orchestra will furnish a special musical program. The auditorium will be decorated in green and gold.

DR. GEISEL WILL BE HERE NEXT WEEK

Word has been received by Professor F. W. Miles that Dr. Carolyn C. Geisel, of Battle Creek, Mich., who was to have delivered a series of lectures here this week under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher clubs, is very much improved from her attack of typhoid pneumonia, and she will be able to fill her engagement here next week.

The lectures will be held on the corresponding days of next week and the programs for each will be carried out as was planned for this week.

The telegram received by Prof. Miles follows: "Am better. Shall I come January 19, 20 and 21? Wire here immediately." The message was sent from Tekonsha, Mich.

OLD PURDUE HAZING CASE SET FOR TRIAL

Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 15.—The Purdue university hazing case in which Miss Mabel Rogers, of Shoals, alleges that her nervous system was injured when she was hazed by seven young women at Purdue in January, 1914, has been set for trial February 18 in the Montgomery circuit court. Miss Rogers asks $1,000 damages from each of the defendants. One of the defendants, Miss Mary Clark, of Clark's Hill, died last year. The other defendants are Ruth Cowan, of Chicago; Mary Sheridan, of Attica; Agnes Phillips, of Monroeville; Mary Blue, of Star City, and Helen Lee, of Oxford. The case came here from Lafayette.

OIL SUPPLY MEN ENTERTAINED.

The monthly meeting of the employes of the Fort Wayne Oil and Supply company took the form of a banquet at the Anthony last night, all of the thirty-eight persons connected with the company being present. E. W. Puckett was the toastmaster and many of the employes responded to toasts. For two or three years the employes of the company have held meetings to discuss business affairs and at the meeting a year ago it was decided that the January gathering of each year should be a social affair, at which business is entirely forgotten and only pleasure and goodfellowship is allowed to prevail.

WOMAN'S DEATH HERE LEADS TO AN ARREST

Muncie, Ind., Jan. 15.—Ora Switzer, of Muncie, was arrested here last night on request of the Celina, Ohio, authorities, who believe he knows something of the murder of David Beery, who was found dead in a traction waiting house near there on April 4, 1912. Detectives have been working on the case off and on for four years and their first clew came recently when Mrs. Frank Merica died at Fort Wayne. Her daughter, Alma Switzer, is a former wife of Ora Switzer and recently she and her sister were arrested at Celina and held on a charge of disorderly conduct. It is believed that the former wife made a confession or statement that led the Celina authorities to cause Switzer's arrest. He has been living in Muncie for three years. Celina officials will take Switzer back to Celina and he will be questioned closely regarding the affair.

Switzer stated that he thought the whole affair to be a plan of his father-in-law and wife and denied any connection with the crime.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK CROSS, FEVERISH

When constipated or bilious give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

ANDREWS HAS BIG REVIVAL

Andrews, Ind., Jan. 15.—Success has been assured for the revival meeting in the Andrews M. E. church by the increasing interest during the second week of services. Evangelist O. L. Cotteral and the music director, Chester F. Harris, will continue the meetings probably four weeks. Thirty conversions and decisions have resulted from the few invitations issued by the evangelist. As the sermons are continued invitations probably will be more frequent. Mr. Cotteral is well known to Huntington county people, having conducted the big tabernacle meetings for the Markle churches. Besides the regular services shop meetings are held. Wednesday the evangelist talked to the workmen in the Wasmuth-Endicott factory. Next Tuesday evening the members of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges, and probably employes of the cabinet factory, will march to the church in a body, the Andrews band leading.

NEVER DIVORCED; NOW BIGAMIST

Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 15.—A letter of much interest was received at the county clerk's office, which brought out the fact that Frank Ryan, former saloonist here, now in Canada, is a bigamist. Golden C. Ryan, his second wife, sent the letter here in order to learn what steps she would have to take to free herself of Ryan. Following the receipt of the letter, the records at the clerk's office here were gone over and it was learned that Ryan was never divorced from his first wife, Ida Ryan. The records show that Frank Ryan was granted a divorce, but that the decree was later withdrawn when his wife was able to show that fraud had been practiced in obtaining it. The first wife then sued him twice for divorce, but never obtained a decree. Nevertheless, Ryan married again. His second wife is now a resident of Tampa, Fla.

COLUMBIA CITY WOMAN DIES.

Columbia City, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Jason Sigler passed away suddenly at her home on the south side after having been bothered with heart trouble for many years. On Thursday evening she assisted in the preparation of the evening meal and ate a hearty supper. She retired shortly after supper as she was tired and restless. Some time after retiring she notified members of the family that she was feeling badly and they offered her all the relief within their power, and also sent for Dr. C. L. Souder; however, the patient died before he arrived. Miss Adaline Dennis was born near Roanoke, Ind., December 27, 1862, and at the time of her death was 54 years of age. Mrs. Harry Crabbs and Mrs. Ben Steward, of Fort Wayne, are sisters of the deceased.

LODGE MERGER IN HIGH COURT

Van Wert, Ohio, Jan. 15.—The suit to annul the merger of the Home Guards of America and the American Insurance Union has been taken to the court of appeals both on appeal and error. The first petition in the suit was filed December 13, 1915, and following this the defendants filed a demurrer claiming that the court in which the case was filed had no jurisdiction in the matter and the plaintiff had no right to bring the suit. It was contended that the suit should be brought by the attorney general of the state of Ohio. The demurrer was heard by Judge Bailey of Ottawa, and was sustained.

AGED WOMAN ENDS LIFE.

Montpelier, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Martha Davis, aged 55, living near Pleasantdale, southeast of this city, ended her life by taking carbolic acid. She took the acid about 7 o'clock and died an hour afterwards. Drs. Buckles and DeWees were called, but she was dead before they arrived. She is the wif of Enoch Davis, but they have not been living together. She leaves two sons, Jesse and Claud, who reside with their mother and three daughters, all married.

The reason given for her committing this rash act, was that she has been in ill health for some time, and was going blind.

NEWLYWEDS HAVE FIRE LOSS.

Bluffton, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Homer Tinkel, newlyweds of Liberty Center, were losers of about $75 from a fire at their home Friday when the heating stove fell over on the floor, destroying the rug and demolishing the stove. Mr. Tinkel was lifting the stove off of rollers to put it on a zinc base and the base of the stove broke, letting the stove fall over on the floor. The hot coals were scattered ovr the floor and it was only the quick work of Mr. and Mrs. Tinkel that saved their home from destruction. Mrs. Tinkel was formerly Miss Gladys Mosure, of this city.

OUCH! LUMBAGO! RUB PAINS FROM SORE, LAME BACK

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now listen! That's lumbago, sciatica or maybe from a strain, and you'll get relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on your back and out comes the pain. It is harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and after using it just once, you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years.—Advertisement.

DELINQUENT LIST SMALL.

Columbia City, Ind., Jan. 15.—Whitley county's delinquent tax list this year is the smallest since the memory of man runneth to the contrary in the early organization of the county. This might be referred to as another evidence of the prosperity of the people in general. The list for 1915 shows 38 items, reduced to 37 descriptions. The sale of the property involved will occur at the court house door Monday, February 14th, and will be in charge of County Treasurer Oliver E. Long. The total delinquency amounts to $1,751.18, and one-half of the amount is on ditch assessments.

WOODBURN TO HAVE REVIVAL

Woodburn, Ind., Jan. 15.—What is proving to be one of the biggest meetings held in Woodburn for many a day is going on at the Missionary church, conducted by Rev. J. Gregory Mantle, D. D., of Louisville, Ky. Dr. Mantle is a man of wide experience, having preached the gospel in almost every land under the sun during the last forty years. His manner of expounding scripture is unique, his messages exalt the Word, making impressions upon the hearers that are "simply unforgettable." One of the strong features of the meetings is the excellent singing by Prof. Gerber and the choir.

FALLS FROM CHAIR; BREAKS ARM.

Warsaw, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Catherine Watson, an aged resident of Etna Green, is suffering from a broken arm as the result of a fall. Mrs. Watson, who is an invalid, resides with her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Decker, and was injured when she fell from her chair. She is the widow of the late Jas. Watson, who was a civil war veteran.

TO SELL MONTPELIER POOLROOM

Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 15.—The property of John A. Van Gordon, Montpelier man, who disappeared from his home several months ago, and has not been seen since, has been ordered sold in circuit court, in order to meet judgments of creditors. A. G. Emshwiller was appointed receiver to look after the rents and profits of the real estate during the year of redemption allowed by law. It is believed that there is sufficient property to pay all debts.

MONTPELIER LODGES INSTALL

Montpelier, Ind., Jan. 15.—The Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Neighbors, Wednesday evening, held their joint installation services. There was over a hundred present. Mrs. Sophia Diefenbaugh, of Fort Wayne, acted as installing officer for the Neighbors, while F. M. McDonnell installed the Woodmen officers.

TO PROMOTE VAN WERT'S HEALTH

Van Wert, Ohio, Jan. 15.—Recommending a better sewerage system and a visiting nurse for Van Wert, Health Officer Church has made his annual report. While the number of cases of contagious diseases was greater last year than in 1914, most of the cases were whooping cough and measles. In 1914 there were nine cases of smallpox, while in 1915 none were reported.

Riches and Fame First, Then She'll Get Married

Mae Marsh, Young, Beautiful, Beloved of Film Fandom, Says She'll Wait Till She's Thirty, Anyway, Before She Acquires a Husband.

HOW do you like this idea for arranging your life: Get all your work done in your youth; grab fame firmly and hold on to it till you are middle aged, then marry and rear a family, releasing fame from your grasp and finding joy in a quiet, secluded country home?

Not so bad, you say, for some bookish individual who isn't attractive anyhow and hasn't a chance at the sweets of life? But utterly preposterous for anybody the gods have favored with beauty and talents, vivacity and charm.

Very well. Now I give you three guesses as to who has laid out this life program for herself. No, it's not a female professor of mathematics; not a writer on "The Parallelism Between Morphology and Characterology;" not even a suffragette; but a very lovely young person by the name of Mae Marsh, idol of 2,000,000 screen fans—the girl who figures so thrillingly in "The Birth of a Nation," running for her life through the landscape and plunging off the cliff to escape her pursuer!

Too Busy For Love Affairs.

Yes, sir. Little Mae Marsh, the blue eyed, the golden haired, the adored, the flattered, the pursued. The girl whom David Griffith calls the Bernhardt of the movies because she puts more electrical temperament into ten feet of film than lots of 'em do in ten thousand. The girl who has no "up stage" manner, no airs, no egotism, no fur topped boots, no lip rouge.

If that time old question of personality and the stage is still up for discussion those of the opposing side are lucky not to see Miss Marsh if they are bent on keeping up their end of the argument, for at the first glance and after a minute's conversation any one must recognize that this girl from California is the replica of the loving, lovable, earnest, playful little sister immortalized in Mr. Griffith's great civil war play. In the first place, she is scarcely older than that, even now, when she is within hailing distance of her twenties.

There is the same dignity that just escapes being primness and that same spontaneity and vivacity, that same alternating repression and expression of emotion that make the girl of the screen so adorable and that go so far in the making of one of the most splendidly developed climaxes that have characterized any play on stage or screen in a long, long time.

There is apparently no pretense about Miss Marsh. Quiet and unassuming, she nevertheless is fully appreciative of the advantages that have been hers without depreciating the qualities in herself that have impelled her to make the most of those advantages. And when one has that sense so well developed and the ability she so evidently has to weigh possibilities and limitations impartially, even though they be her own, it is an invaluable asset.

"Most people think love and marriage belong exclusively to youth," says she. "Now I know better. Youth is the time to work. You can't work when your mind is on love affairs.

"Of course for some women marriage is a career. Then it's all right to go into it young and make a success of it just as a man makes a success of his business or an actor goes after fame in his profession.

"But for me—NOT! I've watched my sisters in their love affairs and marriages, and, believe me, it fills their lives. There isn't room for any other career.

"Why isn't it better to put all your energy when you're young into work that will leave you free at thirty-five to take up something entirely different and use a whole new set of talents and interests? Won't I be a better wife and mother at thirty or thirty-five than I would be at twenty?

Expects Wisdom Later.

"In order to be successful in any money earning career you must have energy, youth, sparkle. You don't need wisdom especially. But you do need it to be a good wife and mother. Don't you see I'm right?"

Miss Marsh could make you see anything, she's that earnest and full of what Jimnie would call "punch."

It is to that quality she owes her quick rise to stardom from the humble position of "extra girl" out on the coast. However little she had to do, she managed to put "pep" into it.

Her motto seems to have been, "Whatever you do do it with vim, no matter if you do have to lie down with the smelling salts under your nose and a wet towel on your head afterward."

"All my life I've realized that in order to put things over you've got to do them with spirit," goes on the little film lady. "I used to spank my dolls energetically. I used to do everything 'as hard as I could.' When I left school to be an 'extra girl' in Mr. Griffith's company five years ago how my classmates sneered!

She'll Be Gay at Sixty.

"Now those very same girls, many of them married and the mothers of children, shower me with notes of admiration, inviting me to all sorts of social functions. But if there's anything on this earth I can't bear it is society doings.

"Pink teas, dog shows, tango parties and receptions are my idea of nothing to do. Maybe when I'm sixty I'll devote myself to dress, dances and dinner parties. But for now give me sensible togs, lots of work and a typewriter to compose plays on and I ask nothing more.

"I am in my right sphere," she says, "and so, naturally, I am happy. I never have gone through the shifting process of so many girls who are set to earn their own living, going from one kind of occupation to another, because, you see, I knew exactly what I wanted to do and I made for it, although"—laughing—"goodness knows it took some courage, or, rather, it would have taken courage, had I been of a wavering disposition."

She is still frail looking and still slender, but graceful as a fawn and with some of that pretty creature's characteristics—the quick intelligence, quick movements, alertness, and when she is off guard, when she forgets she is being interviewed, when she is not constantly reminded by the whispers and stares of passersby that she is a heroine of the films, she is entirely natural. Apropos of that, she says it is on the screen that she is really her most natural self and that it is in conventional life she finds herself acting.

"I suppose," she says, "that sort of subconsciously I have the idea that I must show a difference in my manner, but I have done so much of the picture work and so thrown myself heart and soul into it that it is really difficult for me to separate myself from it."

"But"—with the little quizzical look that suggests laughter and tears and other things at the same time—"I suppose it's that way with every one who makes any sort of success out of what he undertakes, though my work is really nothing more than play to me, because I am so enthusiastic about it. I shall be perfectly content to be a moving picture actress all my days; that is"—hastily—"provided I can continue to live in California.

"I wrote Mr. Griffith that Rockefeller has nothing on me."

Mae Marsh sent a gay little glance across the top of a glass of raspberry parfait.

"Then it pays to be a motion picture actress?"

"It pays so well that the first week I worked at it I wouldn't speak to any of the girls I had gone to school with."

"What was the sum that made a plutocrat of you?"

"Three dollars a day. I was sixteen. I had gone into the studio where my older sister was posing, and when she wasn't looking I applied for a job. They told me to come back and see Mr. Griffith. I did, and got a job. So you see it isn't true that Mr. Griffith saw me playing about the studio and saw possibilities of an actress in me. I saw him working at the studio and saw my future possibilities in him."

Then she ceased jesting and became a serious young person, as she is—well, half the time. That she can be tremendously serious every one who has seen the little Southern girl in "The Birth of a Nation" knows. Mae Marsh looked as pensive as any pictured Madonna when she spoke of that tragic picture.

"I did the three scenes—my flight, my fall on the rocks and my death scene at home—in one afternoon," she said. "What an afternoon's work that was! I went home and went straight to bed without dinner. I couldn't eat. And I stayed in bed right round the clock, twelve hours, to catch up in the race with my strength. Walter Long, the young man who plays the villain, is a good friend of mine and a dear, nice chap, but when I looked over my shoulder and saw him, his face blackened, rushing toward me I looked down the big rock and was really ready to jump from fright."

"But about you and Mr. Rockefeller?" I urged.

The California girl who has become so great a favorite in the pictures and who, D. W. Griffith predicts, will become a still greater one, sat primly in her chair and tried to look pompous. It was an effort that failed. Her face broke into an eddy of smiles and dimples.

"I'm on a vacation," she said proudly. "I was allowed to come away for a month, on salary, too, just as though I were working. Having the salary while not working, I spent it. I had automobiles and flowers and went about shopping and sightseeing. We stayed at Brown's Palace, Denver. Mr. John D. Rockefeller was staying there. My automobile drew up behind his at the curb. It was as fine as his. I ate in the same dining room as he. One day I sat at the table next to his."

She drew her face into solemn lines to make me believe she was profoundly impressed by her proximity to the multimillionaire of the mining troubles. But she was not in the least impressed. If ever a girl belonged to the democracy of those who do it is Mae Marsh. But she overflowed with the spirits of twenty, and her vacation was an event of huge importance to her, as little events are when we are not big in years.

"Suppose you tell me something about Mae Marsh for those who want to know more about her?"

"I began—that is, I was born in Madrid, New Mexico. My father was auditor of the Santa Fe Railroad and we lived in a lot of places while I was little. My earliest recollection is of sitting on the cabin floor in a Mexican cabin and eating tortillas. Mother says I spoke Mexican beautifully, only no one at home could understand me.

"I have a very vivid recollection of the San Francisco earthquake. I was at school at the Sacred Heart Convent. Something heavy came crashing down upon me. I cried: 'Oh, don't! Don't, sister! I won't do it again.' I thought one of the sisters was spanking me. We were taken into the yard, and after an hour and a half mother came for us. She had walked across San Francisco to get us. We lived in a tent. I thought that was lots of fun. Mother paid $25 the first day for food. The next we didn't have anything to eat. We lived out of doors for three days in Golden Gate Park. I saw a man shot for stealing a drink of water.

"Then we moved to Los Angeles. My sister went into moving pictures, and I followed her. That was four years ago, when I was sixteen. The first work that won recognition for me was Applepie Mary in 'Home, Sweet Home.' I am the mother now in 'The Mother and the Law,' or 'Tolerance.' It is not quite certain what it will be called. I am a mother at the same age I am now, twenty. It is being taken over again after we worked on it a year. Mr. Griffith wasn't satisfied with it. He is a most wonderful man, a genius. We players call him father. He calls us children."

The conversation shifted to faith, finally to faith in prayer.

"When I have prayed for anything I have always gotten it"—again Mae Marsh was seriousness itself—"provided I was good."

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Proverb 20:1-14.

1 Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

2 The fear of a king is as the roaring of a lion: whoso provoketh him to anger sinneth against his own soul.

3 It is an honour for a man to cease from strife: but every fool will be meddling.

4 The sluggard will not plow by reason of the cold; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.

5 Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out.

6 Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness: but a faithful man who can find?

7 The just man walketh in his integrity: his children are blessed after him.

8 A king that sitteth in the throne of judgment scattereth away all evil with his eyes.

9 Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?

10 Divers weights, and divers measures, both of them are alike abomination to the Lord.

11 Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

12 The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them.

13 Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty; open thine eyes, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

14 It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.

Autos on the Rural Routes

It is interesting to note that with the use of the automoile on the rural mail routes hardly more than in its trial stage, Congressman Wood, of Lafayette, has introduced a bill in congress to abolish the automobile from the mail routes and return to the horse-drawn vehicles exclusively. Mr. Wood's home county, Tippecanoe, was the first in Indiana to be chosen as a test of the automobile as a mail-carrying vehicle on the rural routes, and he asserts that it has been proven a failure. Patrons are said to be deluging the congressman with complaints that it is not satisfactory; that many points which formerly received mail as early as 10 o'clock in the morning are now forced to wait until late afternoon for the delivery; that many of them are forced to walk long distances to reach the mail box; that the change has resulted in wholesale removal of former carriers and that things are out of joint generally.

In the absence of information to the contrary, it is fair to assume that at least some of the complaints submitted to the congressman by indignant patrons of the rural routes are well-founded. The adoption of the automobile was upon the presumption that routes could be lengthened, more people served, more expeditious delivery assured, and that the per capita expense for the mail service would be reduced. Necessarily it means a loss of job for some carriers when their routes were absorbed by the auto-trip schedules, and therein may be the source of some of the complaint which has been assailing the ears of the new member from Lafayette. So far as information at hand discloses, there is not complaint that the service has been wrecked in any other quarter by the coming of the automobile, though the service has been similarly ordered in Marion, Vigo, Wayne, Wabash, Randolph and other Indiana counties.

Passing the fact that the question of the motorization of the rural mail routes is in the hands of the postoffice department and not of congress, that the latter might legislate itself blue in the face without doing more than relieving its mind by expressing an opinion, we do not believe the test has as yet been thorough enough to determine either that the automobile as a rural route carrier is a success or that it is the monumental failure which Tippecanoe county has branded it. The plan is worth a much more thorough trial than has yet been given it before it is cast aside.

There is every indication that the forthcoming Fort Wayne poultry and pet stock show will be not only the largest but in many other respects the finest exhibition of its kind that has ever been held here. For many years Fort Wayne has been recognized as a prominent poultry-raising center. Year by year the business is attracting new recruits and there has been a sincere effort to improve the grade of the poultry yard product. Now, too, the exposition is attracting many of the crack poultry-raisers from points at great distance, and they will place on display many of the prize birds that have reaped a rich harvest of ribbons and cups at big shows elsewhere. The Fort Wayne show will be well worth seeing.

Doubtless unwilling to accept the dictum that virtue alone is its own reward, and something more substantial in the way of preferment is also highly desirable, Judge John C. Richter, who was a bull moose leader in the Thirteenth district four years ago, is said to be about to announce his candidacy for jurge of the Laporte circuit court on the republican ticket. One excellent way in which to measure the sincerity of the republican welcome extended to returning moosers will be to note whether or not they permit them to grab off any of the nominations for office in any instance where there is the ghost of a chance for election.

Now the emperor of Russia has given the solemn assurance that the war will not end until the enemies of his country are beaten. Similar utterances have come from the authorities of every country at war on either side of the big struggle, and aside from the additional contention that each is right and the other fellow wrong it is the only point on which they are able to find themselves in agreement.

A Grant county girl has just been crowned as Indiana's dairy queen, having been awarded a gold medal for doing the best work in the dairying enterprice and keeping the best record of dairy cows. The incident very naturally gives rise to the speculation whether the Indiana dairy queen really lives up to the part of the always attractive milkmaid portrayed in song, story, picture and on the musical comedy stage.

Five women have been named as street inspectors to assist in the cleaning of streets in New York City, and it is morally certain right now that they're going to find some spots of dust that have been overlooked by the mere men who wield the brooms.

CONCRETE RIVER BANKS

(Washington Star)

The mile long mats woven of willow trees that for a generation or more have been used as the best available makeshift for protecting the silty banks of the lower Mississippi from the tremendous floods that sweep down each spring, may soon become a thing of the past, because of a discovery by government experimenters in the bureau of standards in Washington of a means for hastening the hardening of concrete. Like dozens of other valuable discoveries to the credit of the government's specialists, this one was not the result of a fortunate accident, but came from careful experimenting after the problem had been put directly up to the bureau's workers.

The advantages of protecting the river banks by revetments of concrete that would be practically permanent and at the same time would present a smooth surface to the flowing waters have long been recognized by the army engineers who have charge of the improvement in the lower Mississippi, but all attempts to make use of such protective structures have proved failures because the swift currents have disintegrated the concrete before it became hard. By a little careful experimenting the specialists assigned to the problem at the bureau of standards have found that by adding 4 per cent. of calcium chloride—an inexpensive substance—to the water used in mixing concrete the material has twice the strength of ordinary concrete at the age of a day, and in some cases is three-fourths as strong and resistant at the age of two days as ordinary concrete is when a month old.

The newly discovered mixture will probably be tried out on the Mississippi in the near future, and if it lives up to its promises will revolutionize river and harbor construction work everywhere. It is believed that the government discovery will also be of great value in the scores of other uses to which concrete is put.

SAFETY FIRST

(Grand Rapids News)

It is the intention of the manufacturers to promote uniform legislation for automobile traffic; to

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a hard cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NO STOMACH PAIN, GAS, INDIGESTION IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapepsin" is the only real stomach regulator known.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.—Advertisement.

creased to any appreciable extent. apply the idea of wider safety in the construction of automobiles, especially by devising better control and to improve the equipment designed to warn pedestrians of the approach of a car.

But there remains the personal element, which no sort of legislation can curb. The golden rule must be followed by all drivers before motoring will be safe. It will be just as patent a fact after all the proposed legislation is accomplished as it is now. If the golden rule governed every hand at every automobile wheel in this country, there would be a reduction in accidents such as no amount of legislation could bring about.

Better safety appliances will help, but the reckless drivers must be reformed before the mortality rate will be de-

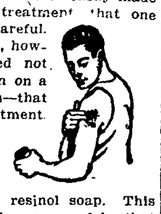
What to Do for Itching Skin

Eczema, ringworm and other itching, burning skin eruptions are so easily made worse by improper treatment that one has to be very careful. There is one method, however, that you need not hesitate to use, even on a baby's tender skin—that is, the resinol treatment. Resinol is the prescription of a Baltimore doctor, put up in the form of resinol ointment and resinol soap. This proved so remarkably successful that thousands of other physicians have prescribed it constantly for over twenty years.



Resinol usually stops itching instantly, healing the eruption quickly, unless it is due to some serious internal disorder. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap can be bought at any druggist's, and are not at all expensive. Write for free sample, Dept. 6-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SOCIOLOGY INSTRUCTOR SPEAKS

To First Presbyterian Men's Club on Suffrage Movement.

Prof. Edward H. White, instructor in sociology at Purdue university, spoke to the members and friends of the Men's club of the First Presbyterian church Friday evening on the causes of the strong movement for equal suffrage. It has come about in the same manner, said Professor White, as did the status of the man about the home during the great revolution of the industrial world. Until that time, asserted the professor, the man was around the house nearly as much as the woman. When the change came he turned the affairs of the home over to the woman. The changed home life today reacts on woman and accounts for the feminine movement, just as it did fifty years ago with man.

VOORHIS ELOQUENT SPEAKER.

Kokomo Lawyer at First Presbyterian Church Sunday Evening.

Much interest attaches to the address by Hon. W. R. Voorhis, a Kokomo attorney, who will be heard Sunday evening at the First Presbyterian church on "A Lawyer's Estimate of Christ." Mr. Voorhis comes under the auspices of the Men's club. He was the speaker at the opening of the Lyon tabernacle in Fort Wayne and is one of the state's gifted and forceful orators.

Class to Take Communion.

The class which was confirmed Sunday night at Trinity Episcopal church by Rt. Rev. Bishop John Hazen White will partake of holy communion for the first time at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The men's corporate communion also will be administered Sunday. The senior chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will also attend in a body.

Ministers Hold Regular Meet.

The Fort Wayne Ministerial association meets Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at the First M. E. church, Wayne and Lafayette streets. Luncheon will be served following the meeting. Rev. J. A. Nipper and T. P. Potts will be the hosts. Rev. A. J. Folsom and Rev. E. E. Howe will read papers on "Simultaneous Evangelistic Meetings."

When Nature Pinned a Medal on Herself

One of a Series of Talks on Health by Fort Wayne's Leading Druggists.

(By Edw. H. Miller, Pharmacist).

Many and marvelous are the wonders of Nature, but her chief masterpieces are the wonderful West Baden Sprudel Water Springs at West Baden, Indiana. When she created these springs she certainly pinned a medal on herself. This water is a boon to every man who has a sluggish liver, bad stomach or lazy bowels. It is Nature's panacea for the indoor worker.

Edw. H. Miller.
2128 S. Calhoun

A single glassful of West Baden Sprudel Water once a week will convince you that life's "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace:" otherwise you may find the path of constipation leads but to the grave.

More than a million people have journeyed to West Baden. They stopped at the luxurious hotel. They drank of the health-giving water and returned home well and happy. This excellent water now is bottled at the springs. Druggists sell the small size for 15c, the large one for 35c. Buy a bottle. It is Nature's cross-cut to good health.

Miller's Pharmacy, at 2128 South Calhoun street, and of which Edw. H. Miller is proprietor, is more than a place to buy stamps and toilet articles. Scores of people know him to be honest, capable and scrupulously careful, whether compounding prescriptions or giving advice concerning some minor ailment. His recommendation of West Baden Sprudel Water should convince you of its merit.

"PI GAM" MAKES BOW TO ADMIRING PUBLIC

New High School Publication is Distributed Friday.

A literary gem, a sparkling, scintillating contribution to the literature of the age, published under the name of "Pi Gam," was issued at the Fort Wayne high school Friday, and distributed to the pupils, with the warning that the outrage is to be repeated each Friday till the end of the school year.

The Pi Gam is edited by Ralph Dunkleberg, who writes under the nom de plume of "Adam Knutt," and there are several other bold conspirators associated with him in the undertaking. Several weeks ago a crowd of the students at the school became dissatisfied with the editorial policies of the Caldron, the school paper, and decided to put on this editorial venture of their own.

Then it has been whispered around that the paper was to be one of the variety "scandal," and that when it once appeared Willie Hearst would take to his hole. But here it comes, without so much as a question about dress suits, or basketballs, or New Year's eve doings.

The first editorial in the Pi Gam states that the editors of the sheet realize that there is worth in the Caldron, and that they do not intend to "buck it," but that they are going to "speak our opinions freely," etc.

Prof. Louis Ward, acting principal of the school, was asked today whether the faculty was represented on the editorial board, and answered with a "No" in seven keys and eleven languages.

First Presbyterian Church, Sunday evening, Warren R. Voorhis, "A Lawyer's Estimate of Christ." 14-2t

A meeting of the Aboit and Lake township institute workers will be held at the Bank hall in Arcola at 2 o'clock, Friday, January 21, to arrange a program.

MAKING EFFORTS TO GET AMERICANS OUT

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 15.—The movement of General Trevino and other Carranza military commanders, to round up and destroy the bandits, who massacred eighteen Americans last Monday, divided attention on this side of the international boundary today with efforts to bring out of the Mexican danger zone foreigners who failed to board the relief train which brought fifty-two refugees to this city last night.

A train sent from here reached the city of Parral last night and is expected to arrive at Juarez tomorrow or Monday, under escort of Carranza troops. According to mining company officials and some of the men who came from Chihuahua city last night, about one thousand Americans are still in northern Mexico. There are, it is estimated, approximately 150 in the vicinity of Chihuahua City, 35 near Torreon and Parral and 500 in the Mormon colony at Casas Grandes. Apprehension for the safety of these was lessened somewhat by reports that the Carranza military chiefs are taking measures to protect foreigners in the territory under control of the recognized government of Mexico. Information comes from Chihuahua City to the effect that Gen. Villa, who is held responsible by many on the border, for the deaths of the Americans at Santa Ysabel, has only forty men with him and that instead of moving northward, he is making toward Guerrero, which is west of Chihuahua.

AWAIT FORMAL REPLY.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Gen. Carranza's formal reply to representations from the United States demanding that he run down and punish the murderers of American citizens at Santa Ysabel, Mexico, still was awaited today though indirect assurances had come from him that this would be done.

Despite renewed demands in congress for intervention in Mexico there were no indications today of a change in the administration policy to give Carranza and the de facto government of Mexico a free hand in running down the assassins of Americans and in restoring order and protecting foreigners in that republic. President Wilson with the backing of his cabinet and democratic leaders in congress was represented as being determined not to be driven into sending an armed force into Mexico on account of war talk and cries of vengeance.

Society

A week of social quiet so far as any large parties or dances count is ending with the promise of at least two brilliant social affairs in the coming week. On Monday afternoon at the Commercial club Mrs. William H. Dreier and her three daughters, Mrs. Edward Gilmartin and the Misses Dreier are to entertain at auction. On Wednesday afternoon at the Anthony hotel Mrs. William K. Noble and Miss MacDougal are to receive their friends at half past 2 o'clock.

The personal friends in this city and admirers of the drama in general will learn with more than common interest of the approaching production of a play written by a former Fort Wayne woman, Mrs. Thomas Crighton, of Cleveland. Mrs. Crighton has been in New York for some months working on her play in conjunction with William Elliott, an actor and playwright himself, who is a son-in-law of David Belasco. The play is named "The Greatest Nation" and a company of noted players have been rehearsing it for some weeks. Mr. Elliott is to produce the play, which will have its first try-out in New Haven, Conn., next week. On January 24 the play will be given in Washington, D. C., and afterwards will open in New York. Olive Wyndham and Madam Yorks are two of the important members of the cast. The latter actress is a protege of Sara Bernhardt.

Miss Linda McKinnie left on Saturday for a six weeks' visit in New York city.

Benjamin F. Kraft, of Chicago, is in the city visiting friends and attending to business matters.

Paul Schaffer, of Warsaw, was the guest on Friday of Miss Hilda Weimer, of Buchanan street.

Mrs. A. Pressler, of Lakeside, has returned from a visit in Indianapolis, with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Maurice Lohman entertained her mother and sister, Mrs. and Miss Bippus, of Huntington, on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Park, of Highland, Mich., are guests of Mrs. Frank Park, of East Berry street.

Miss Junetta Schoch entertained the Alpha Omega club Friday evening and Miss Mabel Vernon was initiated.

Miss Minnie A. Graham, who is ill with pneumonia at her homo, 710 East Lewis street, is somewhat improved.

Mrs. J. H. Steinrock has returned from a three months' visit with her mother, Mrs. Vaughn, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Mrs. L. E. Rehling and Miss Dolly Rehling have gone to Chesaning, Mich., to attend the wedding of Rev. Mr. Bickel.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hughes, of Lakeside, have been called to Nashville, Tenn., by the serious illness of their daughter, Mrs. N. C. Coverdale.

Mrs. Paul Newell Turner, of New York city, is coming here to spend the month of February with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sperry, of Fairfield avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Hess and little child, have returned to Pittsburg, after a holiday visit with Mrs. Hess's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson, of Grace avenue.

Miss Irma Crouse has returned to her studies at the National Kindergarten college, Chicago, after spending the holiday season here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Crouse, of Third street.

Mrs. W. R. Hillary, of Toledo, O., came Thursday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. H. Van Sweringen, who has had an attack of the grip but is so much improved that Mrs. Hillary returned home today.

Mrs. Robert Fox, of Forest Park boulevard, entertained on Thursday evening by giving a small and informal dinner party in honor of her guest, Mrs. Will Sherwood, of Detroit, who left the following day for her home.

Miss Marie Landenberger, of Fairfield avenue, is to leave next Tuesday for Indianapolis, to join her friend, Miss Jeanette Judson, and take an extensive trip with her during which they will visit school friends in St. Louis, Mo., Ft. Worth and Dallas, Tex., and Texarkana, Ark.

Mrs. George W. Jones, of Omaha, Neb., who had been here visiting Mrs. Wagner, of Brackenridge street, and other friends, and who also went to Detroit, to visit her daughter, Mrs. Harry McCracken, formerly Miss Hattie Jones, of this city, left on Friday for her home in the west.

Miss Leota Anspach, of West Jefferson street, was hostess on Thursday evening for a literary club recently organized by a number of high school alumni of the 1912 class. Miss Marian Ingham spoke about the lives and writings of Tennyson, Byron and Browning. Other young ladies attending the meeting were Misses Margaret Essig, Matilda Stolte, Esther Hofer.

Miss Mary Louise Rhamy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Rhamy, had a birthday party on Saturday afternoon for her neighborhood playmates and school friends. It was the prettiest kind of a party, too, with more dainty things that were pink and white than just ice cream or candies. There were a lot of small girls with pink cheeks to begin with and pink bows of ribbon about them somewhere. Then there were pink flowers, little baskets of pink tied with pink fluffy bows and filled with candy, pink caps, pink and white napkins of a flower design, and the most wonderfully frosted cake that told everyone the whole story of the party. The supper was served at 5 o'clock after the children had enjoyed various games and music and then each one received a souvenir to take home to help her to remember Mary Louise and her birthday party. The guests were Margaret Ann Keegan, Aimee Thomas, Mary Katherine Geake, Louise Rogers, Norine Addou, Mary Jane Crane, Mary and Louise Larwill, Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, Violet Reinewald, Mary and Linda Leslie, Louise Metzger, Julia Calhoun, Elizabeth Urbahns, Dorothy Mossman.

Traveling Art Exhibit.

An exhibition of pictures from the Heron Art institute, Indianapolis, is to be shown in Fort Wayne, beginning on Jan. 31 and continuing four days. It is probable that the exhibit will be displayed at the Anthony hotel under the auspices of the Fort Wayne School of Art. The pictures will be works of Indiana artists.

BIG ATTRACTION FOR CHILDREN.

The primary teachers of grades one to four of the public schools have formed an association for the purpose of bringing one or two good lecturers to the city each year. For their initial lecture for the children (old and young) the association has selected Cyrus DeVry, of Chicago, to give two talks. Mr. DeVry is the man who has charge of the Lincoln park zoo, of Chicago, and he lectures and talks on "Wild Animals in Captivity" at the Chicago Zoo. These talks are illustrated by moving pictures and should not be missed by anyone, even adults find the pictures and the talks immensely interesting. The first of these illustrated talks will be given a week from today at the Orpheum theater. There are to be two lectures to prevent a crowd that might be uncomfortably large, if but one were given. The first lecture will be at 9 o'clock and the second at 10:30 o'clock next Saturday morning. Grown up people will be charged ten cents for admission and all children a nickel. If the primary association makes any money after expenses are paid, the money will be kept to use for purposes similar to this. This illustrated lecture is to take the place of next Saturday's moving picture show that is under the management of the Mothers' club. All children of the city will be welcome at these moving picture shows as the price is put at five cents to make it easy for all to go. Saturday children who possibly can are asked to go to the 9 o'clock talk, because if everyone does want to go even the capacity of the Orpheum theater will be tested if all try to get there at the same time.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY NOTES.

The students of Sacred Heart academy gave their first entertainment for the new year last Wednesday. The interesting and well given program included the following: "After the Lights Went Out," a poem referring to the close of the Panama-Pacific exposition, by M. E. Carroll; radiopticon views of the Christmastide, shown by E. Bloom and M. Kuebler; recitation, "Christmas Alway," by Charlotte Tobey; stereopticon views concerning the nativity and infancy of Jesus, taken from the great masters of painting, with singing during the close of appropriate hymns by the vocal pupils. Visitors present at the entertainment were Mrs. M. Fleming, Mrs. A. E. Carroll and Miss M. Lynn.

WITH THE STUDY CLUBS.

The College club held an interesting meeting on Friday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A., and listened to important talks on the City Beautiful, given by Lee J. Ninde and D. N. Foster.

There will not be a meeting of the Morning Musical society during the coming week as an artist recital is scheduled. At present the club is not prepared to state what its next big recital will be, but negotiations are in progress for a noted artist. It has been hoped to bring the Minneapolis orchestra here and a date had been made but was cancelled by the orchestra for reason of an unexpected change in their itinerary.

The evening meeting of the Twentieth Century club held on Thursday, with Mrs. Alice Meigs, was also a guest affair, and the entire program afforded the company much pleasure. Mrs. Grosjean read a paper on pictographs that was illustrated by Mr. Grosjean and Mrs. Griest gave a good talk on "Pan-Slavism." There was music and later refreshments were served by the hostess.

Les Causeries du Mardi will meet on Tuesday, with Mrs. C. A. Horton, 504 East Lewis street.

The Woman's Reading club will meet on Tuesday, January 18, with Mrs. John Shoaff, with Mrs. Worden and Mrs. Beers as assisting hostesses.

The Thursday Shakespeare club will meet the coming week with Mrs. E. D. Eward, of Spy Run avenue, for its annual winter picnic. All study will be laid aside for the program of fun and dining.

Mrs. J. D. Tinsley will be the hostess for the meeting of the Travel club on Monday. Aside from the travel talk, which will concern a Mississippi river trip, the abolition of slavery will be a historical topic for study.

The Fortnightly club will hear a discussion of "A Far Country," by Winston Churchill, which will be presented by C. R. Lane. Walter L. Moll, Miss Wilber, Dr. M. F. Porter, and Mrs. Fred McCulloch are to assist in the program.

The Current Literature club will meet on Tuesday with Mrs. Freese. A reading of "Chitra," by R. Tagore, is the program.

Mrs. C. W. Sperry is to be the hostess for the Duodecimo club next Wednesday afternoon. Native birds of Indiana will be told of and Mrs. Bower will mention special parts of the "Song of the Cardinal" in illustration.

The Business Women's club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. on Monday evening, the 17th inst., for a general discussion of current events. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested.

The Bay View Study club will meet with Mrs. J. P. Martin, 630 West Creighton avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The lesson will be a life study of Robert Burns, which Mrs. Paulsen will conduct. Each member of the club is to recite a Burns poem.

The Mothers' club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. M. F. Porter will give a talk on "Shoes and Feet," Mrs. James E. Eliott will sing and refreshments will be served.

TO THE LADIES:

This is the year you may attend the Poultry Show in comfort.

Plenty of parking place for your electrics.

Wide aisles in the exhibition rooms.

Large, well-lighted quarters for the hundreds of handsome birds and specimens of prize pet stock.

Bring the children. You will all enjoy the exhibit. You will see poultry that captured first prizes at the San Francisco Exposition—dainty little bantams and their big brothers and sisters—handsome bronze turkeys—pretty rabbits and hares, the delight of the little folks. All children under 12 years of age are admitted free when accompanied by parents.

And for you: A special exhibit of dressed poultry, showing you how to choose the best.

Exhibition hall: Two squares north of the court house, on Calhoun street.

We know you will like the exhibition.

The show opens Tuesday, January 18. Make you plans now so you can attend.

Respectfully,

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT IN CRITICAL STATE

Mrs. Lena Blazer, Hurt in Crash of Jitney and Street Car, Low.

Mrs. Lena Blazer, 1125 Polk street, who sustained a fracture of the skull and internal injuries at Huffman and Sherman streets, Christmas eve, when a jitney bus in which she was a passenger was struck by a street car, has had a relapse and is in a very critical condition at St. Joseph hospital. Dr. James M. Dinnen, who attends her, has little hopes of her recovery.

F. W. Luttman, motorman on the street car that struck the jitney bus, has been under arrest since the morning following the accident, but at liberty under $300 bond furnished by the Traction company.

The jitney bus was driven by Oscar Schust and was occupied by Mrs. Blazer and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Rosa Shaw, who also resides at 1125 Polk street. The bus was proceeding east on Huffman street and the street car, going in the same direction, struck the automobile from behind. That the car was traveling at a high rate of speed was shown by the fact that after the first impact of the collision, when the jitney was bumped forward, the car again hit it, throwing it to the curb against a pole. The car proceeded more than 100 feet before it was stopped.

Mrs. Blazer and Mrs. Shaw were both hurt, the latter not seriously. Mrs. Blazer was taken to St. Joseph hospital, where she has since remained. Luttman was arrested on a charge of assault and battery and his case has been continued from time to time to permit Mrs. Blazer to recover sufficiently to appear in court as a witness.

ELEVEN BOYS START SCOUT TROOP NO. 3

Although only eleven boys took the Boy Scout promise at Trinity Episcopal church Friday evening and were organized into Wayne Troop No. 3, indications point to the fact that at the next meeting date as many more will enter. There were nearly forty boys present and listened with eagerness to the Boy Scout work as explained by State Scout Commissioner L. O. Wetzel. After the work of organization, fifteen or twenty youths filled to the brim with enthusiasm came to Mr. Wetzel with the same question, as to whether or not it would be possible for them to join next week.

Troop No. 3 will be headed by Scoutmaster J. S. Farrel, and Assistant Scoutmaster A. K. Patterson and is composed of the following young lads: Lawrence Fletcher, Robert Clause, William Grage, Linus Link, Norman Hindle, Robert Wheatley, Ralph Buelow, Maurice Grage, Roland McCurdy, Richard McCurdy, D. Jones and William Leggett.

Troop No. 1 of the Boy Scouts of Fort Wayne was organized two weeks before Christmas at the First M. E. church. Last Friday night Troop No. 2 was formed at the First Presbyterian church, Troop No. 3 last night at Trinity Episcopal church, and Troop No. 4 will be organized next week.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Total for the Week Ending Saturday Amounts to $1,302,462.97.

MAGAZINE AGENT HELD FOR CRIME

Leo Sunday Charged With Obtaining Money by False Pretense.

Leo Sunday, who has been sailing with the moniker Daniel Shelley at his masthead, was arraigned in the city court, Saturday morning, on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses, was continued until the 20th inst. and went to jail in default of $500 bond. Sunday was arrested by Detective Sergeant Walter Immel and the specific charge against him is that he obtained $3 in cash from Prof. William H. Kruse, of the faculty of Concordia college as a subscription to the Scientific American. Sunday is said to have found other victims in Fort Wayne. He had been employed by the subscription department of the Scientific American, as is shown by a letter found on him and written by the manager of the Cleveland agency reprimanding him for obtaining subscriptions by writing contracts that could not be fulfilled. The manager ordered Sunday to cancel those orders and return the money. On Sunday were also found a large number of the duplicates of contracts written in Toledo. There is evidence that Sunday has not been employed by the Scientific American for several weeks and that he has pocketed all the money he collected on subscription contracts. The police will take steps to learn more of him before his hearing begins. He is a young man and talks his business glibly.

Talks Himself to Jail.

"That fellow's a card; listen to him," remarked a police officer in the city court Saturday morning, when Jake Meyers was taking the stand to testify in his own defense after Officer Elmer Coulter had told the court that Meyers had been ejected from a saloon and kicked out of a restaurant and was a general nuisance when drunk. Meyers was not unaware of his high repute as "a card" and on the stand sought to live up to it. He was jocular with the court, facetious with the prosecuting attorney and so full of funny things and smart patter that the charge of drunkenness was almost overwhelmed in the fluency of his conversation. Finally Judge Kerr broke the spell of Jake's hypnotic blarney and tagged him $5 and costs and promised him the state farm next time.

Other City Court Cases.

Lee J. Hartzell, counsel for Robert M. Dickerson, the forger and ex-convict, appeared in court and consented to the request of teh state for a continuance until next Tuesday. Dickerson himself had previously been granted two or three continuances.

George Clark, a souse who had a big hole in the back of his head, the result of a fall, was continued a week to permit his recovery and put under $100 bond.

These other drunks were disposed of: James Kelly, $1 and costs; Charles Bingham, continued to Wednesday under $100 bond; Edward Turner, $1 and costs; Frank Smith, continued indefinitely; Sylvester O'Loughlin, continued to Monday under $25 bond; Peter Gallagher, continued indefinitely.

FINAL AUTOMOBILE ORDER.

Chief of Police Directs Arrest of Those Without Licenses After Monday.

Chief of Police Charles Lenz has issued his final order relating to the enforcement of the automobile license law. Beginning Monday officers are to arrest the drivers of all cars that have no 1916 license tags. A receipt showing application for license will guarantee immunity. The order to Captain Richard Kelly, night commandant, and Lieutenant Harry Grimme, day commandant, is as follows:

"You will instruct your officers to be on the lookout for all parties running automobiles in this city with 1915 licenses attached thereto, beginning Monday, January 17, 1916, bring them to the station and file affidavits against them, charging them with failure to provide their machines with 1916 number as the law prescribes.

"All parties, however, who may be brought to the station, and can show a receipt that they have applied for their 1916 license, may be given a chance to run on their 1915 license until the arrival of their new license. However, it will be necessary to take the names and addresses of the owner of the car and their 1915 license number.

"There will be no further orders issued on this matter and its contents will be final."

MRS. SCHLINK NOW AT HOME.

Mrs. Herman Schlink, the bride of a year who suddenly disappeared from her home, 327 Brandriff street, last Tuesday afternoon, while her husband was at his work as a pipefitter in the Wabash shops, and was located by Chief of Police Lenz at Columbia City, has returned to Fort Wayne and is now at her residence. Her husband went to Columbia City and accompanied her to Fort Wayne. Mrs. Schlink met him at the Pennsylvania station in Columbia City and the meeting was very affectionate. The young wife's escapade followed a trifling domestic row and she hastily decided to run away. She was in Logansport before she went to Columbia City.

OPEN HOUSE AT MANUAL SCHOOL

The Fort Wayne Manual Training school will hold open house in all departments Tuesday evening. All shops, including carpenter, backsmith, patternmaking, machine and foundry will be open, and the mechanical drawing, sewing, cooking and art departments will be running full blast, with students at their places and instructors to demonstrate the various branches of the work.

The shops downstairs will open at 7:30 and the third floor rooms will start operations half an hour later. The classes continue till 9 o'clock. Last year over 2,000 people attended the open house, and with the increased interest in the project the crowd this year should be even larger. Every effort is being made to accommodate the guests and give them ample time to see each department without crowding and confusion.

There will be exhibits of finished work and products under construction, but the big feature will be the classes at their everyday work.

FINAL MEETING OF SEMESTER.

The Mathematics club of the Fort Wayne High school held its final meeting of the first semester of the school year in room 20 Friday evening. Prof. J. Reising was the principal speaker and spoke on the subject, "Life of Sir Isaac Newton." Miss Marie Keller rendered several musical selections. Lunch was served.

Will Kaiser's Throat Decide the World War?

Whether Germany's Ruler Has Cancer Becomes Issue of Grave Importance—Most Noted American Authority Says Surgery is Only Treatment.

By Frederick M. Kerby

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 15.—What is cancer of the throat? What causes it? Can cancer be cured?

On the answer to these questions may depend the outcome of the European war.

Dr. H. A. Kelly

The kaiser is suffering from cancer of throat, according to dispatches, which say only a desperate operation can save his life, and that with the loss of the power of speech.

Dr. Howard A. Kelly of John Hopkins university here, has just answered these three questions. Dr. Kelly's experiments with radium as a cancer cure are well known; he is one of the greatest surgeons of our time and a specialist on cancer. Here are his answers:

"Cancer of the throat—or rather cancers of the mouth and throat—may be either mild and incipient, or advanced and utterly hopeless," he said. "They all begin in a small spot somewhere about the tongue, the gums, the cheek, the lips or back in the throat about the tonsils, or in the larynx—or the vocal cords at the base of the tongue.

"All forms of cancer consist in a riotous overgrowth of the normal cells in any part of the body where the cancer grows. When a large mass of cancerous tissue is formed, the cancer cells in the central portion, failing to get nourishment, break down and discharge, and so form the extensive ulcers often seen associated with cancer. In this way, too, poisons are formed which are absorbed by the body at large.

"Death in the case of cancer of the throat comes from either the absorption of these poisons in such large quantities that the patient simply dies of extreme weakness and exhaustion, or it is brought about by mechanical means by the pressure of the cancer masses interfering with swallowing and with breathing.

"The ultimate cause of cancer," declares Dr. Kelly, "the reason why these cells take on this riotous development, has not yet been found out. We only know this, that any chronic irritation about the mouth or throat is liable in the end to result in cancer. In this way smoking—the irritation of a hot pipe stem on a particular part of the lip—will produce it; the irritation of nicotine will produce it in any part of the mouth or throat.

If it turns out the kaiser really is suffering from cancer of the throat, it may be necessary to remove his larynx to save his life. If this should be done it would be necessary to insert tubes connecting food and breathing passages, as shown by figures one and two in illustration.

"Cancer is not contagious from one individual to another! Cancer is also not directly inheritable, although the predisposition may be inherited. In other words there may be an inherited weakness—a field in which if the seeds are dropped, as we drop seeds into prepared ground, cancer may result; whereas in another individual where no predisposition existed, it would not result.

"The first step toward the proper treatment of cancer," continued Dr. Kelly, "is the early recognition of any little sore, however tiny, about the lips, tongue or throat which does not promptly heal.

"In this early stage and in a stage of irritation called the precancerous stage, the disease is practically always curable. But, if allowed to go on until it form a lump of considerable size, with every passing month the chances of cure become less.

"The treatment of cancer is absolutely, first, last and all the time, surgical. No means have as yet been discovered which will cure cancer outside of surgery, with the exception of radium, and that is at present in an experimental stage."

The Remarkable Values

Offered here are attracting crowds of discriminating buyers—the quality of the merchandise—the exclusive styles—the low prices—are attractions that none can resist.

The Underwear Store, always famous for its showing of excellent garments at moderate prices, is offering during the January sale everything in undergarments that could possibly be desired at prices that are especially low.

NIGHT DRESSES

Slip-over, high neck and kimono styles in fine muslin, cambric, nainsook and crepe, nicely trimmed with laces, embroideries and ribbons. An almost endless assortment to choose from, starting as low as 50c, then 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and up to $5.00.

PETTICOATS

To the quaint styles of the olden days that are now the delight of every fashionable woman we are indebted for the return of the petticoats. Women have wearied of the freakish substitutes and welcome the soft, filmy petticoats that are so well in keeping with the frocks of the present momen. The new petticoats are liberal in width and have the new flare effect. The materials are fine muslins and cambrics, some simply trimmed, other elaborately trimmed with fluffy laces and ribbons. The prices range from 50c up to $5.00.

CORSET COVERS

In many handsome styles, full front or tight fitting, with and without sleeves. All in soft nainsooks and cambrics, prettily trimmed with delicate laces, embroideries and ribbons. We start the prices at 25c and up easy steps to $2.00.

DRAWERS

Fine muslins, cambrics and nainsooks in Marcella, Isabella and umbrella styles, all liberal in cut, made right, perfect fitting and daintily trimmed. Prices from 50c to $2.00.

ANTWERP NEWS.

Antwerp, Ohio, Jan. 15.—Miss Rose Reising went to Fort Wayne Thursday, where she spent the day with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hettinger, accompanied by his brothers, Frank and Pete Hettinger, and sisters, Frances and Cecelia, departed for their home at Pesotum, Ill., Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. John Hettinger being on their wedding trip, while his brothers and sisters were returning home from attendance at the wedding.

Earl Reeb was a Fort Wayne visitor Thursday.

Mrs. Calla Heiber was a passenger to the Summit City Thursday.

Mrs. Anna Davy, who has been visiting at this place, the guest of Mrs. D. M. Crawford, on West River street, departed for her home at Bangor, Mich., Thursday.

John Ruger, one of our north of the river farmers, was a Defiance visitor Friday.

Ray Harris, who has been spending a few days at this place, the guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Harris, out at their suburban home, just west of town, left for his home at Montpelier, Ind., Friday.

E. V. Gordon was among those that went to Fort Wayne Friday from this place to attend the auto show.

Dr. N. G. Reeb, Jack Rumbaugh and James Waite were Hicksville visitors Thursday evening.

Frank Armstrong went over to Woodburn Friday.

Raymond Overman was a Fort Wayne visitor Friday.

J. R. McCabe was among those from this place that was noticed in the crowd on Calhoun street at Fort Wayne Friday, he having gone up to the city to attend the auto show.

Jos. Miller, of Fort Wayne, was here looking for a horse.

HE COULD HARDLY GO

"About two years ago I got down on my back until I hardly could go," writes Solomon Bequette, Flat River, Mo. "I got a 50c box of Foley Kidney Pills and they straightened me right up." Common symptoms of kidney trouble are backache, headache, rheumatic pains, soreness and stiffness, puffiness under eyes, blurred vision, sleep disturbing bladder troubles and a languid, tired feeling. Foley Kidney Pills help to eliminate the poisonous waste matter that causes these symptoms. Dreier Drug Co.—Advertisement.

INDIAN SERVICE HAS WON A BIG VICTORY

Sale of Liquor to Indians Now Almost Entirely Broken Up.

Washington, Jan. 12.—A dramatic story of the government's fight to stop the sale of liquor to Indians is outlined by Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs. So well have the efforts of the Indian service succeeded, he said, that the traffic virtually has been broken up.

Not only has the government cut the sale of liquor to Indians on reservations and elsewhere, but in one instance it has made a fifth of a state dry, through enforcement of a sixty-year-old Indian treaty. Older treaties are being studied now to determine if saloons in other territory partly populated by Indians can be closed.

Minnesota is the state in which a vast area was freed of saloons by treaty enforcement. The agreement revived by the government is known as the Chippewa treaty of 1855. For many years its provisions regarding the sale of whisky had been forgotten until one day last summer it was discovered in the Indian bureau here that the convention was a perpetual bar to the sale of intoxicants in northwest Minnesota.

Indian officials determined to enforce the treaty and began, too, the study of similar agreements in other states. On October 20, last, an order went forth that saloons in several of the larger towns in the territory must close within ten days. Liquor dealers refused to close and took the fight into the courts, where it has just been decided that the treaty provisions still are in force.

Indian officials say the Indian himself first realized that alcohol was a menace to the race and that in the Minnesota treaty as well as in most of the other Indian treaties the Indian and not the white man stipulated that intoxicants should not be sold in Indian territory.

In other parts of the country officials charged with enforcement of laws against sale of whisky to Indians worked through court action. Several officers were killed.

An educational campaign against the use of alcohol, Indian officials declare, did much for the enforcement of laws. A pledge-signing campaign also was an aid. Education of the Indian against drink was undertaken through the schools, where students were interested in essay writing contests.

While investigating treaty arrangements Indian officials discovered a forgotten law permitting the government to hold up annuity payments in regions where liquor was within easy reach of Indians. This, officials assert, was one of the most fruitful methods tried. Payments were stopped until head men of the tribes promised co-operation and until officers were convinced white residents in contiguous territory would aid in law enforcement.

One Indian official has declared this touching of the white man's pocket book by cutting off payments was so effective as even to surprise the Indian service.

Reservation officials in the southwest have bent their energies towards stamping out the fermentation of Tulapai, a native Indian liquor made from sprouting corn. The use of Peyote buttons, or dried cactus crowns, for making an intoxicating drink has been checked by a department of agriculture order prohibiting their importation. Legislation has been asked to given the Indian office large powers over traffic in Peyote.

State legislation is declared to have been of material assistance to the Indian office.

Commissioner Sella concluded his review of efforts to stop the sale of liquor to Indians by saying:

"The sentiment of the people is strongly with our work, regardless of the attitude of the individual on the question of prohibition as it is understood in white communities."

WEDS FAITHFUL NURSE.

Man With Broken Back Takes Bride After Long Journey.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 15.—Claybourne Charles Smith, who traveled 8,000 miles from Natal, South Africa, to Roselawn, Ind., in a basket, with a broken back, at a cost of $25,000, and his nurse, Miss Edith Emily Buckle, of Cardiff, Wales, have been married by Rev. John Coleman, pastor of the Roselawn Methodist church.

The wedding took place at the home of Mr. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith, on their farm, near Roselawn. The bridegroom is crippled as a result of a splintered spine suffered in a mining accident and will always be a hopeless cripple. The bride is the pretty Welsh nurse who cared for Smith during the long journey. Smith, who is twenty-seven years old and a mining engineer, was graduated from Purdue university in 1907 and was employed as a mining engineer in South Africa by the London Mining Machinery company, Limited. The wedding took place Sunday, but it was not announced till today.

Get Rid of a Racking La Grippe Cough —It Weakens.

For the severe racking cough that comes with lagrippe, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is wonderfully healing and soothing. It eases the tightness over the chest, raises the phlegm easily and helps the racking, tearing cough that is so exhausting and weakening. R. G. Collins, ex-postmaster Barnegat, N. J., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound soon stopped the severe lagrippe cough that completely exhausted me. It can't be beat." Dreier Drug Co.—Advertisement.

ENDS TRIP OF 8,000 MILES IN BASKET BED

Helpless Indiana Man Will Win Bride in Painful Experience.

Roselawn, Ind., Jan. 12.—A journey of 8,000 miles in a basket bed ended here yesterday when C. G. Smith, a mining engineer of Natal, South Africa, arrived at the home of his parents. He suffered a broken back in a mine accident and is paralyzed from the waist down but nevertheless will wed Miss Amy Palmer, an English nurse who cared for him in a hospital in Cardiff, Wales, and helped bring him home. Smith and a companion were repairing machinery in the South African workings. A huge rock fell, killing his companion. At Smith's request the company started him home, appropriating $25,000 for the surgical and other expenses of the trip. The journey was broken at Cardiff so that the injured man might receive special medical attention and it was there that he met Miss Palmer. Because of the size of the basket in which Smith traveled it was necessary to take out the windows of a railroad coach to get him aboard the train.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DR. W. H. ROBERTS ACCUSED.

Father of Former Mayor of Terre Haute Is Sued for Divorce.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 15.—Dr. William H. Roberts, county health commissioner and father of Donn M. Roberts, was sued for divorce by Mrs. Louise Virginia Roberts, who alleges incompatibility of temperament, in addition to cruel and inhuman treatment. Dr. Roberts, who is 77 years old, was married in February, 1914, to Mrs. Louise V. Zink, age 73, a wealthy widow of Sugar Creek township, who had been married three times before, losing one husband by divorce and two by death. Dr. Roberts had been married twice before, losing both former wives by death.

Dr. Roberts, who is one of the oldest pratitioinerc in Vigo county, was estranged for a time from his son, Donn M., and during the latter's candidacy for the mayoralty in 1913 submitted to a newspaper interview in which he said meaner things about his son than any of the latter's opponents said about him. He charged, in this interview, that Donn had ruined him in a material way, and was unworthy of the confidence and support of the voters of Terre Haute. Dr. Roberts was a candidate for mayor at one time against his son, but withdrew before the primary election.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 15—Rumors that the British government had released many vessels to bring about more liberal shipments from Australia and Argentina, led to a sharp decline today in the wheat market here. Announcement of a fresh advance to a new high record in ocean freight rates from the United States tended to emphasize sentiment in favor of the bear side. Opening prices, which ranged from ⅝c to 1¼c lower, with May at $1.26¼ to $1.26⅝, and July at $1.19¾ to $1.20¼, were followed by only a slight rally.

The close was unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼c adeance, with May at $1.27 and July $1.21.

Prospects of enlarged receipts weakened corn. Breaking of the drought in Argentina counted somewhat, too, against the bulls. After opening ¼c to ⅝c lower, the market underwent a slight further sag.

The close was steady at a loss of ⅛@⅜c.

Oats eased off with corn and wheat. Commission houses with resting orders were active buyers, however, at 50c for May delivery.

Weakness in grain and hogs made provisions decline, regardless of big shipments of late from here. Signs pointed to liberal arrivals of hogs next week.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

NNew York, Jan. 15—Trading was very active today but the movement was more or less confusing. Specialties like Bethlehem Steel, International Nickel, American Coal products and New York Airbrake made extreme gains of five to eighteen points, but other issues of that class rose only moderately. Mexican issues were again under the spell of depression and rails were dull and irregular while United States Steel was under persistent pressure. Mercantile Marine issues were again the outstanding features, the preferred stock rising 2⅛ to the new record of 82¼ and the 4½ per cent. certificates 2¼ to 101¾, also a new maximum. The closing was irregular. Bonds were strong, with further heavy dealings in New York Central debentures.

Such activity as attended today's initial trading was again limited to speculative issues, particularly those forming the so-called munitions group. Gains of a point were made by American Car, American Locomotive and Mexican Petroleum, while Crucible Steel, Industrial Alcohol and International Nickel scored material advances. The movement was rather irregular, however, other prominent specialties including Baldwin Locomotive, California Petroleum, Studebaker and Lackawanna Steel falling from substantial fractions to almost two points. Mercantile Marine issues were again extremely active, the 4½ per cent. bonds advancing two points to the high record of 101¼.

BANTER GAME HAS FATAL END

call within five minutes after the accident occurred. The heavy metal boat was unloaded on Erie street, but a solid coating of ice extending for nearly three hundred feet to the edge of the river made it impossible to lower the boat there. Then Stationmaster Degitz and the boat squad hurried to the Walton avenue bridge, there they cut niches for their feet and lowered the boat. In the meantime Assistant Fire Chief George Jasper responded to a call sent to the fire department, and arrived with pulmotor and blankets. Soon it was seen that it would be necessary to cut the ice, for the boat was having difficulty getting into the flooded district. Again the fire apparatus made a hurry-up run back to No. 3 station, where axes and picks were secured to assist in cutting a channel.

Volunteers Find Body.

The big searchlight on the fire apparatus was turned from the bridge into the river, and under the glare of its rays the boat crew worked toward the hole in the ice that marked the spot where the boys had gone under. Lawrence Elzey, 1528 East Wayne street, and Charles Prince, another neighbor, were volunteers in the police boat.

Elzey was forward grappling with a pike pole, and Prince was at the oars, when they reached a spot fifteen feet from the hole in the ice. Elzey lowered the hook, and felt the little body against a tree, held tight by the current.

He lifted the little form from the water and took it into the boat, and the two pulled for the shore.

A Grewsome Procession.

At this point the bank is long and high and steep and the ice covering was so smooth that a man had difficulty in even stanting on it. Swinging the dead boy over his shoulder, Elzey stood at the foot of the bank, while half a hundred strong men toiled to drag the boat up the bank. It was found impossible to get the heavy craft up that way, and the men turned their attention to reaching the top of the hill with the body. Forming a line, they spread themselves in a human chain up the glassy bank, and another line of men stood below. Elzey, in rubber boots and coat, himself sheeted with ice, then started the dangerous climb.

Tugging, pulling, balancing, pushing the little procession worked toward the top of the bank, while a line of spectators, many of them women, peered into the darkness from places of safety along the Nickel Plate tracks.

Slowly and carefully they climbed, every few moments Elzey standing erect and the little arms of the boy swung over his shoulders. Then they reached the top and the crowd gathered closer, while the men lifted the tiny frenched and frozen body from the icy coat of the man who had risked his life to bring it to land.

The little trailer wagon that is used for the police boat was converted into an emergency ambulance and the men pulled it by ropes over the tracks and into the street. The body was placed in the patrol wagon and taken into the city.

The boat was dragged up over the ice sheet and there still stood in the darkness at the top of the bank a handful of women straining their eyes and peering into the darkness of the flooded woodland below. The moon shone on them, but there was no other light and the women stood and talked in whispers, for they were mothers themselves and neighbors of the dead boy. Long after the last of the rescue party had left the scene they were found still standing, numbed with horror, wrispering to one another.

The Family Hears.

In the meantime there was horror in the little house at 1603 East Wayne street, where Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, parents of the drowned boy, had just heard of his tragic death. Neighbors had come to them, and they were stunned and speechless. The other children sat about silent and the mother, overcome by the sudden grief, was too horrified to weep. They stood there, the family, in the kitchen of the little house, waiting for news of the finding of the body. Outside in the moonlight neighbors crowded close about the windows and watched the family in its sorrow.

Scene of Many Tragedies.

The spot at which the drowning occurred is several hundred feet below the site of the old Wines dam, where drownings have occurred by the score in the past fifty years. Some twenty-five years ago the summer record of deaths at the spot averaged five or six, and it wasn't until the dam washed out one winter that the number of deaths decreased. Students from Concordia college were drowned in the deep hole above the dam and for years it was considered the most dangerous spot o Fort Wayne rivers.

Even in the past few years a number of people have met violent death in the vicinity.

LYCEUM FEDS GO THROUGH LAKE FOREST

Pile Up Grand Little Score Against College Team.

In spite of the fact that the old lineup was more or less shot to pieces, St. Patrick's Lyceum Feds last night hung up a win against the Lake Forest college five, the final score standing 26 and 16 in favor of the home guard. The Feds scored their first point soon after the first whistle, Miller sliding one into the basket less than a minutes after the start of play. By the end of the first half the game was practically sewed up, and the second half was without some of the thrills that marked the opening period.

Flaherty and Miller divided honors pretty evenly at forward, and although Miller has credit for more baskets, the Irishman did his share of the work and held his end of the scoring machine well in hand. Lanky Vonderhaar, the seven-foot string that has worked into the center position, stood head and shoulders over the other men on the team, and his heighth gave him a grand young advantage in several places. Blee and Brown both worked hard in the after position.

Loos, favorite for several seasons, was out of the game last night, and it is whispered about the camp of the Feds that he may not come back. He has been a consistent worker and has done some mighty pretty work in even the past few games, while he was being shifted from pillar to post, and it would be a shame for the team to lose him. The lineup and scores:

Lyceums, 26—Flaherty, R. F.; Miller, L. F.; Vonderhaar, C.; Brown, R. G.; Blee, L. G.

Lake Forest 16—McFerran, R. F.; Coleman, L. F.; Burst, C.; Kreuger, R. G.; Grey, L. G.

Field goals—Flaherty, 2; Miller, 5; Vonderhaar, 3; McFerran, 2; Coleman, 3; Burst, 1.

Foul goals—Flaherty, 1; Miller, 5; McFran, 4.

Referee—Island.

Aeolians Win.

In the preliminary the Lyceum Aeolians won from the St. Paul Nationals 15 to 12. The lineups and scores:

Aeolians, 15—Rulo, R. F.; Loos, L. F.; McGuire, C.; Daley, R. G.; DeWald, L. G.

Nationals, 12—Hoffman, R. F.; Stegner, L. F.; Doerfler, C.; Walda, R. G.; Linnemeier, L. G.

Field goals—Rulo, 2; Loos, 1; McGuire, 4; Stegner, 4; Doerfler, 2.

Foul goals—McGuire, 1.

FRESHIE INDOOR TRACK SENSATION.

EARL EBY.

The newest sensation in indoor athletics is Earl Eby, a youngster of the middle west, who is stepping the half mile in less than two minutes. He is a freshie at Chicago university.

Eby first attracted attention at the national meet at San Francisco last summer. He ran in the junior events and made better time in the half than the senior stars of the country. Eby's mark was 1:58. Leroy Campbell, senior winner, did the half in 2:01.

Eby has beaten such speeders as T. M. Cramer, of the Olympic club of Frisco, and D. M. Scott, of Mississippi Agricultural college.

CONCORIDA BREAKS SCORING RECORD

Piles Up Ninety-Eight Points Against Central College.

It was a horrible lacing the Concordians piled up on Central college of Huntington last night, pulling down a final score of 98 and 9. The Concordians didn't try to work in any rough stuff, in fact they didn't need to, but they played double eights around the visitors and made them look sheepish at every stage.

Luerssen got away with a record that beats anything ever done here in a single game, with a total of twenty-three field goals and five fouls. Wackar was second with ten field goals and one foul, and the other regulars worked splendidly, and after the first half Captain Byroade sent Gremel and Hendricks, substitutes, into the fray. Both of them added to the glory of the event by scoring. Here are the lineups and scores:

Concordias, 98—Schilf-Gremel, R. F.; Luerssen, L. F.; Wacker, C.; Metzdorf-Hendricks, R. G.; Dorn, L. G.

Centrals, 9—Swales, R. F.; Mommert, L. F.; Schepardson, C.; Buss, R. G.; Auman, L. G.

Field goals—Schilf, 6; Luerssen, 23; Wacker, 10; Metzdorf, 1; Dorn, 1; Gremel, 2; Henricks, 3; Mommert, 3.

Foul goals—Luerssen, 5; Wacker, 1; Mommert, 3; Swales, 2.

Seconds Also Win.

The Concordia Seconds put in a good night and did their part toward breaking records. The lineups and scores:

Seconds, 23—Bauer, R. F.; Brommer, L. F.; Keb, C.; Bald, R. G.; Waltz, L. G.

South Sides, 0—Miller, R. F.; Jones, L. F.; Stocker, C.; Lake, R. G.; Leibt, L. G.

Field goals—Bauer, 2; Brommer, 4; Keb, 3; Bald, 1.

Foul goals—Brommer, 3.

Making a Big League Pitcher

(By Brown Holmes).

Just how much a manager figures in the development of a star pitcher and just how much needs to be done, sometimes, to save good raw material from the great scrap heap is shown by the case of Fred Toney, counted on to be a whale with the Cincinnati Reds the coming season.

Toney was turned from a castoff "dub" into a pitcher who won a big majority of his games with a second division club last season and next to Grover Alexander was the hardest pitcher in the National league to score against.

From the time Toney set strikeout records in the Blue Grass league in 1909 until last season, he was a puzzle. He had wonderful natural ability and every good baseball judge who looked at him said he ought to be a wonder. Wise managers and catchers tried to make him the great pitcher he ought to have been, then gave up hope. He made five trips to and from the major leagues.

Finally, last spring, the big mountaineer found himself out of a job. He asked for another trial with the Cubs and was turned down. He wrote to every other club in the National and American leagues—fifteen of them—asking for a chance. He got one reply. It was from Buck Herzog, manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Herzog was willing to tackle the job of molding the big failure into a success.

Toney reported, without spring training, four days after the season opened. Herzog is one manager who can get a ball player in shape, and he started on the big job. He trained Toney for five weeks. He was criticized for keeping the big fellow on the payroll, but the Red leader had some ideas about pitchers and insisted on working them out.

Toney had rare speed and always tried to whiz the ball past the batter. Herzog taught him not to try to strike out every batter, but to make them bat at bad balls. Toney was a side arm pitcher; Herzog made him pitch overhand.

Herzog taught him to mix in a slow ball and slow curve with his fast one and to use his fadeaway on lefthand batters. He was taught to use the same motion in throwing his slow ball he used in throwing his speedy ones.

The Red boss taught Toney to study batters and "work" on them. He taught him to pitch with his head as much as with his arm

In five weeks Toney was ready—and he was a whirlind. The pitcher who had been the big mystery of baseball for five years won seventeen games and lost only six, held opposing teams to less than two runs a game and to a batting average of .175. He pitched six shutouts.

So, the manager who found Frank Baker and gave the game one of its greatest hitters, gave the game a great pitcher who had been lost.

"Let Me See the Color of Your Gold," Says Ed Smith; "Then I'll Produce"

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 15.—"When all the booster tickets are sold I will be ready to announce the lineup of my spring training squad," Ed Smith, holder of a Central league franchise, said today.

The committee which is disposing of 5,000 tickets for a boosters' day to provide South Bend with Central league baseball, however, expects more difficulty in selling the last block of 2,000 than the 3,000 already out. A member today said:

"It behooves every fan interested in Central league baseball to see that not only he is provided with the booster ticket but that all his friends are. We have not been everywhere as yet, by any means, but have visited many of the baseball communities we know and as a consequence they are pretty well supplied with tickets now. We are placing them in all cigar stores, and urge the fans to ask for them when they are not offered, as Mr. Smith is anxious to get officially started."

The news of South Bend's proposed return to baseball has been so widely advertised, Smith is being flooded with letters from all over the country. He will open up his office, he said, when all arrangements for taking over a Central league franchise permanently are completed.

While admitting he would soon have a very good idea of the talent he would try out in the spring, Mr. Smith said he would withhold all announcements as to the identity of the men he has in mind until he was absolutely assured of a berth in the league by the sale of the booster tickets. Made enthusiastic by the evident interest in Central league baseball expressed on all sides, nevertheless the stalwart baseball leader says he will feel better when things are all settled and he can work on a definite basis.

Les Darcy, Australian Ring Sensation, Must Add His Strength in Europe's War.

JACK KEARNS.

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—Les Darcy, the great Australian middleweight, must shoulder a rifle and add his strength to Europe's war

One more soldier added to the British firing line means a disappointment to American fight fans. Jack Kearns, who landed here recently, is one of the disappointed. He had arranged to bring Les Darcy to the United States under a three years' contract, but the order compelling the latest ring sensation to take up a new sort of fighting shattered Kearns' plans.

"All Australia made a protest against Darcy coming to America with me," said Kearns, "until finally the agitation reached such a stage that the authorities positively refused to permit him to leave his native land. Hundreds of mothers who had sent their boys to the front protested against granting a one year's leave, which I had asked of Speaker Richard Maher, of the Australian parliament.

"They held that inasmuch as they had offered up their boys to the country's cause, the fact that Darcy was a champion pugilist should not entitle him to any consideration.

"I pleaded with the speaker and even offered to put up a large cash bond to guarantee Darcy's safe return after one year, but he would not yield. He agreed with me that it would be a shame to send Darcy to the front to be shot, but he had to heed not only his own conscience, but the public feeling as well.

"The agitation to compel Darcy to go to the front became so heated that a close watch was kept upon the boy as it was freely charged that I had planned to kidnap him."

IT ISN'T ANY WORSE THAN THE CABBAGE YOU SMOKE AROUND THE HOUSE!!!

The Sportman's Creed

(By Morris Ackerman, of the Fish and Game Protective Association).

We believe in hunting and fishing as a means of honorable recreation.

We believe in catching fish and bagging game, not as a means of livelihood nor for the securing of food.

We believe in hunting and fishing during the seasons provided by law and do so. We believe in obeying those laws, and not in any case exceeding the legal bag limits.

We are ready to lend time and money to restock streams, help replenish game and birds.

We are for forestry conservation, clean streams and fair laws that relate to our fish and game.

We believe in respecting the property rights of the farmer.

The song and insectivorous birds should be protected at all times.

We believe in the great outdoors, the silent places, and in the beauties of a wonderful nature.

It is not the weight of our creel, nor the number of our catch by which we measure our success, or lack of it.

We are for punishment of violators of fish and game laws, and will lend assistance in law enforcement.

We seek the companionship of the brothers who find enjoyment in the game we love, to learn from them, and to impart the knowledge we have gained in our favorite pastime.

But the greatest of all of our creed is that the seeking of pleasure in our chosen way, is the seeking of health; the thing most valuable of all life's treasures.

CALLS FRANK BIEMER THE WISE OLD BIRD

Bud Bains, in the Dayton Evening Herald, pays the following respects to Frank Biemer:

"Frank Biemer, who is considering the purchase of the Fort Wayne club, is rather wise. Before making any offer to Owner Klitzke or before accepting one, he is making a survey of prices for various minor and big league clubs so that he may have a reasonable conception of what the Fort Wayne club is worth. Then he will reject or accept the price which Klitzke sets. Biemer insists that he will not become a magnate of the club but that he is just buying it for several Fort Wayne business men. He claims he would rather pay and see nine innings than get in free and see the last three."

LIGHT FANTASTIC RUINS RUNNERS.

Steve Farrell, track coach at Michigan university, has ordered members of his running teams to refrain from dancing at private parties or college hops. He says dancing spoils a runner's stride and there is little that is more important to a runner than the well known stride. Farrell says he will take the ban off dancing when a dance is invented with different steps than now used.

OSSIAN NEWS.

Ossian, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. J. W. Crummitt was hostess for the Whileaway club at a very enjoyable meeting Thursday afternoon. The ladies responded to roll call with maxims, and then had a very interesting discussion of current events. A social hour followed during which the ladies were busy with their needle and fancy work, and later the hostess served a nice lunch. Those present were Mesdames A. F. Roe, M. C. Aldred, Frank Zehrung, Aaron Deich, A. A. Melching, Fred Mills, Frank Foughty, D. C. Wybourn, Clyde Wagner, Charles Goshorn, Will Hoopengardner, J. E. Plummer, and Miss Maud Sheehan, of Monroeville, as a guest. The club will meet again Thursday, Jan. 27, with Mrs. Aaron Deich.

Mrs. E. H. Roe and daughter Catherine and Mrs. W. W. Fryback spent Wednesday evening in Bluffton calling on friends and attendig a cafeteria supper given by the ladies of the Bluffton M. E. church.

Mrs. A. C. Ferguson, who has been in very poor health for several months, is now at Edgerton, Ind., visiting with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Longfellow.

Miss Blanch Wilson is in Ossian visiting for a few days with her brother and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Wilson, who have just gone to housekeeping in the cottage of Mrs. Gee Lord.

Rev. J. Orr Powell, pastor of the Ossian M. E. church, has been conducting a very successful series of meetings at Prospect. These meetings will close on Sunday evening and Rev. Powell will then go to Monroeville to condute a two weeks' series of meetings in the M. E. church there.

Mrs. E. Salisbury is very critically ill and her death is expected at any time. She is suffering from pneumonia and a complication of troubles.

W. W. Fryback was a Fort Wayne visitor Friday.

Mrs. Felix Summers will be hostess for the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid society on next Thursday afternoon.

The Aikman meetings at the Presbyterian church still continue with much interest. There will also be services Saturday evening this week, and Dr. Aikman will be at both the Sunday services, leaving Monday for Cincinnati, where he goes to begin a series of meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson entertained at dinner Mr. and Mrs. Forest Wilson and Miss Grace Derr.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Yager had as dinner guests Thursrday Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Aikman, Rev. and Mrs. Frank K. Baker, sons Frank and Robert, and Mrs. Anna Boyer.

A. A. Melching made a business trip to Fort Wayne Friday.

The N. M. G. club was most delightfully entertained teh other afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. C. Hunter. The ladies spent a social afternoon with their fancy work and their hostess conducted a number of interesting contests. Afterwards she served very nice refreshments of rose ice cream, cake and coffee. Those attending were eMadames George M. Way, Frank Quackenbush, John Woodward, E. T. Hawley, J. V. Goshorn, John Hanna, M. E. Spencer, Frank McDowell, G. A. Bowman and Josephus Caston. The club will meet next time with Mrs. Bowman on Tuesday, January 25.

IN preparing fo r the sixth annual great Triangle Poultry show, to be given by the Allen County Poultry Fanciers' association in Fort Wayne, beginning Tuesday next and continuing all week, many local and out of town exhibitors are very enthusiastic.

Practically every poultry and pet stock fancier in Fort Wayne and Allen county will be represented in the coming show, as the Wayne Pet Stock association will be one of the features of this years' exhibition.

This organization is distinct from the poultry association, but as the interests are so similar, it was decided to make the affair a co-operative show, so the patrons of the show will not only have the opportunity of seeing the finest poultry ever shown in this city, but the added attractions of the Wayne Pet Stock assoication as well.

President C. S. Harris, of the Wayne Pet Stock association gives the interesting information that a few years ago there were but few interested in the raising of rabbits and cavies, while today there are quite a number raising rabbits for commercial purposes.

The Association

The officers of the Fort Wayne association are C. S. Harris, president: R. C. Evans, vice president: F. A. De Vilbiss, secretary, and O. I. Leuenberger, treasurer. The directors are G. E. Ellison, O. A. Brown, and T. B. Berberich. The above organization was formed through the diligent work of Mr. Harris and a few of his friends who were raising rabbits more for a pleasure than for commercial purposes.

The local organization was formed at the home of Mr. Harris, June 10, 1915, at that time there being only ten members, while today the local organization is composed of thirty. The national organization is composed of fifteen hundred members.

A Large Entry

Mr. Harris states that a large and enthusiastic number of exhibitors from Ohio, Michigan and Indiana have entered into the Fort Wayne show, and the number of entries will exceed one hundred.

A great variety of breeds of rabbits are raised in Fort Wayne, among those being the Rufus Red, Flemish Giant, the New Zealand Red, Angora. White Beauties, Jet Black Giant, German Checks, Dutch Belted, English Spot, Blue Vienna, Himalayan, and the Golden Tan, and last, but not least, as in the poultry industry, the common utility rabbit.

The Judges

The coming exhibition will be conducted under its own officials, having no official connection with the poultry department. C. S. Gibson, of Detroit, secretary of the national association, and John N. Fehr, of Indianapolis, will serve as judges at the Fort Wayne show. Mr. Gibson has served as judge at the San Francisco and Tacoma shops, having also been secured to judge the Chicago show.

Many Prizes

The local club has made special arrangements for the awarding of a large number of special prizes, in addition to a large amount of cash prizes and ribbons. The exhibition promises to be the largest ever held in the middle west.

A Vast Industry.

The raising of rabbits in America is practically a new industry, but is multiplying rapidly.

California now ranks as the leading producer of rabbits in America, there being thousands of pounds or rabbit meat shipped to San Francisco and Los Angeles markets each week.

A Large Club.

One club in Germany has a membership of 40,000, mostly all of which are engaged in raising rabbits for meat. The large hospitals of European countries possess their own "rabbitry."

The Poultry Assoiation

The Poultry Fanciers' association of Allen county is now one of the very strongest organizations in the United States. Steadily from year to year the Fort Wayne poultry show has been climbing upward until it now ranks as one of the leading shows in the middle west. Not only this, however, but Fort Wayne also ranks as one of the greatest centers of fancy poultry in America. A large number of Fort Wayne fanciers have a national reputation as breeders and advertisers. Thousands of dollars have been spent by breeders in and around Fort Wayne for fancy poultry and each year they are spending more money in that line.

Members and Entries

The entries for the exhibit closed at 6 p. m., on January 6th. The following are the members of the associations and their respective breeds:

The Judges

As has been the custom of the association in past years, great care and judgment has been used in the selection of judges for the exhibit. The show this year has already given so much promise of eclipsing the shows of past years that it has been decided to use the services of three competent judges, these being, Geo. H. Northrup, of Granville, N. Y.; H. A. Pickett, of Mattoon, Ill., and A. E. Hamlin, of Angola, Ind. These men have judged some of the biggest shows in the middle west including Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and many other prominent shows.

Many State Meetings.

In connection with the present show the state meets of the following clubs will be held here: American White Orphington club, National Partridge Wyandotte club, National Single Comb White Leghorn club, International Single Comb Black Minorca club, American Single Comb Brown Leghorn club, and the American Houdan club.

Merchants Respond

A vast amount of interest has been shown the association by the merchants of the city, who have shown much generosity in donating many handsome silver cups to be awarded to the winners.

Poultry for Pleasure and Profit

Not very many years ago it would have been a hard matter for a person to have found very many people in Fort Wayne who raised poultry for pleasure. People in general in those days looked upon poultry as the farmers of today do, the good woman's work. For profit the ladies got just what the poultry was inclined to produce, no pains as to their feeding, housing and the like being given them.

But today all is different and a man or woman who can breed poultry intelligently is looked upon as a business man or woman, and the by-products of the business are eagerly sought after at about any reasonable price the producer wishes to ask. As for pleasure, you will find perhaps as many people keeping poultry today as those following other pleasurable pursuits, and for profit everybody seems to be keeping them. You can find a flock in nearly every back yard, and many of the thoroughbred kind, too.

There are many branches of poultry raising that affords much pleasure as well as profit. The pleasure and profits derived from poultry raising are such as will bring into action more important matters. People have learned that it takes as much skill to raise good chickens and to produce an abundance of eggs as it does to do anything else one might think of taking up. The poultry industry is no longer a small thing. The great American hen and her products are said to be worth a billion dollars.

Champion of World

Fort Wayne now has the distinction of raising the champion bird of the world. W. D. Holterman, the widely known breeder of Aristocratic barred rocks, recently having won this distinction at the great Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco, this show being the largest poultry show ever held in the country, there being on exhibition 7,725 specimens of the poultry industry.

This bird will be on exhibition at the Fort Wayne show.

In speaking of his recent winning, Mr. Holterman gives his views on poultry raising: "I did not begin raising poultry for merely the profit that was in it," he says, "but it was to escape the same routine of business each and every day. I find no better means of refreshing my mind and body than by raising thoroughbred poultry, and for the man that is seeking recreation as well as profit, the raising of poultry is a pleasure to which many men and women turn. It is not the same routine of business that so many of us are compelled to go through each and every day, it is a business that varies, a business that requires but little capital, a business that can be carried on by any man that will go to his home after a day's work in the shops or office and turn away from his cares and worry with a sigh of relief and become an enthusiastic poultryman, and therefore the industry is open to anyone who is seeking recreation as well as profit."

The Officers

J. C. Howenstein, one of the leading business men, is at present secretary of the association, and it is through his constant work that the association has shown its steady increase in memberships. The other officers are: W. D. Holterman, president, and Fred C. Lang, vice president. The board of directors consists of the following: W. D. Holterman, W. L. McMillen, John F. Rissing, Fred C. Lang, S. M. Holtzman, Theo. Ebbert, J. C. Howenstein, John Logan, Henry Wiegand and John Terry.

PAYS TAXES ON CHURCH LOT

Mrs. August Covey, of Attica, Asks That $772.72 Be Returned

Covington, Ind., Jan. 15—Mrs. August Covey, of Attica, has been paying taxes since 1898 on a lot owned and occupied by the Christian church in that city, having paid $772.72. A bill for the amount was filed with the commissioners last week, but they refused to pay the claim, acting on the advice of Dale J. Crittenberger, state auditor, who believes the matter can only be adjusted by special act of the legislature. Suit will probably be filed against the county.

TURN SLUM GIRL INTO A LADY

Art of Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell Seen in "Pygmalion."

Though he does not say so, clothes play an important part in the transformation of Bernard Shaw's heroine, Eliza Doolittle, from a flower vender of the London slums into a 'lady,' fit to associate with west end society and be presented at Buckingham palace. As a scientific experiment, Henry Higgins, a professor of phonetics attemps to work the transformation by teaching Eliza to speak pure, high-bred English instead of her wretched jargon of slang and cockney dialect. He succeeds in doing this and in the process Eliza becomes a fixture in the professor's household and wins a warm place in the hearts of its other members.

That is the plot of Mr. Shaw's play, "Pygmalion," which is to be presented to theater-goers of this city. It is unfolded into five entertaining acts, enlivened by constant flashes of the celebrated Shawvian wit and epigrams, and made interesting by the delightful acting of Mrs. Patrick Campbell and her excellent company. Magda, Paula Tanqueray and Lady Patricia completely sinks her personality in the ignorant, vulgar but good-hearted girl of the slums. When she first appears, she is hardly recognizable in Eliza's ragged dress and dirty apron and she has chosen a most ludicrous costume for Eliza's visit to the professor when she goes to ask him to make a "lady" of her. In a shabby purple skirt, a ragged dirty white apron, an orange waist, a black scarf and Persian border, and a purple velvet hat trimmed with straggling plumes, purple, blue, green and scarlet, she makes the audience roar with laughter.

Promptly upon being received by the professor as a pupil, Eliza is relieved of her inharmonious garments and blossoms out in a gorgeous Japanese kimono of apple green silk embroidered in gold and red.

In the next act she attends an "at home" in the apartment of Mrs. Higgis, the professor's aristocratic mother attired in a brilliant dress of black silk with a design of clusters of pink roses and green leaves. The skirt is draped in a panier fashion and slit lightly in front. A broad black velvet girdle, a white mouseline collar fringe on the sleeves and bodice front finish the costume. She wears a heavy jet necklace and close cap-like hat of black velvet with large loops.

In the fourth act Mrs. Campbell wears a striking evening gown having a skirt of coral brocade and bodice girdle of sky-blue satin, sash of blue satin is drawn from the waist line at the front around to the back at knee heighth. A lattice of brilliants pass over the shoulders. The upper part of the bodice is of splendid white lace. Over the back and sides of the skirt falls a straight tunic of white lace edged with silk fringe. A cluster of pink roses is worked at the waistline, and Eliza's long pearl necklace would excite the envy of a duchess.

In the last act Mrs. Campbell appears in a very handsome gown of oyster panne velvet, with a full hanging tunic, hanging from a bib yoke of white crepe with applique of black net outlined with silver and brilliants. The bodice and sleeves are made of appliqued crepe and the collar and reverse of velvet. An ornament of brilliants is placed at the hem of the skirt in front and two pink roses are tucked into the corsage. With this she wears a shepherdess hat of black velvet, having a wide black moire ribbon stretching across the front of the crown, tied at the left side of the brim and hanging in two long ends. A pink rose is fastened to one of the ends.

COUNTESS OLGA VON HATZFELDT,

"NEWLYWEDS AND THEIR BABY"

Lively Attraction Comes Thursday Matinee and Night.

As a theatrical attraction "The Newlyweds and Their Baby," that comes to the Majestic Thursday matinee and night, meet requirements in every particular. Indeed it is doubtful whether George McManus himself could have improved upon the face, figure and form of Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt, who plays the part of Mrs. Newlywed. She is there with the marcel waves, dreamy eyes, cherry lips, full bust, tight fitting dress, short skirt and all, including even the mushy talk which she hands out to Papa Newlywed and her wild ideas as to the capabilities of the baby.

But the baby! He, of course, is the center of attraction through the entire performance—that is while he is not lost to sight through the operation of the kidnappers and other unscrupulous persons seeking to ruin the Newlyweds' happiness and to wreck their family circle. Harold West, although he is twenty years of age, makes an acceptable, presentable and lovable baby, even in spite of the fact that he must bear with all the handicaps of facial expression, starchy clothes and inability to say more than "Da, Da," that McManus gave him to start with. Harold West's ability is not fully shown until he appears as Major Knott Much. Then he shows that notwithstanding his diminutive size he is a mighty clever actor. The course of the play calls him to change from the major to the baby, and from baby to major—innumerable times, and he is always equal to the occasion.

The company numbers 40 and 1-2 people, the 1-2 of course, being the baby. The chorus is attractive and knows how to sing. The number of clever vocalists and splendid stage settings are among the features that go to make the "Newlyweds" a show of more than ordinary entertaining powers.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

World's Greatest Spectacle Coming to Majestic Soon.

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward D. W. Griffiths' wonderful new art of pictorialized musical spectacle, will be the attraction at the Majestic theater for one week, beginning Monday night, Jan. 24, with daily matinees thereafter.

The first half of this great picture exhibits the salient events of the civil war, which came to a close at Appomattox fifty years ago, Lincoln's call for volunteers, Sherman's march to the sea, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theater. In the second half the south's "second uprising," this time against the carpet bag regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "little confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintains two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heartache and pathos of the stricken south are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. 18,000 people and 3,000 horses. There are 5,000 scenes in this great spectacle and it cost $500,000 to produce. On the musical side, Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This is played by an orchestra of thirty. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentment" of long ago seem most realistic. Among the popular favorites in the large cast are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Spottiswoode Aiken, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis and Mary Alden.

The sale of seats will be open Thursday morning, but mail orders containing remittances will receive careful attention. There are two performances daily after Monday, at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m., and the entertainment runs three hours.

AT KEITH PALACE

TWO SHOWS THIS EVENING.

New Palace Will Present Twin Bill Tonight—Song Revue.

The New Palace will present a double bill this evening with the first show opening at 7:30 o'clock and the curtain rising on the second show at 9:15 o'clock. These two shows will be given by the big bill headed by the Dwight Pepple's "Song and Dance Revue of 1915," with Virginia Luby, Martha Boggs and Martha Courtney leading a bevy of other pretty girls through a melange of song and dance hits that include the latest vogues in both branches of amusement endeavor. It's a darling of an act with a polish and finish that will not easily be forgotten.

The sketch, "Billy's Santa Claus," is a novel trick in which J. C. Lewis, jr., the clever little surprise of a boy actor, is the principal figure. J. C. jr.'s little sister and big sister are in the same sketch which is neatly arranged to exploit their individual talents while unraveling at least a semblance of a plot hinging on the return of Billy's dissolute papa on Christmas eve. "The Mudtown Minstrels," Creighton, Belmont and Creighton; Hawley and Hawley; Wilfred Dubois, the eccentric juggler, and the New Palace movie program complete this bill which closes this evening.

The bill for the first half of the coming week has another of the big Menlo Moore acts on it. This girl act is entitled "The Live Wires." It is in no wise a burlesque show, but is one of those tasty bits of vaudeville for which the name of Menlo Moore is famous. Jack Pearl and Herman Meyer are the principal fun-makers with this striking comedy. Nip and Tuck in bits of aerobatic nonsense; Bernham and Irwin will present their song sketch at the piano, with the Melnotte Twins in songs, laces and graces on the same bill. Phil Roy and Arthur Roy are to do their novelty farce comedy, "Fun in a Dining Car," one of the real laughing acts of the season.

Bevy of Beauties in Song and Dance Revue at New Palace.

AT THE TEMPLE.

VAUDEVILLE AT TEMPLE

Four Acts and Pictures With Change of Bill During the Week, to Be the Policy.

The coming week the Temple theater will return to its former love and will offer a vaudeville program of four acts and two reels of moving pictures. The bills for the first half of the week will play an engagement closing on Wednesday night, and will be followed by a new show, opening Thursday afternoon and closing on Saturday night. Three shows will be given daily, 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7:30 and 9 in the evening. The feature of the first bill will be Geo. Lovett, Mlle. Zenda and the Original Mercedes Crane, an act that was featured over the Pantages Circuit, having just closed on that time. Their work has in the past proved such a sensation that it has been found advisable to play them for the entire act week, in place of a half a week, as will be done with the other acts booked at the Temple.

Another novelty new to the vaudeville patrons of this city will be a boxing Kangaroo. This animal boxes with his sparring partner, and aside from showing ring generalship, it offers a brand of comedy that has no equal. Will H. Field will also be a furnisher of laughs. This comedian has played this city before and at that time made for himself a large following on account of his way of telling droll jokes and singing the present day song hits. Juggling Wilbur and two reels of pictures make up the bill for the first half of the week.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

"THE WINGED IDOL."

A Great Picture at the Jefferson Last Times Today.

"The Winged Idol," featuring Katherine Kaelred and House Peters, scored a lasting success at the Jefferson yesterday. The play is strong and unusual and was presented in a most artistic manner. The stage settings are elaborate and the gowns worn by Miss Kaelred are magnificent, especially the head dress. These are of the latest designs as worn by the noblewomen of the Russian court. Miss Kaelred is characterized as the most accomplished "vampire woman" on the American stage and as the Russian Countess she maintains her reputation, and she gives a wonderful interpretation of the part. House Peters, as the derelict, gives a performance that contributes materially to the enforcement of a fine theme. The subtitles are also a strong contributing factor to "The Winged Idol," lending it dignity and dramatic value. The last showing is today.

DEAD WIFE'S BODY LAY BESIDE SICK HUSBAND

Indianapolis Man Too Ill to Summon Aid When Death Claims Wife.

Indianapolis, Jan. 15.—Tatrino Salvatore, 26, was taken to the city hospital yesterday and from the same bed of tattered rags the body of his young wife, Felicita, was removed to the city morgue. Felicita's body had lain beside her husband in an unheated room for many hours, Tattrino being too ill from pneumonia to summon aid. Mrs. Salvatore had expected to become a mother within a few days.

Salvatore, a laborer, had been out of work for some time and was stricken with pneumonia. He had no furniture except a bed. There was no stove. The wife "picked" coal, which was burned in an iron cooking pot placed near the bed.

The Salvatores were given their supper by kindly neighbors Thursday night. When they lay down on their bed of rags, they were hopeful, for Tatrino had been promised a job as soon as he could work. He awakened about 4 o'clock yesterday morning and found his wife had died during the night. He attempted to summon help, but was unable to leave the bed and his feeble cries brought no response. The tragedy was discovered in the afternoon by an acquaintance of the couple, who came to call. A physician said Mrs. Salvatore probably died from a sudden attack of pneumonia brought on by her condition and by ill nourishment and suffering from the cold. Salvatore's condition is serious.

AT THE TEMPLE.

The final performance of the Temple Players in "The Lure" and the end of stock at the Temple theater occurs this evening and it is certain that there will be a big throng present for the event. The Temple Players have made hundreds of warm friends during the time that they have been here and all these friends will be on hand this evening to pay their farewell respects to all of their favorites.

Miss Ethel Hamerick and Frank Gallagher, the leading actors in the Temple Players, will come in for an ovation. These two have made a bigger hit during the time that they have been playing in this city than any other actors ever seen here. Miss Hamerick and Mr. Gallagher have great roles in "The Lure," and though hundreds of people have seen them play them during the run of this drama at the Temple, those who have not yet had the pleasure of seeing them in "The Lure" will want to do so this evening.

Next week vaudeville will be the attraction at the Temple theater and the vaudeville will start at the home of vaudeville with George Lovett, Mlle. Zenda and the Original Mercedes Crane as the headliners. These people are among the biggest acts in vaudeville.

AT THE LYRIC.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" will be shown at the Lyric for six days the coming week.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a pictorial propaganda calling to arms defenseless America. It is a plea against war, not for war, urging as its battle cry a preparedness for war in time of peace.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a photo spectacle with a mission. It was written and produced by J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Vitagraph company, in an effort to awake in every American a desire to protect his loved ones. The story, based on Hudson Maxim's book, "Defenseless America," is educational in its description of submarines, aeroplanes, torpedo boats and other implements of warfare. It compares America to other countries and shows with a clearness the comparative size of our army and navy. Hudson Maxim appears and by means of small models illustrates on the screen the needs of our country.

A special musical program has been arranged for this picture. The admission price will be 10 cents and 25 cents.

Concert at the Scottish Rite Cathedral tomorrow, January 16th, at 3 o'clock. All Masons, their families and their friends are cordially invited.

Robert Fox has returned from a business trip to Grand Rapids, Mich.

WIFE SLAIN DURING HUSBAND'S ABSENSE

Mrs. Elmer Thornburg Beaten to Death With Club Near Elkhart.

Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 15.—The body of Mrs. Elmer Thornburg, 40 years old, wife of a farmer, who had been brutally murdered with a club, was found yesterday afternoon in bed at her home twelve miles north of this city. Her head had been battered with a stick of wood which lay near the bed. No one was in the house when the body was found, and it is not known when the crime was committed. A nephew, Sylvester Thornburg, who has been employed on the farm, has disappeared and is being sought by the sheriff.

The woman's husband is in Albany, near Muncie, where he went on a business trip early in the week. The murder was discovered by Thomas Shriner, whose farm adjoins the Thornburg place.

Shriner in passing along the road noticed the shades of the windows drawn and horses with bridles on running loose in the yard. He investigated and found the body. Mrs. Thornburg evidently had been attacked as she lay in bed.

Sheriff Reed, of Cassopolis, learned last evening that a man answering the description of Sylvester Thornburg boarded a train at Cassopolis at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. He has asked the police in other cities to assist in the search for the man.

The Thornburgs came to Elkhart county from Albany last March. The farm they occupy belongs to the brother of a local minister.

will be shown the most noteworthy achievement in the history of motion pictures. But "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" is more than a motion picture. It is a great national propaganda dealing with the most important problem that has confronted this nation since the Civil war—the problem of America's unpreparedness.

If you have a drop of red blood in your veins, you will experience in witnessing this production a thrill such as you have never known before.

You will see the enemy approaching, the powerlessness of New York, the weakness of its forts and defenses. You will see the havoc wrought by the enemy's howitzers, submarines, airships; by its shells, shrapnels and bombs.

You will see the most beautiful sky line in the world in flames, the metropolis of the western hemisphere devastated.

You will see New York fall, the desecration that follows.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" is a call to arms against war.

It was written by J. Stuart Blackton and vitagraphed under his personal supervision.

Scores of prominent Americans in the army and navy, and administrative circles have contributed to its preparation.

The GIRL and the GAME

A STORY OF MOUNTAIN RAILROAD LIFE

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

AUTHOR OF "WHISPERING SMITH," "THE MOUNTAIN DIVIDE," "STRATEGY OF GREAT RAILROADS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY FRANK H. SPEARMAN.

SYNOPSIS.

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scenic railroad, by George Storm, a newsboy. Grown to young womanhood Helen makes a spectacular double rescue of Storm, now a freight fireman, and of her father and his friends, Amos Rhinelander, financier, and Robert Seagrue, promoter, from a threatened collision between a passenger train and a runaway freight. Safe-breakers employed by Seagrue and Capelle, his lawyer, interrupted by Helen while stealing General Holmes' survey plans of the cut-off line for the Tidewater, fatally wound General Holmes and escape. Storm and Helen chase the murderers on a light engine and capture them. Spike has hidden the plans and manages to inform Seagrue where they are cached. Her father's estate badly involved by his death, Helen goes to work on the Tidewater. Seagrue helps Spike to break jail and uses him to set fire to a powder train hauled by Storm's engine. Helen saves Storm from a horrible death.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER IV.

When Helen Holmes took the day key at Signal the little office had already passed from the quiet kind to the remorselessly active kind of those small way stations that drive innocent men mad. Two rival lines maintaining large construction camps and getting all their supplies through Signal station, were engaged in a race to build a mountain cut-off—and a considerable one. Despite all the help Lyons, the overworked agent, could give Helen, she found the tasks of her day about all that her strength would compass. There were little moments of respite. The railroad men were, every one, considerate of her.

Nor could Helen, situated as she was, escape occasional office visits from Seagrue, whose activity as head of the opposition construction camp was unabated. Going over to the station one day to watch his men unload a shipment of material he stepped into the office ostensibly to make inquiries—in reality, to steal a few minutes with Helen Holmes, whom he found busy but alone.

Seagrue spoke blandly: "I hear you're becoming quite a railroad expert." She made no effort to reply. "Getting really clever at the key, Lyons says." Helen, entering waybills, went on with her writing. "By the way," asked Seagrue, evenly, "any word this morning from our steam shovel?"

She looked toward the window—the local freight train had just pulled in. "It may be out there now, on No. 85."

Seagrue seemed in no haste to investigate, and Helen had almost lost hope of any diversion in that direction when the office door opened and George Storm walked in.

He was just out of his engine cab, and deliberate and composed as usually, but his eyes, lighting to greet Helen, cooled when he saw Seagrue. Storm nodded curtly toward him and was greeted in kind. Then the stalwart engineman turned his attention to Helen and Seagrue was soon made to feel the pangs of being distinctly third in the situation and without an anesthetic.

"And the best of it all is," said Storm at length to Helen, "this is my last run on local freights. I am assigned tonight to the Limited."

Helen lifted her eyebrows in surprise: "Some run they're giving you!"

Seagrue took the chance to join sarcastically in: "Right in line for chief of motive power, eh, Storm?"

Storm was not to be disturbed. He only regarded Seagrue calmly for a moment. Then he turned good naturedly to thank Helen. While soldiering agreeably at this task, his fireman intruded on the scene long enough to remind him they were waiting for him to get out. Storm, with an expression of disgust at the interruption, nodded gruffly to the fireman, concluded his talk with Helen and walked out. Helen rose to go out on the platform also. Seagrue intervened to distract her attention. It was useless. She must deliver a message, she said, to the conductor, and Seagrue, peeved, was left to stay with himself or unwillingly to follow. He followed; but even then it was only to find himself watching Storm's good-bys waved to Helen from the cab. And she saw them, too; nothing escaped her attention.

Seagrue followed her with his eyes as she walked into the office. The more she showed her indifference to him—indifference sometimes bordering on contempt—the more she piqued his interest. He turned with better luck to look for the overdue steam shovel. The equipment had come and a gang of his men were preparing to set it up.

Rhinelander, in charge of the Tidewater line camp, was pushing Seagrue closely in the construction race and as the head of a big crew of men imbued with his own spirit was laughing at obstacles that made Seagrue's head ache; and with equipment actually somewhat inferior was forging daily ahead of his rival. But the mail now brought him a note from the chairman of the executive committee of his board that almost paralyzed his activities:

"Oceanside.

"Dear Rhinelander: Our survey party advise that they cannot re-locate the pass over the Superstition range. Unless you can furnish a survey of the cut-off pass before the first, our people will withdraw their financial support. BOWERS."

Amos Rhinelander, sitting at his dusty and littered desk, stared at the abrupt communication. Bowers was his friend; the executive committee of the board were with him—this he felt assured of. But somewhere influences must be at work against him. He suspected Capelle, still a board member, and a continual intriguer. Capelle was a master worker in underground effects and besides being Seagrue's own attorney was himself heavily interested in opposing enterprises of the Coast line. To throttle Rhinelander in the construction effort begun by Helen's own father before his death was to advance his own interests as well as those of his client. Rhinelander's decision as to what must be done to meet this opposition was prompt.

He consulted a timetable, called his foreman, asked for a man to carry his handbags to the station and began changing his clothes for a trip.

Not far away, and at about the same time, Seagrue was reading his own mail. It contained this note:

"Unsuccessful report concerning pass submitted. Persuaded backers to withdraw support on the first. This will stop operation on Rhinelander's cut-off, as we know he cannot produce survey.

"CAPELLE."

In Seagrue's hut a party of newspaper men from Oceanside were waiting to be taken on an inspection trip over the construction.

"I'm ready for you, boys," said Seagrue, in high spirits, to the journalists. "We'll look over the work near here first," he announced, ripping open a box of cigars.

"Hold it, Mr. Seagrue," cried a camera man, focussing on the manager. "We want you, first, right there where you are, at your desk. Hold it!"

The picture was taken, a copy promised to Seagrue within an hour and the party started out. Had he left his hut two minutes earlier he might have seen Amos Rhinelander, followed by Seagrue's own Spike with Rhinelander's bags, entering the waiting room door of Signal station.

Helen, looking up from her table, perceived Rhinelander's anxiety reflected in his manner.

"Bad news, Helen," he said, plunging at once into the unpleasant subject. "I am on my way to Oceanside," he added, when she had read Bowers' note. "The directors meet tonight. Someone is trying to undermine us. But whether I succeed in changing their views or not, I'm going to fight if I have to fight all night."

1—The Two Glared at Each Other. 2—"Rhinelander Has Just Gone to Oceanside!" 3—Helen and Seagrue Were Alone.

Helen was too upset to speak for a minute. For her, so much depended on the success of her own road in reaching the mountains with a cut-off first. Rhinelander, worried though he was, tried to cheer her up. Spike outside, listening, gathered that Rhinelander was on his way to the city. He hung around the platform till the local passenger pulled in, watched Rhinelander board it, and, mingling with Seagrue's men, walked unobserved over to the latter's camp. He found his boss with the journalists.

"What is it?" demanded Seagrue, scenting news in Spike's appearance.

"Rhinelander has just gone to Oceanside."

Seagrue smiled. "Did he get a letter this morning?"

"He did."

Their confab was broken in on by one of the newspaper men who had a print of the photo he had taken of Seagrue at his desk. Seagrue inspected this with the greatest pleasure. "Fine!" he exclaimed. "Good picture!"

A whimsical idea seized him. He wrote a word or two across the back of the print and recalled Spike. "Take this over to Helen Holmes. Give it to her with my compliments." So saying he turned to the photographer.

Spike's reception at the station was always a chilly one. This time Helen took his message and dismissed him before she opened the envelope. When she saw what Seagrue had send she was angry. Her first impulse was to tear the hateful print in two. Instead, she contemptuously impaled it on a steel file near at hand. A moment later, removing the print to file a message, she looked at the picture again. Her attention was attracted to a paper lying on Seagrue's desk. It had been caught by the camera lens. The longer she looked the more carefully her eyes fixed on this object revealed in the photograph. Very curious now, Helen opened a drawer, took from it a reading glass and studied the contents of Seagrue's desk. Her heart almost stopped beating as she realized that her suspicions must be correct. With the aid of the ordinary glass she could plainly see the survey that had been stolen from her father's library.

Helen looked toward Seagrue's camp. It was there even now, and if she could recover the precious find it was not too late to save her own interests as well as those of her own good friend, Amos Rhinelander.

How could she recover it? With fast kindling hatred of its dishonest possessor, a dozen projects for regaining her own flashed across her mind. The more she thought the more impossible it seemed to devise any scheme that could be carried out in time to help Rhinelander's fight that night at Oceanside.

But what Helen could not devise herself, was being already devised for her. Following up what Spike—an unconscionable liar—had declared a flattering reception of the picture, Seagrue resolved to seize a moment while the going was good to forward himself with Helen.

She was studying the telltale print when she heard footsteps and, startled, looked out. Seagrue was coming up the platform. She felt frightened. Could he possibly have realized his blunder and come to demand the return of the picture.

Her wits rapidly cleared. She snatched the photograph. Seagrue, opening the door, caught her, picture in hand. He walked forward pleased. It was not hard for Helen to counterfeit an embarrassment; nor was it in the least unbecoming to her. To Seagrue her look came like a burst of sunshine after many chilling storms. "What do you think of my construction headquarters?" he laughed.

Helen's gaze rested modestly on her table. She seemed to contemplate the picture with a quiet pleasure. Then she looked slowly up at Seagrue. "This doesn't show very much of the camp,"—she drawled the words the very least bit—"you are awfully busy over there, I suppose."

"Never too busy to welcome our friends. Come over sometime."

"What, to a construction camp?" asked Helen, feigning just enough amazement.

"Why not? Talk about Rhinelander's steam shovels! I'll show you shovels that can do everything but vote. Come on along."

For an effective moment she hesitated. "I couldn't possibly," she declared with decision, but she allowed a note of regret to linger an instant in the tone of her explanation and glanced around. "No one here, you know."

"Well, but what time do you get off?" asked Seagrue feverishly.

"Oh, not for a long time yet."

His hopes were burgeoning fast. "See here, Helen; come over and take a camp dinner with me. Come, do. I'll show you what can be done without preparation."

She regarded him with an expression that indicated how completely such a proposal shocked her. She struggled an instant with the thought of it. Then she rejected the invitation; yet with enough indecision to invite a renewal. For the moment Helen was a heartless angler, and Seagrue deluded by vanity was unsuspectingly playing fish. Before he left—in the highest spirits he had known for many a day—he had, to his astonishment, secured Helen's promise to dine with him that night in camp. And at the appointed time she was ready.

The night was warm and a moon, rising full and into a clear sky, flooded the landscape. And after Helen's uneasiness at the strangeness of her situation had worn off, she was able throughout the trying hour with Seagrue in his hut to wear her mask of languid interest successfully. The table was served with surprising delicacies and a plentiful array of wines was in evidence. Yet, to an innocent intriguer, a whole hour never went so slowly, nor was appetite ever more reluctant than that of Seagrue's guest. Though she went through the form of eating and assumed a carefree air, his food choked her. His wines she persistently declined; but that did not dismay Seagrue, who drank quite enough for two.

Where could the survey be, now? was the question recurring always to Helen's mind. Toward the close of the dinner, Seagrue, rising, unlocked his desk for a flask of Chartreuse. There, lying in the corner exactly where she had seen it, Helen again beheld the survey, a blue print beside it. Seagrue was pawky enough to close and lock the desk after he had taken the flask out. How, she asked herself, was she to get that desk open again?

Seagrue dismissed his serving man, and this did not allay Helen's uneasiness for herself. She did not want to be left alone a minute with him now; things were getting too complicated. But could she in some way get into the desk?

Rising, she said she would clear the table a little. Taking hold of the flask he had just taken from the desk and holding out her hand with a smile she asked him for his keys. Seagrue was in no position to refuse so intimate a request. With an air of camaraderie he handed them over and Helen pushed back the cover of the desk. But as she did so Seagrue threw his arms around her. She struggled indignantly, but could not get away. For a moment there was a fierce struggle. Then with a superhuman effort she tore herself free, caught up the first thing she could lay her hand on—it happened to be a bronze match tray—and struck Seagrue across the forehead.

He went completely over, leaving Helen horror-stricken at what she had done. She listened. Outside she heard no sound. Seizing the blue print that lay under her hand, she gained the door and ran out just as Seagrue regained his feet. She had resolved to flag the Limited. Hardly touching the earth, she dashed to the station, hurried to the key and telegraphed Rhinelander:

"Have blue print of survey. Will be on Limited.

"HELEN."

It was not too soon. Through the window she saw Seagrue rushing down the platform. She slammed the office door shut and locked it. Seagrue threw himself viciously against it. The lock held, but she must get away at once. There was a window in the freighthouse and she ran into the freightroom. Seagrue had snatched up a stone. He reached the operator's window only to see Helen, who had sprung through the freighthouse window, running up the track. He followed her at top speed. Intent on escaping, she gave no thought to where she was running; it was only to get away from her hated enemy and save what she had so hardly regained. Helter-skelter through a grove of scattered oaks that fringed the hills above the sea, on and on she ran, until breath and strength were deserting her, but at every turn her detested pursuer was fast upon her heels. Between his lunging footfalls she could hear his panting threats, and the clearness of the night gave her little chance to elude his savage pursuit. She realized she was running across what had been her own father's great estate. The ocean spread suddenly below her. She had reached Signal Bay and the precipitous cliffs that frowned high above it. Like a frightened fawn she ran up the rocks and down only to hear Seagrue breathing maledictions close behind and with the distance steadily lessening between her and certain capture. Brought at last to bay, she darted down the cliffs to find a hiding place. Not a nook or cranny offered a hope of concealment and a misstep where she trod meant certain death. Panting and bewildered, she heard Seagrue climbing down the ledge on which she had found a narrow foothold. Her escape was cut off and Seagrue descended triumphantly toward her. She warned him back.

"Give me that blue print!" he shouted with an oath.

"Keep away from me," Helen panted. "You're a wretch. I'll never give it to you. I'll die first. Don't you dare come down here! I'll drag you over the cliff if I have to go over myself."

Nothing daunted, he came on. There was but one chance left to get away and, unhesitating, she took it. Turning, just when he thought he had her in his power, she sprang from where she stood on the edge of the precipice far out over the ocean below. He stood spellbound. She struck with a great splash.

At no great distance from where she had plunged into the bay a speed launch lay at anchor. Helen recognized the boat; it had, in truth, once been her own, and she had named it The Spiderwater. It belonged now to the owners of her father's estate, but she believed she might borrow it once more. Seagrue, impotent with rage, and following her down the shore, saw her reach the launch and climb resolutely up over the gunwale.

Shaking herself like a duck, and without losing a minute, Helen spread the wet blue print out on the deck, broke the motor lock and turned the launch engine over. She knew the motor well; it was a powerful Loew Victor, and after her second effort it hummed like a dynamo. While it was warming up she cut the hawser. Seagrue easily suspected she meant to get to Rhinelander at Oceanside. He looked at his watch. If he could catch the Limited he could still reach the city ahead of her. Exasperated and out of breath he hastened back to camp, routed out his chauffeur and took his racing car for the station. Hardly a minute was left to him and his hope of reaching a point where he could flag the through train vanished when he heard its whistle and saw the gleam of its headlight coming down the Signal grade.

But he would not give up. Urging his man to speed, he gained the highway paralleling the railroad track, and as the Limited shot by, Seagrue, with all the power that could be got out of his motor, actually held for a time abreast of it. Helpless with rage, he saw the last car pulling gradually past and furious at being balked, he stood up on the seat and as the car drew past him, he jumped over the rail and landed on the observation platform.

Helen was pushing the launch toward Oceanside. The ocean below the bay laps almost the edge of the railroad track, but her heart sank as she looked back and saw the night train tearing up the track and rapidly overhauling her. Instinct told her that Seagrue would somehow board that train in an effort to get to the city first. As the engine drew nearer, she picked up a pair of glasses and leveling them on the cab discovered George Storm on the right side. She waved a signal flag frantically at him, but his eyes were glued on the track ahead. Then, as if by an inspiration, she seized the cord of the air whistle at her hand and in the Morse code signaled for help. Storm turned his head and looked back questioningly along his train; then up at his own whistle. The signaling continued and his attention was finally drawn to the launch now dropping behind the train. Helen caught up her signal flag again. In a flash he recognized her, and calling his fireman over they listened to her appeal.

"Give me paper, pencil," shouted Storm, as he shut off the throttle and listened to the long and short toots that re-echoed in jerky succession from the surface of the sea against the towering cliffs and through the flying cab. On a leaf, torn from a pad, Storm scratched out the signals:

"Have survey. Seagrue on your train. Delay so I can reach Oceanside first. HELEN."

The engine whistle shrieked his answer to her eager ears:

"Something wrong with engine already."

The fireman, learning the truth from Storm, tried to persuade him, whatever happened, not to delay the train. It would cost Storm, he urged, his job.

"What's the job to me?" demanded Storm, applying the air and bringing up the train with a jolt.

Seagrue had made his way into the coach. He summoned the conductor, and being known was accorded every courtesy. But the race was now first on his mind, and when he heard the brakes grinding, and running back on the platform saw fire screaming from the wheels, he called the conductor, demanding to know the cause of the stop. Going forward together for an explanation, the two men found Storm under his engine with wrench and hammer, while in the distance Seagrue could see the Spiderwater cutting the waves like foaming glass and slipping away to where a stormy directors' meeting was in session at Oceanside, and Rhinelander was in the fight of his life to prevent summary action being taken to stop the cut-off work. In vain he showed Helen's telegram, which had come in time to rescue him from complete defeat. But Seagrue's henchman, Capelle, conniving with the disaffected element in the directorate, was pushing to a vote with every prospect of success the resolution to stop work.

"What have we got to go on?" he demanded, facing Rhinelander down. "You know as well as I do we are throwing hundreds of thousands into a project absolutely uncertain. You offer a telegram. What good is the telegram?"

Beside the engine of the Limited the conductor and Seagrue were volleying sharp and suspicious questions at the fireman. He told, reluctantly, of the mysterious launch and of Storm's exchange of signals. No more was needed to infuriate Seagrue, who now understood the connivance. Storm crawled out from under the engine and Seagrue met him with an abusive epithet. The stalwart engineman promptly knocked him down. The crew dragged the two men apart and the conductor ordered the fireman to take the Limited in. Storm, with folded arms, refusing to lend further assistance. But despite his stubborness the big train pulled into Oceanside just after Helen stepped from the deck of the speed launch to the dock. She ran all the way up the esplanade, survey in hand, to where she could catch a taxicab and drove hard for the Tidewater building. There she alighted only to be confronted by two men—Seagrue and an officer. Seagrue pointed to Helen: "There she is! There are the documents she stole—in her hand. Arrest her!"

Before Helen could collect her senses, the officer had seized her and Seagrue had snatched the survey.

"Stop," she cried, "that is my property, stolen from my father. I, not he, am its rightful owner!"

While she protested, stormed and wept tears of humiliation and anger, Seagrue was producing papers to convince the slow-witted official that the survey belonged to him and that Helen was the thief. In spite of all she could say, he won out.

Upstairs the directors were closing their protracted session, Rhinelander vainly trying to hold them together until his ally should appear. The sound of an opening door raised his hopes. Helen rushed into the room and hastened to his side.

"The survey—where is it?" he cried, reading bad news in her face.

She told him of her battle—of how she had been robbed at the very foot of what were once her father's stairs.

Rhinelander put his arm around the despairing girl. "No matter. We know now who has our property, gentlemen. We'll get it yet."

Capelle, laughing furtively, left the room to report to Seagrue. The chairman rapped for order. Rhinelander, trying to comfort Helen, took her to her taxicab and they drove back to the launch together. Dazed, furious at her misfortune, Helen met another surprise at the pier. Storm, awaiting her return there, helped her to alight from the taxicab. She could only regard him breathlessly. He laughed in his reassuring way: "It's really I," he said to her, offering his hand. "I'm discharged—but I told the superintendent I might yet live long enough to discharge him. But I've got a marine license and I'm going to run your launch back to Signal Bay for you."

His robust humor was infectious. With Storm at the driver's wheel, they soon reached the offing in the launch and were discussing the exciting events of the night when Helen's eyes fixed on the canvas covering the deck of the boat. It was on this she had laid the blue print to dry and the impression had been definitely transferred. She seized her uncle's arm, pointed and explained. Rhinelander, jerking a knife from his pocket, cut the canvas from the deck and showed it to Storm, who headed the launch in a great foaming circle back toward Oceanside.

The directors were preparing to go home when three half-crazed people dashed into their room. Rhinelander, Helen and Storm told their story and showed their find. Excited in spite of themselves, the listeners crowded about the table. They inspected, objected and argued. The evidence was indisputable and the chairman called the meeting to order and asked its sense. Sympathy for the plucky daughter of their old president was perhaps not wanting in influencing their action; at all events, almost before Helen could realize it was being done, a resolution declaring their support should not be withdrawn, was put and carried. Bowers, the chairman, clinched his own feelings by catching Helen's hands and congratulating her.

Seagrue—pleased with what he believed his escape from a serious complication—was bound for his camp on a returning train.

LISTENED TO A GOOD LECTURE

Vocational Airbrake Class Addressed by Westinghouse Expert.

The railway vocational class of the public schools listened to a most interesting and instructive address upon "Airbrakes" last night, the speaker being A. H. Berghane, mechanical expert of the Westinghouse Airbrake company, of Pittsburg. The class is composed of railway engineers, firemen, shopmen and others who have anything to do with airbrakes and there are upwards of thirty in it, but, on account of the short notice last night, not more than half of the class was permitted to hear Mr. Berghane. H. A. Burson, airbrake instructor for the Pennsylvania, and Prof. W. E. Gordon, of the vocational school, were present. Mr. Berghane is a frequent visitor in Fort Wayne, coming usually in the capacity of a representative of the Westinghouse Airbrake company.

AUXILIARY'S NEW OFFICERS.

Division No. 18, G. I. A., Had an Installation.

At the first regular meeting in January the following officers were installed in division 18, G. I. A. to B. L. E., by the retiring president, Mrs. Kittie Grubb: President, Amanda Somers; vice president, Clara Walker; secretary, Eliza Rhodes; treasurer, Laura Studer; chaplain, Jessie Polhamus; guide, Jennie Rogers; sentinel, Grace Jones; insurance secretary, Anna Tourgee; musician, Ida Sinclair.

Appointive officers: Margaret Leeper, Fredricka Jornod, Lettie Ferguson, Hannah Segrist, Myrtle Fullerton, Clara Cress. After the installation refreshments were served and a social hour was spent in visiting and reviewing the work of the past year, which has been very pleasant and profitable. The society will be twenty-eight years old March 2 and will celebrate the event in the usual good old fashioned way, no doubt. "It is an event always planned for with much pleasure, as quite a few of the charter members are still living," said one of the ladies.

BOWSER EFFICIENCY CLUB.

The Rev. Elmer Ward Cole, pastor of the Christian church at Huntington, will deliver the principal address next Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of the Bowser Efficiency club. E. W. Lewis, of the card department at the Bowser works, will talk on "Irrigation," and Frank A. Thompson, also a member of the club, will render several vocal solos. The Efficiency club now has a membership of 150.

FRANK MORE HAS RETURNED.

Frank E. More, recently appointed assistant road foreman of engines of the Pennsylvania Western division, arrived home from the C. & P. division this morning. He had been there about a week looking after some special work for the motive power department, and during his absence the announcement of his appointment was made. Mr. More will assume the duties of his new office next week.

WILLIAM HAMILTON HURT.

William Hamilton, a drill press operator at the Bass blacksmith shop, sustained a painful injury at 8 o'clock last night when a piece of metal weighing about forty pounds fell from the table of the machine and struck his left foot. The member was badly bruised just back of the toes, but it is believed no bones were broken. Hamilton had to quit work and will probably be off duty several days.

BURNED BY ELECTRIC FLASH.

Machinist Harry Weber, who operates one of the lathes in the Pennsylvania toolroom, suffered a painful injury to his right hand at 8 o'clock this morning. When he turned the switch which controls the motor operating his machine, a flash of electricity enveloped the member and severely burned it. He will be unable to work for several days as a result of the accident.

AUNT DIED IN LOGANSPORT.

A telegram this morning brought to W. L. Wilt, chief clerk of the Pennsylvania motive power department, news of the death in Logansport yesterday of his aunt, Mrs. Jennie Lighthiser, a long time resident of that city. The funeral will be held Monday and Mr. Wilt will attende it.

MR. HUDSON RECOVERING.

If the present improvement in his physical condition continues, B. H. Hudson, superintendent of the G. R. & I., will appear at his office for active work Monday. Mr. Hudson was taken ill with the grip on New Year's day and for awhile was unable to leave his bed.

RECEIVED BLOW ON HEAD.

J. W. Hodwick, a helper in the Pennsylvania erecting shop, received a contusion on the head at 9:30 o'clock last night, when he was accidentally struck by a hammer in the hands of a comrade. He will be unable to work for several days.

TURNED OUT ELEVEN ENGINES.

A G. R. & I. engine, No. 98, figured in the output from the Pennsylvania erecting shop during the week ending today. The Pennsylvania engines repaired and turned out of the shops were Nos. 7512, 7079, 9076, 9953, 7311, 7131, 7408, 7484, 7517 and 9030.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

E. E. Stegner, crane operator at the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is sick and off duty.

Joseph Sterling, of the Pennsylvania toolroom, is off duty on account of sickness.

The Woman's Union Label league will have a pedro party tonight in Vordermark hall.

Passenger Conductor T. H. Coleman, of the G. R. & I. road, is off duty on account of sickness.

Albert Lacey and George Bennett have taken employment in the foundry yards at the Bass works.

Boilermaker E. G. Rickey, of the Pennsylvania shops, is off duty on account of the sickness of his baby.

E. W. Roembke and B. J. Hayes of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, are off duty on account of sickness.

Trainmaster C. E. Wells, of the Wabash, was in the city today looking after business for the company.

Pennsylvania Fireman A. C. Berdelman was taken sick at Crestline last night and had to "dead-head" home.

B. F. Sarver, general foreman of the Pennsylvania boiler shops, went to Cleveland last night on company business.

H. L. Bovine, formerly employed at the Bass Foundry and Machine works, is a new laborer in the Pennsy erecting shops.

Machinist John O. Bryant failed to appear at the Pennsylvania shops this morning and later a telephone message stated he was sick.

M. A. Welch and W. A. Dalby, machinists, were given employment yesterday in the Pennsy shops. They will start work Monday.

Piecework Clerk J. H. Kern, of the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is on duty again after an absence of a few days on account of sickness.

H. E. Hartman and Ed Hambrock, cabbuilders, and J. J. Pauser and D. Clark, of the planing mills of the Pennsylvania, are sick and off duty.

Conductors W. O. Miller, C. A. Bowman and Maurice Deatrick, of the Nickel Plate, are back on duty after an absence of a few days each.

Mrs. I. A. Herber, wife of the Pennsylvania passenger fireman, will leave tonight for Whiteside, Ohio, where she will spend several days with relatives.

Mrs. W. H. Carpenter, mother of Pennsylvania Engineer J. F. Carpenter, left today for Erie, Pa. She will also visit at St. Mary's before she returns home.

E. F. Needham, general superintendent of locomotive and car department on the Wabash railroad, was in Fort Wayne yesterday on company business.

Wayne Dochterman, clerk in the Patterson-Fletcher store, and son of Passenger Conductor M. H. Dochterman, of the L. E. & W., is confined to his home because of illness.

Arrangements are being made for a readjustment of the wages of the agents and the clerical forces in the transportation department of the Western division of the Pennsylvania. This readjustment will, it is said, mean an increase to many of the men affected. Later it will be extended to the clerical department of the motive power and the maintenance of way.

A. M. Hoffman, chief clerk to Division Engineer R. G. Jones, of the G. R. & I., resumed his place at the desk this morning, after a week's absence on account of a severe attack of the grip.

W. A. Hopkins, assistant general passenger agent of the Wabash, was in the city awhile yesterday afternoon, shaking hands with those of his old friends whom he happened to meet. For several years Mr. Hopkins was division freight agent of the road, a position now occupied by D. E. Gilbert, and in that capacity met the shippers and manufacturers of Fort Wayne frequently.

The older employes of the Wabash will recall Samuel Rogers when they read this item and learn with sorrow that he died at Los Angeles last Tuesday. For thirty years Mr. Rogers was employed on the Wabash as an engineer and later round house foreman at Tilton. He left the road fifteen years ago and went west, being engaged there for awhile in railway work. Then he retired and engaged in business at Los Angeles. Rogers retained a membership in the Danville B. L. E up to the time of his death.

FALL DOWN STAIRWAY CAUSES MAN'S DEATH

Charles A. Meyers Suffers An Attack of Heart Failure.

As the result of an attack of heart trouble, to which he had been subject for some time, Charles A. Meyers, 55 years old, fell down the stairway at the Main street entrance to the Bank building, Main and Court streets, Friday evening, at 5:40 o'clock, to his death. His skull was fractured.

The deceased lived with his son, Roy Meyers, in room 10, of the Bank block, and started to walk down stairs when the attack of heart trouble came upon him and he pitched forward unconscious. Nathan Kaplan, proprietor of the Champion Shoe Repairing company, 130 East Main street, whose place adjoins the stairway, and Abe Greenbaum, who was in the store at the time, heard the man fall down the stairway and were the first to reach him. He was dead when assistance reached him. Coroner J. E. McArdle was called and after conducting an investigation ordered the body taken to Klean & Melching's undertaking parlors.

The deceased had been a resident of Fort Wayne for thirty-five years and for the past few years he was a brakeman on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad. Besides the son, with whom he lived, the deceased has another son living at 1133 Spy Run avenue. No other relatives are living in Fort Wayne.

GERMAN LADIES TO PREPARE FOR SALE

Plans are now afoot for the holding of a German Red Cross fund sale, similar to the one held last year by the German ladies of Fort Wayne. In order to make definite arrangements for the affair which is to be held some time after Easter, a meeting of all German ladies of the city has been called for next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Turnverein Halle, on West Superior street.

At this time a committee will be appointed to make general arrangements for the affair, to select the date and place of holding the sale. The one which was conducted in 1915 was a great success and a large amount was realized for the German fund. It is anticipated that if another is held this year that it will be much larger than the preceding one.

CALL CHARGES WORK OF BRITISH AGENTS

Washington, Jan. 15.—Press dispatches from London telling of the seizure of correspondence from Captain ranz von Papen, recalled German military attache to the United States, when he reached Falmouth, England, en route to Germany, and relating that they showed that he made frequent payments to persons charged with responsibility for blowing up munitions plants and bridges in the United States, aroused the deepest interest in official and diplomatic circles here today.

The development came as a sequal to the withdrawal of Captain von Papen and his colleague, Captain Boy-Ed, the German naval attache, at the request of the Washington government. "I don't believe it," was the only comment Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, would make concerning the dispatches.

In German diplomatic quarters the impression was conveyed that it was thought possible Captain von Papen ha been connected with the published documents by British agents. It wa argued as incredibtable that von Papen, with the knowledge that his ship would be taken into a British port to be searched, would have carried any such correspondence as mentioned in the press dispatches, even if he possessed it.

At the German embassy it was said that the ambassador had paid considerable money to von Papen as salary and for the expense of such work as he was expected to conduct as military attache. Embassy officials had no knowledge of his private bank account or of how he disbursed the money. Officials decline to comment on the dispatches pending the receipts of copies of the correspondence which have been turned over to the American embassy in London for transmission to the state department.

EARLY RAILROADING DAYS ARE RECALLED

Some Interesting Phases of Transportation in Indiana Years Ago.

Franklin, Ind., Jan. 15.—John W. Branch, age eighty-five, who died at the Marion Soldiers' home, a few years ago, was born and reared in Johnson county, and was the first agent of the old Indianapolis & Madison railroad in this city. His employment with the road began when he took charge of a local freight train. Later he became a passenger conductor, baggage master and agent.

In speaking of his railroad experiences Mr. Branch, a few years ago, when a resident of this city, said:

"The construction work on the Madison branch of the Pennsylvania railroad began in 1832, when the first rails this side of the Allegheny mountains were laid in Madison. It was not until 1847, however, that the road was built into Indianapolis. Its construction was a stupendous undertaking because of the steep hill encountered just north of Madison. After much work an inclined grade was cut through the hill, and the building of the road proceeded rapidly. Special engines were then built to draw the trains up and down the steep cut, which is a mile long, with a grade of 365 feet.

No Telegraph or Phones

"There being no telegraph or telephone connections at that time, the trains were run according to printed schedules. They were expected to pass at specific sidings, but if one reached the siding first, the orders were to wait five minutes, then if the other train could not be sighted, to proceed cautiously to the next siding. If a train proceeded past a siding point, one of the crew was sent forward, in case there were curves on the track, to be on the lookout for oncoming trains.

"The passenger trains were limited to a speed of twenty miles an hour, and were required to stop for passengers whenever and wherever flagged. Both passenger and freight engines were built lightly, and burned wood. Frequently the passengers would get out and help take on a supply of fuel for the sake of exercise. The water supply was pumped into a tank by hand. According to statistics, very few accidents occurred on the road under the system described.

Small freight cars.

"The first freight cars were built small and light, having a capacity of seven and one-half tons, which seems exceedingly small compared with the modern car with a capacity of more than fifty tons. The average size freight train was composed of twenty cars."

Mr. Branch made his passenger run from Indianapolis to Madison, eighty-four miles, in about six hours. Leaving Indianapolis at 6 o'clock in the morning he would arrive at Franklin in time for breakfast, and then proceed to Madison for his dinner. A return trip was made to Indianapolis in the afternoon. There were four passenger trains on the line, two locals and two through trains.

Mr. Branch was a son of one of the settlers of Johnson county, Branch station, southwest of this city, being named for him. He had been at the soldiers' home since last April. The body was brought to this city for burial. Besides his sister, Mrs. Pauline Ransdell, in this city, a brother, Minor G. Branch, of Muncie, survives. Mr. Branch was a civil war veteran, being captain of his company.

OVERLAND SHOW ENDS TONIGHT

Special Program Arranged for the Windup—It's Free to Everybody.

At midnight tonight the Fort Wayne Overland Auto company will bring to a close its free independent auto show. The Overland show has been a great attraction all week, affording the people an opportunity of not only seeing the various Overland cars from the Model 75 at $615 to the magnificent Willys-Knight limousine at $1,750, but also gave along with it a most entertaining program of music and motion pictures.

This is the banner day of the show and special added attractions have been put on to wind up the big show in a blaze of glory. Those who have not visited the free Overland show are cordially invited to do so this evening.

CONCERT AT S. R. CATHEDRAL.

All Masons and Their Guests Invited to Hear Fine Program.

There will be a concert at the Scottish Rite cathedral on Sunday, January 16th, at 3 o'clock. All Masons, their families and friends are invited. The concert will be given by the combined boy choirs of the Episcopal and English Lutheran churches. The following program will be rendered:

Whoever Has Foot Troubles

Should pay heed, for while there is nothing more trying or wearing on the nerves than foot troubles, in most cases they are entirely unnecessary, provided one gives their feet the proper attention, and so

If You Have Weak Ankles,
If You Have Broken Down Arches,
If You Wear Your Shoes Crooked,
If You Have Corns, Bunions or Painful Callouses

or have trouble of any sort with your feet, you should take advantage of our demonstration to be held all next week by one of Chicago's foremost foot specialists, Dr. Schramm.

He will gladly EXAMINE YOUR FEET WITHOUT CHARGE and explain how you may obtain immediate relief and permanently correct all foot troubles with Dr. Scholl's scientific appliances and corrective devices for the feet.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW CLOSES TONIGHT

Expenses Have Already Been Met and Everybody is Happy.

Northern Indiana's greatest automobile show will close tonight at 11 o'clock, after a week far surpassing the expectations of the Auto Trade association under whose auspices the show is given.

Hundreds of school children took advantage of the reduced admission fee Saturday morning to visit the exhibition. They were admitted for ten cents.

According to figures given out at the box office fully twenty-two hundred people visited the automobile show Friday, the attendance being swelled by hundreds who came from surrounding towns and cities. More than this number are expected to attend before the doors close Saturday night.

The various exhibitors are highly gratified with results. Many automobiles have been sold and an unusual number of prospective purchasers have been secured.

The expenses for the show have already been realized from the receipts up to date and the money secured from rental of space for the exhibits. Much more expense was incurred this year than last, but the association is well pleased with results and is already planning for the 1917 show.

DIES AT AGE OF 90 YEARS.

Mrs. Doyle Was Only Survivor of Pestilence in 1830.

Washington, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Mary A. Doyle, 90 years old, is dead at the home of her son here. She was believed to have been the only survivor of the pestilence which killed nearly every one of the 2,500 inhabitants of the town of Hindostan, Ind., in 1830.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE FARMER

SEASONABLE WORK IN ORCHARDS

Suggestions for the Control of Pear Blight of Pear, Apple and Quince Trees and Apple Cankers.

In the management of the orchard, especially the apple and pear orchard, there is a period after the fruit is gathered, and perhaps after other crops have been safely harvested, that is most convenient for doing some of the careful work in the control of certain diseases and pests. There are certain fungus and bacterial diseases particularly pear blight and apple canker, which are best worked upon at this time. These diseases are principally controlled by the eradication methods rather than by spraying. With both these diseases it is not only a matter of convenience but it is a fortunate thing that some of the most important work of the season can be best accomplished at the time when it is most convenient.

Pear blight is a bacterial disease which works mostly in the fleshy, growing, tender parts of the tree, including the blossom clusters, young twigs, and the bark of larger branches, and even on the body, collar, and root system of the tree. Under certain conditions the bacteria spread into the wood to a considerable extent. The disease attacks the pear, apple, quince, and other related fruits. While the leaves are attacked to some extent, particularly the leaf stems and midribs of the younger leaves, the main killing of the foliage results from the death of the twigs and branches on which the leaves are located. The dead branches and other parts give no evidence to the naked eye of the cause of their death and thus resemble somewhat limbs killed by fire; hence the name fire blight, particularly with blight on the apple, is often applied.

Pear blight eradication is quite a careful piece of work. It requires close attention on the part of the orchardist or careful training of the help who may be engaged in it. Remember that thoroughness is essential for success. It is not necessary to determine in all cases whether the blight is alive or dead on the lower margin, although somewhat helpful as a guide in determining how low to go. In actual practice it is better to cut out all the dead limbs and all the blight, anyhow, regardless of whether it is a dead case or not.

The blight eradication should always precede the pruning. Other pruning for shaping up the trees may be done, if preferred, before leaving the trees, or may be postponed until some convenient time later, but of course, before the buds push in the spring.

Apple cankers form dead spots on the twigs and branches of apple trees and occasionally extend down on to the bodies. There are several different types of apple cankers in various parts of the United States. Occasionally two or more kinds may occur on the same tree. They are caused by fungi growing comparatively slowly in the bark and killing it. They often enter in the twigs, fruit spurs, or blighted areas killed by pear blight, but may infect entirely independent of these sources. Frequently locust scars, pruning wounds, or other injuries furnish the point of entry, but some kinds of cankers infect directly into the bark.

The blister canker, common in the middle west, is particularly severe after winter killing or after the trees are weakened by extended droughts. The particular kind or species of apple canker may be determined by the grower by sending a sample, preferably the whole area of a small canker or a section of the limb showing the margin, to the Department of Agriculture or the nearest State experiment station. It is not absolutely necessary in most cases to identify the species, since the treatment, as far as worked out, is essentially the same.

The principal method of controlling apple cankers is identical with pear blight, as described above. Where the canker is located on a branch or limb which can readily be spared, and especially if it reaches half or nearly half way around the limb, it is best to saw the limb off, cutting 6 inches to a foot below the lowest evidence of disease, then disinfect and paint or apply the coal-tar creosote-oil wound paint. Cankers located on a large branch which can not readily be spared or on the body of the tree may be eradicated and trimmed out exactly as described above for pear blight areas, using the same methods and preferably the coal-tar creosote-oil wound treatment immediately on finishing the scar.

Cankers do not require the prompt reinspection and retrimming as in virulent pear blight cases, but it is a good practice to look them over the following spring and again in the fall, and rework them or saw off the branch if an occasional failure has resulted. Some cankers behave rather differently from pear blight in that they check up during the growing period of spring and summer and the tree attempts to heal them over, then in the fall and winter the canker spreads again, killing the margin of the new growth. This is frequently repeated several times as the canker enlarges. Such old cases are rather mean to work on and usually, though not always, demand the removal of the branch.

In very bad outbreaks of apple canker, fall spraying with rather thick Bordeaux mixture, at least as strong as 5-5-50, is advisable. This treatment is not usually necessary in most apple districts of the United States, but if the grower is having a real fight against apple cankers, the fall eradication should be made rather promptly as soon as the leaves are off, and the whole orchard should be sprayed with this mixture. This protects the tree against most of the reinfections in the bark and probably kills the spores on the surface of the wood and possibly many minor or incipient cankers.

CAREFUL MANAGEMENT OF BREEDING ANIMALS

By W. MILTON KELLY, New York.

The winter is the most critical period in the care of breeding animals and many farmers would find larger and more certain profits from their farm stock if they would give more time and study to the winter care and feeding of their breeding animals.

All kinds of breeding stock require good shelter—that is, dry, clean, comfortable and so constructed that there will always be an abundance of pure air without exposing the animals to cold draughts.

Brood sows and breeding ewes require plenty of room and will thrive best if separated in bunches so as to prevent crowding and fighting at the troughs and feed racks. Pregnant animals should not be kept with other animals where they will be compelled to fight their own way for a place to eat and drink, as they are more subject to injury and violent exercise is quite apt to cause serious trouble.

Exercise is an important essential in the winter management of all kinds of breeding animals and the yards should be large enough so that the animals may go out and in as they please during every pleasant day.

Many swine breeders make a practice of feeding their brood sows quite a distance from their sleeping quarters in order to induce them to exercise freely and I have found this an excellent plan for many sows become sluggish during pregnancy and will not exercise unless compelled to.

Exercise is not only beneficial to the muscular and maternal development of breeding sows, but it prevents constipation which is one of the most serious problems we have to contend with if our sows are in good flesh condition.

Breeding bulls, boars, rams and stallions should have plenty of fresh air, light, and exercise during the winter. Our animals cannot develop good bone, muscle, constitution, etc., if they are compelled to spend the winter in the dark, filthy, poorly ventilated pens and stables and not allowed to exercise during the favorable weather.

The grain ration of breeding animals had best be made up largely of home-grown grain foods such as corn, oats, barley and peas, supplemented by such purchased feeds as wheat bran, middlings and linseed oil meal.

Clover and alfalfa and mixed hay cut early and cured properly are the best kinds of roughage for breeding animals of all kinds during the winter. We must not forget the brood sows when feeding clover and alfalfa hay as these fodders will afford bulk, which is so essential in maintaining them in a healthy, vigorous, flesh-forming condition. The mechanical condition of these feeds may be greatly improved by running through a cutting box and steaming and mixing with wheat bran, middlings and other mill-feeds before it is fed to the brood sows.

All breeding animals should have an abundance of succulent foods during the winter and these may be provided by laying in a supply of corn ensilage and roots. For breeding sows, roots, vegetables and waste fruits are the best form of succulence and it will pay every farmer to raise a crop of roots to feed his breeding swine during the winter.

Some farmers and writers advocate feeding hogs corn ensilage, but I am not in favor of this practice and have seen no good results from feeding ensilage to hogs.

All changes should be gradual and the condition of the animals should be carefully noted while the changes are being made, so that the animal's digestive system will not be deranged before we can correct the ration.

A PRIZE-WINNING KENTUCKY-BRED MULE

WINTER OATS A VALUABLE CROP

Excellent Cover and Forage Crop for the Southern States in Rotation With Corn and Cotton.

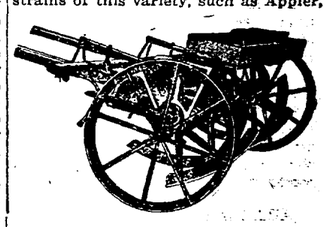
Nearly 4,000,000 acres were sown to winter oats in the southern states in the fall of 1914, doubling the acreage of the previous year. In the same year the same states grew 36,000,000 acres of cotton and 34,000,000 acres of corn. Since fall-sown oats make an excellent crop to grow in rotation with corn and cotton, it would appear that the acreage of oats could be further very largely increased to advantage.

Winter oats supply a cover crop for the land, furnish winter and early spring pasture, and produce a very desirable feed for work stock at a time when it is most needed. They usually produce at least double the yield obtained from spring oats in the same locality. Winter oats are much less hardy than winter wheat or winter rye, the northern limit of the successful production of this crop being marked approximately by the Potomac and Ohio Rivers, extending thence southwesterly across southern Missouri and central Oklahoma.

The results from grain crops in the cotton states in 1915 were, in some instances, rather disappointing because of spring drought, but satisfactory yields were obtained in nearly all cases where the seed was sown on well-prepared land at the proper time. In all the cotton states best results may be obtained if oats are sown in October or early November. In the states along the northern border of the cotton belt this crop should be sown about two weeks earlier than winter wheat, or during the latter part of September or early October. Farther south later seeding is of course possible and desirable. In the Gulf states November is the best month to sow, early in the month in the higher northern portions and toward the latter end near the coast.

Winter oats may be sown to the best advantage on land which produced a crop of corn, cotton, or cowpeas the past summer. If this land can not be plowed at least two weeks before the crop is to be sown a better seed bed can be prepared by thorough disking and harrowing than by plowing. Late plowing not only delays seeding but leaves the soil too loose for the best growth of the crop. Fall plowing in this section should be immediately followed with the disk or harrow to preserve moisture. A more uniform stand and better yield can be obtained from sowing with a drill than from broadcast seeding, though seed sown broadcast and harrowed or disked in on well-prepared land will usually produce a good stand. If the soil is fertile or the preceding crop was fertilized, 100 to 200 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre will be the only fertilizer needed by the oats this fall. About the time growth commences in the spring a top dressing of 50 to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda will greatly increase the yield.

The variety of winter oats most commonly sown in the south is Red Rustproof. Numerous selections and strains of this variety, such as Appler,



Stalk Cutter Designed to Cut Two Rows of Corn Stalks When Preparing Land for Oats.

McGehee, Bancroft, Cook, Hundred Bushel, and Lawson, are highly recommended in certain localities. The Fulghum is a recently introduced variety which matures a week or more earlier than the Red Rustproof and usually yields as well, but it is somewhat less hardy. All these varieties should be sown at the rate of 2½ to 3½ bushels to the acre, the lower rate being sufficient when the seed is drilled.

The hardiest winter oat is the Winter Turf or Virginia Gray. On account of its hardiness this variety is the safest one to sow in Maryland Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, and at the higher elevations in North Carolina and Tennessee. It matures a week to 10 days later than Red Rustproof and does not yield nearly so well as that variety south of the states mentioned. It is excellent for pasture and for hay. On account of the small size of the seed and its free stooling habit only 1½ to 2 bushels of seed of Winter Turf oats are required to the acre.

PROFITABLE HOG RAISING.

To make hogs profitable we must provide plenty of range that we may keep their yards clean and sanitary.

To be successful a man must be particular with his breeding stock.

The breed is of less importance than the surroundings.

It will pay any hog grower to dip all of his growing pigs, at least once a month, to keep their skin in good condition and free from lice.

GET THE PESTS.

When your orchard is bare of foliage, you should not fail to hunt out and destroy all insect pests. All "mummied" fruits found on your trees should be destroyed by burning. They'll spread fungus trouble next summer if allowed to remain.

PROTECT THE YOUNG TREES.

It is time to think about protecting the young trees from rabbits. In the editor's boyhood days we attempted to do this by applying various preparations to the tree trunk, but we do not recall any that were effective. Last winter we saw a young orchard in which tarred building paper, costing 60 to 75 cents per 150 feet, had been tied around the trees, affording absolute protection. Cut in strips, wrap about the tree, and tie with tarred twine. The tar is a repellant not only to rabbits, but to mice and insects, and the trunks of trees protected in this way will not be injured. This may be left on during the season if so desired. The paper may remain around the trunk for two or three years without injury.—Kansas Farmer.

PROFIT IN GEESE

Geese are great foragers and will wander for miles in search of food. This is particularly true of the common kind, but the improved breeds are not as much disposed to wander and for that reason are more easily cared for.

The three principal breeds of geese are the Toulouse, China and Embden. The Toulouse is a very large, grey goose and reaches maturity when about two and a half years old. When fat they weigh about 25 pounds and sometimes an old bird will reach 32 pounds.

Toulouse geese seldom rise from the ground and are, therefore, easily kept within bounds. A fence that will turn cattle or sheep will confine them and they are at home wherever there is plenty of pasture and good water to drink. They do not require water to swim in. The pasture need not be first-class as they will eat with apparent relish a coarse grass and weeds that cattle will not touch.

GREAT DEMAND FOR FARM INSTRUCTION.

The demand for instruction in agriculture in the United States is increasing at a tremendous rate. This is seen in the attendance of thousands at the many winters' sessions held at the various agricultural schools and colleges of the country.

QUALITY COUNTS.

Where hay is high priced it doesn't pay to buy hay to feed any but high-grade dairy cows. The farmer whose herd is bigger than his hay crop seldom can afford to keep low-grade animals.

A SERVICEABLE, PORTABLE HOG HOUSE

There are numerous forms of individual hog houses constructed to be portable and adapted to accommodate a sow with pigs, or two or three hogs. Almost every portable house that is built possesses certain features peculiar to itself and rendered necessary by the circumstances which it is intended to meet. The type of hog house described here has been successfully used on the Government Experimental Farm at Beltsville, Md.

This house presents a very attractive appearance and has proved satisfactory in general service. It is simple in construction and possesses all the essentials of an ideal hog house. It can be moved from place to place whenever desired. The perpendicular walls furnish plenty of floor space, which can be used to good advantage. The doors, ventilators, and roof are so arranged as to provide for ample fresh air and shade. The wires fastened to the roof and lying on it serve to hold up the back for ventilation and to shade the ground. The back is swung open and the hooks that held it shut are hooked in these pieces of wire. In the winter the house can be closed to shut out the cold winds and the roof opened to give fresh air and sunlight to the interior.

In moving the house a good way is to take a chain or a strong rope and fasten it to the runners through the holes bored for the purpose, fasten to a clevis, hitch on a team, and take the house wherever desired.

The runners are the foundation of the house and should be of sufficient dimension (3 by 6 inches) to hold the house well off the ground. Wood which is short-lived and decays when placed in contact with the ground can not be recommended. The more durable woods are fir and cypress. Two joists are used to stiffen the floor, so 1-inch material is of sufficient thickness to make a good floor. The frame is built of 2 by 4 inch material.

The house is covered with ⅞ by 2 inch tongued-and-grooved pine boards, which is very tight and sheds water. Ten-inch shiplap could be used satisfactorily and will reduce the cost of building the house. A satisfactory fender is made by fastening 2 by 4 inch pieces flatwise 6 inches from the floor. Fenders are absolutely necessary for the protection of the young pigs.

Back View of Portable Hog House, Showing the Ventilator and Back Closed.

Paint will aid in prolonging the life of the house as well as improving the appearance. Any good paint which will stand the weather will be satisfactory, but two coats should be given to thoroughly cover the wood. The inside of the house can be given a good coating of whitewash. This will give it a clean and sanitary appearance.

The following material is necessary for the construction of the portable house:

	Board feet.
7 pieces 2 by 4 inches, 16 feet long, for the entire framework.	75
1 piece 3 by 6 inches, 18 feet long, for the two runners	27
4 pieces 1 inch by 1 foot by 16 feet long, for the floor and two ventilators	64
1 piece 1 by 6 inches by 18 feet, for braces on doors and ventilators	9
50 pieces ⅞ by 2 inches, 16 feet long, tongued and grooved, for the entire covering of the house	133
Total	308

2 4-inch barrel bolts, one for the door and one for the back ventilator.
4 button latches for the two end ventilators.
6 pairs of 12-inch strap hinges for the roof, doors, and ventilators.
6 5-inch hooks and eyes, No. 6 wire, to hold up ventilators when open.
2 pieces of No. 9 hog fence 1 by 7 feet, for two end ventilators.
2 pieces of burlap, 1 foot square, for windows.
15 feet No. 11 wire, to hold up ventilators when open.

Nails: 20-penny nails for the framework, 8-penny common-head nails for the lighter lumber; 8-penny coated nails preferred for the tongued-and grooved boards.

SAVE THE MANURE

Manure adds plant food to the soil, and it also improves the texture or physical condition of the soil. This latter effect is often its greatest value. If one wants mere plant food alone, he may often do better to add it in some more concentrated form. It is important, especially in garden operations, that the manure be rotted or composted. This is accomplished by letting it decay in piles. The compost pile should be flat on top and from 3 to 5 feet high. Cow manure is the most desirable for garden or house plants. It does not burn or lose its strength, and may be kept for a number of years if piled under shelter, becoming more available each year. It mixes well with soil and leaf-mold. When once rotted, this manure is very lasting and easily assimilated by plants.

HIGHER HOME EFFICIENCY.

A revolution is going on in the homes of America. It is being brought about by the study of such subjects as health, home nursing, child welfare, foods and food values, textiles and the making of clothing, the family budget, and household management. The outcome will be better health, and greater comfort and happiness for all at less expense.

Because there is a demand for such instruction, and because the ends sought are so desirable, schools and colleges of agriculture all over the country are offering short sessions for the study of the subjects named.

APPLES ARE HEALTHFUL.

Stick to the great American apple as at least a harmless component part of the national dietary. It is fairly packed with the austere New England virtues. Its flavor suggests prudence and self-control, and its juices symbolize intellectual pleasures.

FRUIT SHOULD BE PLENTIFUL.

The farmer can raise his own fruit cheaper than he can buy it, says one. No he can't; that is, some farmers can't, for a pound of dried peaches and a quarter's worth of prunes will last the entire season. The live farmer who wants to enjoy life as he goes along can raise fruit cheaper than he can buy it for he will want the fruit in its season from the earliest strawberry to the last of the winter apples until the strawberries come again. Fruit used in that way helps a man to enjoy life.

DEEP DIGGING PAYS.

In harvesting sugar beets I use a beet digger and dig deep with it. Some farmers do not dig deep enough and cut the beet, leaving perhaps an ounce or more of each beet in the ground. This means a loss of over a ton to the acre.—H. C. Hancey, Wayne Co., N. Y.

KEEP A FLOCK OF SHEEP.

Sheep are the great enemies of weeds and where sheep can be turned into a field, or a flock herded along the roadside, they will effectively clear up waste vegetation and in addition the trampling of their feet will destroy many insects. The sheep at the same time turn waste material into mutton and all they require is a little grain for finishing. Frequently when sold they return a profit, but the entomologists hold that even if they merely pay for the extra grain they eat their function in destroying weeds and keeping down insects makes their use well worth while.

A LITTLE HORSE SENSE.

Don't feed irregularly.

Don't water horses at public watering troughs.

Don't try to doctor a glandered horse.

PRUNING TREES.

Don't think that a tree's welfare or rapid growth depends upon the large amount of "top" you leave on it. "The larger the top the slower the growth" is a good rule to go by. Shorten in the side branches and head back the leading shoots. Don't be afraid to use the knife or the pruning shears. Remember that the tree has lost during its removal from the nursery much of its root system, therefore the top should be cut away until it corresponds somewhat with the lessened root supply. When setting the tree, don't forget to trim away all dead or broken roots.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH.

In order to keep flowers in water they should have an inch or so of the stem cut off every day. If the stem is hardwooded, split it about one inch. This will allow the water to pass into the stem more easily.

THE BROOD SOW'S FEED.

The daily ration should include little or no corn. Oats, shorts and wheat bran are good. Ground rye and wheat bran are also excellent.

Whatever the feed do not make a radical change at farrowing time. Three days before farrowing shut the sow up alone and feed a light ration.

After farrowing give the feed in the form of a slop for about a week but the first 24 hours she will be better off with nothing but fresh water.

COW-TESTING ASSOCIATION.

The best thing for any dairying locality is the organization of cow-test associations.

In Denmark the organization of these cow-test associations has more than doubled the value of the dairy herds.

Make up your mind what you intend to do, make your plans accordingly and carry out your ideas.

GOOD BUTTER IN WINTER.

Good butter can be made in cold weather, but the cream should not be kept too long. Add a little buttermilk or sour milk to ripen it and do not keep it longer than four or five days. Do smaller churnings and have better butter. Turn the cream screw to run a heavier cream in the winter and the churnings will gather more quickly.

RURAL PROGRESS DEMANDS.

Greater co-operation in national and neighborhood matters by farm people everywhere.

A system of national highways or good roads, built and maintained by the government.

That margin gambling in farm products shall be stopped.

That local option laws be extended to and enforced in all communities.

Giant honey bees of India build combs eighteen feet high.

How can Bingville ever hope to take her proud place amungst the metro polusses of this country and grow & develup and attrack manufackshuring industries into our midst as long as our P. M. and our biggest and only store closes up its doors and our most respeckted cittizens sets at home huggin their stoves in a effort to keep from freezin to deth.

A cashual stranger passin through this town would think it wassent inhabited by enny humink beings a tall. In fackt its a rare site along through midwinter to see as nutch of a sign of life as a dog on the street.

If the people of this town expecks us to git out a live, newsy, breezy, bellicose & bustling newspaper theyll haft to stir around and do somethink worth while so as to git their names in the papers. When their aint no news to print how can we print it, we ask? We cant we answer.

WAKE UP AND BOOST BINGVILLE UNLESS YOU DESIRE IT TO DETERRORATE INTO OBNOXSHIOUS DESOOETOOD.

TOWN BOOM EDYTORIUL

We take our e[illegible]toriul pen in hand this wk to lash out rite & left about how dead Bingville is at this time of yr and we dont care a whoop where the chips falls. In other words if the shoe fits you, put it on and if it pinches, youll haft to wear it.

It seems to us that every yr jest after the 1st of Janooary trade & bizness & everythink else in Bingville & vicinitty is at a lower ebb than it is at enny other season of the yr and goodness knows that aint sayin mutch for enny other season of the yr neither.

Along thru Janooary and Feboary Bingville is deadern a doornail or a pickeld mackerel, or both for that matter. A stranger comink into our midst at the present writing would think that ther wassent a live soul in the hull blame town and he wouldn't be far wrong neither.

Why is it our inhabitants all dens up and hibernates and remains in a commytose condishion during this period like a passel of woodchucks we ask? Why dont you git out and hussle if it aint for nothink more than a pearants sake so folks will know you aint past on. This condishion of a fairs simply makes our blud bile. Bingville folks jest sticks by the fire and drowses along one day after tother skeercely ever pokin their noses outen their houses for fear they'll git em frostbit.

Tother day we went down to the P. O. to git our mail and the P. O. was shut. Then we went on to Hen Weathersbys store and it was shet likewise. Then we returned home in deep disgust. Eph Higgins our P. M. told us afterwards that the reason the P. O was shet was becuz it was so tarnashion cold that there wassent no P. O. customers and he thort it would be more comfortable to lock up shop and go home and spend the afternoon by the kitchen fire and him a publick sevrant of the guvvernment, too. Hen Weathersby said later the reason the store was closed was to save wood whitch was more expensive than the profits from two seegars whitch was all he sold in the store all forenoon. Thats a nice enterprisin way for the prop of a big business emporium to act aint it?

Lokel Breefs

Dave Larkins of Snake Bend asked us if we would except four hens in exchange for a yrs. subscripshion to the Boogle and we told Dave we would and to bring along the chikkens the next time he come to town whitch was last Thursday but when Dave delivered the four hens they was all deadern doornails and froze stiffern ramrods. Not only that, but they had all their fethers on. We would of kep our part of the bargain and said nothink if Dave haddent went & told a certain party who told us that these hens died from pip. So if Dave desires the Bugle hell haft to pay in cash instid of in hens who have passed away of pip.

Bale Hawkins was neerly frantick with a ole holler tooth akin him tother morning about 1 a. m. Finally Bale stood it jest as long as he could, then he got mad and hauled off and hit hisself a vishish wallop on the jaw knockin hisself sprawlin into the open fire place and burning his hand like everythink. Bale said the burn on his hand so ockupide his attenshion that he forgot all about his toothake. We persoom however most folks would prefer to releeve their toothake some other way.

Mrs. Jerushy Perkins while going out to feed her hens tother morning slipt on the ice and fell on her back piazza. Jerushy throwd the pan of grain into the air and some of it went down her neck and she had to take all her close offen herself to extricate it. Jerushy was purty mad and said the hens would haft to go without their feed until evg. whitch they done.

Bill Hepburn our artistick blacksmith went to work in his shop last Monday morning as ushual but he haddent quite recovered from his spree of the Satterday before over to the co. seat and he was a leetle mite unstiddy in his legs. As a result he lost his balance and fell into his tub of cold worter whitch he cools his iron in and got soaked and ketched a turrible cold in his chest. Let this be a warning not to tetch strong drink.

Widow Hinckley and her son Bud who aint quite right in his head attended church serviees last Sabbath morning. Bud was real good during the services. The only thing he done was to jab a pin into Deacon Butterworth who went to sleep in the seat ahead and was snorin so loud you couldnt skeercely hear what Rev. Moore was preaching about. The deacon hollored out a swear word afore he realised where he was, then he put on his hat and went home.

Lime Peters was turrible sick Friday morning when he woke up with vilent pains to his stummick and had to send for Doc Livermore our veternary & human spechialist. Lime thinks what mite of made him sick was eating a mess of cold sawsidge and haff a mince pie and some doughnuts before he retired the nite before. Lime says he cant seem to handle sawsidge, mince pie and doughnuts at bedtime like he uster being as his stummick is a going back on him.

Pertinent Personals

Nice spell of wether were having if it wassent so cold.

Has your pump froze up on you as yet? If not thats quite a coincidence being as most everybuddys else has.

Iz Gookins while in the P. O. tother day tuk out his plug of tobacko and laid it down on the winder to get at some change for stamps in his pocket and went off and left it. Eph Higgins our P. M. says it aint as good tobacko as he ushually chews, but it does purty well in a pinch.

Hen Smiley who has been sparkin Miss Tilly Watkins over Pea Ridge way for the past six yrs has a nounced that him & Tilly will be jined in the holy bonds of wedlock when spring opens. Well, Hen youve took your time about makin up your mind and yit we spose a person cant be too keerful in choosin a mate fer life being as its a turrible riskky step and most ginerally is a disappointment, but we hope your case wont be.

This seems to be about all the "Pertinent Personals" whitch we can think up at the present writing, but probably others will ockur to us after we go to press. In that case they'll appear in next wks Buggle.

Sam Snyder has purchased a new pung and with that two year old colt of his Sam has a awful stylish turnout. All the girls hereabouts is honeyin around Sam sinst he got the new pung in the hopes of gettin a slay ride whereas before he bought the pung they wouldnt look at him.

Jake Holmes old clock whitch aint mist a tick for twenty years stopt tother night at 4:30 p. m. according to the hands. Jake couldnt understand what in tarnashion made it stop until next day he made a examinashion of it and discuverd to his disgust that a mouse had bilt her neet in the clock and was probly a going to raise a litter of yung ones. Jake says he dont blame a clock for stoppin espeshially when a mouse bilds a nest in it.

These is about all the items whitch we can think of that has happend around the Corners this wk. In fackt things is very dull here, but of course nobuddy can tell when somethink awful or sensashional will happen. In that case you will hear about it later.

NOW AND THEN.

Glad We Cald

Last Tuesday we called at the residence of Abe Witherow to see if it would be agreeable for Abe to pay us a doller or two on his back subscripshion.

Mrs. Witherow came to the door and informed us that Abe was out and askt us if we wouldnt come in to the kitchin and git warm so we done so. Mrs. Witherow had just tuk a cupple of mince pies outen the baker whitch was setting on the window ledge to cool. We admired the mince pies and said so adding that we was allus a great hand for mince pies being as mince pies was our faverite pies. Mrs. Witherow said that she would cut one for us only she was afeard it was too hot to ete and then we said that we allus preferd our mince pie hot, so Mrs. Witherow cut one strate across the middle and then strate acrost tother way making four quarter seckshions to the pie as you mite say and told us to help ourself whitch we done.

We chatted with Mrs. Witherow whilst we partook of the pie and to our surprise we kept partooking of it until we had consumed the hole entire pie. We told Mrs. Witherow this was a great compliment to her mince pies becus a mince pie had to be purty choice when we et a whole pie at one setting. Then we departed.

We will haft to say that Mrs. Witherow is a generous woman and its to bad that her husband Abe is so stingy that he wont pay his subscripshion.

Lige Aint Mutch of a Soddерer

Lige Green sent to a big male order store in Cheecawgo and got a soddering outfit whitch he thort he could make a little extry change with by doing odd jobs of soddering for folks hereabouts.

Lige told his wife he would show her what a grate thing sodder is so he tuk her warsh boiler whitch was almost new and punchd two holes into it and toid her to watch him sodder same until the boiler was bettern a new one.

Well, Lige couldnt seem to make the sodder stick over the holes somehow or other—it kep droppin off on the kitching floor and burning places on the floor and at last Lige spilt some red hot sodder on his leg and jumpt up with a whoop that could be herd all over Bingville and throwd the warsh boiler clean through the kitchen winder breakin out five lights of glass.

Mrs. Lige then chased Lige outen the house with a floormop and told him if he ever set foot in her kitchen agin exept for his meels she wouldent be responsible for what she done to him. The boiler is ruined and Lige has give up going into the soddering bizness.

Martha Ort to Be Keerful

Mrs. Martha Tucker, one of our most respeckted ladies of Bingville begin last September to read a continued love story in a magazine whitch she takes and the story is still continued and Martha says goodness knows how soon it will be finished and if it aint soon shell have nervus prostrashion becuz at the end of every chapter shes read the hero or the heroeen is left in some turrible perdickament that a person woulddent think theyd never git out of. Martha said the last chapter ended with the villain tyin the hero on a rail road track and the train was coming around a curve in sight. She says she was so worked up that she had sick headake for two days and she supposes that the hero must be dead and burried by this time and cant skeercely wait until she gits the next chapter. If we was Martha we wouldnt take so mutch stock in a tale like this—praps its eggsagerated, or praps there aint a word of truth in it.

Amelia Out in Style

Miss Amelia Tucker our raining sossiety queen and leader of the Bingville soshial whirl appeard in church last Sunday morning with a fur thing rapt tite around her neck clean up to her ears. It also cuvvered her mouth and nose and almost her eyes so that she couldnt skeercely see where she was steppin and nearly fell down twict on her way to service.

After church all the wimmen folks crowded around Amelia and askt her if she had sore throat or was she suffring from toothake being as she was bundled up so with fur around the face. Then Amelia in a awful skornful voice told em that if they was up on styles like she was they would know that what she had around her neck was cald a chinchin coller and was the very latest thing out. Then Amelia stuck her nose up in the air and started home.

We can see how a chin chin coller would be very becomink to a girl whose fase was so blamed ugly that she desired to keep it under cover, but where ennybuddy has got a purty fase like Amelia has we shouldnt think shed want to hide it.

Clubs Are Utilized By British Troops, In Attacking the Germans—Other Primiti Weapons Are Used In the Desperate Hand to Hand and Trench Fighting Which Is Now Being Waged

© BY A·R·A

Casting aside bayonets and rifles, many of the English and Canadian soldiers in the trenches have gone back to the use of weapon of the Stone Age and are now capturing Germans by clubbing them into insensibility.

Trench fighting has taken on all the semblance of prehistoric warfare and indeed the troopers, fighting with that wild spirit of the primitive man, might easily be imagined as wild cave men cudgeling their foe with their crude weapons.

Many of the English soldiers have constructed their own crude weapons. They have taken heavy clubs, almost too heavy to be lifted in one hand, have loaded one end with lead and have driven spikes into the base. One blow of such a terrible weapon leaves the victim unconscious for many hours, or kills him.

A recent report from the trenches tells of a daring corporal creeping with four of his men to a German listening post. Such a post is merely a saphead runout from the main firing trench. It is a post at which one listens for sounds of movements and patrols.

In this case the Germans weren't listening very well. The English troopers reached over into the trench and struck them on the head with the cave-man clubs and a few hours later three astonished Germans were recovering consciousness in an English trench.

BOWS AND ARROWS.

While the club is about the most prehistoric of weapons employed in the present warfare there are many relics of mediaeval times being employed. Some of the Indian troops prefer bow and arrow while some troops from Africa still throw javelins. Helmets are generally worn to protect the head against missles dropped from Zeppelins and from bursting shrapnel while shields and breast-plates are employed in many cases.

The great chasm of time that divides the present era from that mysterious period of some 4,000 years before the Christian era, the history of which is told only by the meagre finds of crude bone weapons, might easily be bridged by the imagination were one to draw a mental picture of the wild man of the Stone Age stalking game with heavy club and compare it with the shrieking, semi-demonical wild man in the trenches today.

The weapon of these modern cave men and of those of the Stone Age are the same; their lust for bloodshed and their hatred of their foe is the same, and both displayed the same cunning that made the wild man the victor over both his human and animal foe and today makes the twentieth century cave-men of the trenches the victor in hand to hand encounters with his foe.

Indeed when the fight resolves itself into hand to hand combat it almost seems that the centuries that cloud the past are rolled away and there in the trenches of France and Belgium the wild men of the Palaeolithic age are at it in all the wild frenzy of primitive mankind.

Were it not for the uniform of the soldier and the gun that signifies the twentieth century method of slaughter, one might easily imagine the foes gripped in single-handed combat to be original cave-men.

RESEMBLE PREHISTORIC MEN.

Shaggy-bearded from long absence from the barbers, eyes bloodshot from powder smoke and long hours of watching, skin toughened and browned from wind and sun—when two such trench cave-men grasp each other in hand to hand combat then the centuries of civilization are forgotten, the lust for death of the primitive man grows upon them and they have only one great longing—the longing to kill that was uppermost in the mind of men who lived in caves and fought the wild beasts in that period before the dawn of civilization.

Yet in only a few essential ways do the men of the present war differ from the men of the Palaeolithic period. Side by side with the operations of hunting and fishing, cattle raising and agriculture, with which are connected the preparation of flour and cooking, the people of this period showed other marks of civilization. Among technical arts the pre-eminent one was the carving and skillful treatment of stone, of which weapons and the most diversified utensils were manufactured.

Swords were known and while at first fashioned by hammering and chipping iron ore, people of the new Stone Age or the Neolithic period, as it was known, learned to grind these weapons to sharpness. Later they learned to attach crude handles of bone or wood to their swords and daggers.

The arts of spinning, weaving and making pottery made their appearance in the new Stone Age. In the last especially is displayed an understanding of artistic form and of decoration by means of ornament. Ornament developed into a sort of symbolic written language. The remains of the first dwellings ever inhabited by mankind show a progressive primitive architecture. Intrenchments and burial grounds show the principles of their earth works and the cairns, those structures of huge superimposed stones, witness that the architecture of that time was in its accomplishment but little short of that of the Egyptians.

THEIR ORNAMENTS.

Among the ornamental objects of the Stone Age those particularly important and characteristic are perforated teeth of dogs, wolves, horses, oxen, bears, boars and smaller beasts of prey. How sought after such articles of adornment were is shown by the fact that even imitations or counterfeits of them were worn. Numerous ornaments of carved bones and stag-horn have been found generally diffused; of these materials ornamental plates or beads were manufactured and slung together in the form of chains. Other bead-like articles may have served as buttons or for some other ornamental use or even for technical purposes, particularly spinning and weaving. Large black beads of terra cotta occur. Besides the plates of bone and stag-horn similar ones of stone are encountered. Entire armlets of mother-of-pearl are found and others of stone, handsomely polished, are recognized as of that period. Other adornments are of hematite, jet and even of amber.

In the lake dwellings of the Stone Age are found skillfully polished ear-drops, needles with eyes, gracefully carved little combs of boxwood, and hairpins. Remains of textile fabrics, even of finely twilled materials, and even tanned leather have been found, indicating that the wild men of a forgotten period had many things in common with their brothers of the present age.

In the latter Stone Age it is known men were possessed of domestic animals and a knowledge of agriculture. The dog, cow, horse, sheep, goat and swine may be designated as the domestic animals of this period. Among the animals associated with man as domestic the dog is undoubtedly the first and oldest. It is found dispersed over the entire globe and is absent from only a few small islands.

There is no reliable evidence that Palaeolithic man already possessed the dog as a domestic animal yet in the period of the Drift man, which preceded that of the man of the Stone Age, bones of dogs have been found.

DAWN OF AGRICULTURE.

In the north of Europe, which has furnished authoritative material regarding the Neolithic culture—startum, the definite evidence so far that agriculture even then was carried on and that useful domesticated plants were grown, consists less in plant remains themselves than in stone hand-mills as well as apparatus for spinning and weaving, which point to the cultivation of grain and flax. In the lake regions it has been established that there were three sorts of wheat and two varieties of barley. Flax also was grown in the Stone Age. The variety was a small leaved one, somewhat different from our flax of today.

The wheat also was small grained but mealy. Rye and oats do not appear until the bronze age. Apples and wild pears dried in slices have been detected in the dwellings in the lake regions. The various wild cherries, plums and sloes were eaten as were the raspberries, blackberries and strawberries. In fact it seems that some of the fruit trees were planted near villages and cultivated.

The pottery of the Stone Age is in many ways crude. Fragments of large pots are distributed extraordinarily widely as to both time and space. They have preserved their original form throughout all the prehistoric and historic ages.

In the fully developed Stone Age of Europe clay vessels were all manufactured by free-hand without the turning wheel.

While in regions where caverns were frequent caves and grottoes repeatedly served the men of the later Stone Age as temporary shelters, and to some extent also as winter abodes, in the well-watered Swiss lowlands the primitive inhabitants built their huts on pile-work in lakes and marshes. The Alps of that time must have been heavily wooded and filled with wild beasts. The pile work huts must then have afforded their inhabitants a security hardly presented elsewhere. Those who founded and first built huts in Switzerland belonged wholly to the Stone Age. It is apparent that the people of that era lived together in villages for protection.

BONES AS WEAPONS.

Fishing tackle, deer-horn hooks and barbed harpoons of excellent workmanship have been found in the unearthed ruins of their huts. In several pile-dwellings well preserved ruins of nets were discovered and with them a number of stone sinkers still bound with thread and apparently used in sinking the nets. Further articles of deer-horn such as small goblets with perforations by which to hang them up, beads for necklaces, and ear drops were very skillfully carved, large buttons frequently ornamented, needles with eyes, small combs, arrows, awls and puncturing instruments, a selection of large and small needles and many other things have been found.

Owing to its superior resistance, bone, particularly that of the deer and the ox, was much used for the manufacture of weapons and utensils. The largest portions of the daggers were made of bone and the blade was inserted.

Arrow and lance heads of bone are much more common than those of flint. In mounting the bone lance-head upon the wooden shaft, a binding of thread was used and this then was covered with pitch tar. A number of bone awls and chisels of all sizes have been found, one being sharp pointed, the other set in a handle of deer-horn. The teeth of animals, chiefly of the wolf, bear, dog and swine were perforated in order that they might be worn as amulets or necklaces.

A considerable number of wooden articles from lake dwellings of the Stone Age are known. A yoke of this sort is quite similar to those used even to this day in driving oxen. Neat combs were made of boxwood. Boats of that time made of trees hollowed out, have been discovered and one was 30 feet long. Other articles of wood were threshing flails, spear shafts, bowls and cups, spoons, hammers and even toy boats. Even fragments of tables, benches and doors of wood have been discovered.

REVERTING TO SAVAGERY.

In all of which discoveries nothing has been found to indicate that the prehistoric man was any more blood-thirsty than his brothers engaged in the great European conflict of today.

Indications are that the people of the Stone Age were as domesticated and perhaps more peaceful than the people of the present day. In none of the excavations made by scientists was any evidence found to indicate that these prehistoric people ever fought a great battle either in the nature of a civil war or with an alien foe.

Nothing has been found to bear out the impression that the man of the Stone Age was a brute who captured his bride and carried, or rather, dragged her to his cave by the hair and later killed her father with a club when he came to visit.

History is silent about the warlike nature of this man yet in the present war civilized men of the highest education and development are taking up the cudgel so peacefully employed by the cave-man in the chase and in gaining his daily food by killing animals to eat, and are using it to cudgel their foes.

At least 6,000 years and perhaps more have passed since the time of the cave man and the Stone Age. Yet in the twentieth century, in the trenches of Europe men are proving that their instincts are no higher, in fact not as high, and that their choice of weapons is no greater than it was in that forgotten era before the dawn of civilization when wild men used clubs to hunt food and not to kill their fellow man.

This Girl is Lucky.

"Young man," inquired her father sternly, "will you give her a home like the one she has been used to?"

"No," replied the truthful suitor, "for there will be no grumpy father to come home and make everyone miserable by kicking over trifles and swearing at matters in general. There will be no mother to scold her from morning till night for wasting time, merely because she wants to be neat. There will be no big brother to abuse her for not doing half of his work, and no little brother to make enough noise to drive her crazy when her head aches. There won't be any younger sister to insist on reading some trashy novel while she does all the work. She will not have with me a home like she has been used to, not if I can help it!"

U. S. Submarine Blows Up in the Navy Yard

SAILORS DIE AS INTERNAL BLAST WRECKS WARSHIP

Cause of Explosion While Test of New Batteries Was Being Made in Dry Dock is Not Yet Known

New York, Jan. 15.—The United States submarine E-2 was today blown up and partially desroyed in the New York navy yard. The body of one man killed in the internal explosion was rescued and a report to Brooklyn police headquarters said seven others were killed.

The cause of the explosion, which was said to have opened up several plates of the craft, could not be learned some time after the accident occurred.

Several searching parties, which undertook to enter the submarine, were driven back by heavy gas fumes.

Pulled Out Unconscious.

Several officers who were lowered into the craft were pulled out after becoming unconscious. The one body recovered was found near a hatchway.

Newspaper men were barred from the yard and it was with much difficulty that the report of the explosion could be confirmed through yard officials and all details concerning the accident were refused.

Testing New Batteries.

It was reported that the engineers in the navy yard were testing one of the new Edison batteries installed in the craft at the time of the explosion. These batteries were intended to obviate the danger to the crews of submarines from gas fumes. Recently submarines were reported to have made successful trips with batteries in use.

Later reports that came from the navy yard were that twelve men had been taken out of the hold seriously injured and twenty with lighter injuries. They were removed to the navy yard hospital.

Was Afire Inside.

One man was killed outright and at least nine others were injured in the explosion, according to a navy yard employe who was near the scene of the accident.

The submarine was afire inside, he said, and in order to put out the flames the little craft was flooded. At the time of the explosion the E-2 was on the stocks in dry dock No. 2.

Two of the injured died shortly after they reached the naval hospital.

While Recharging Batteries.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels was at the National Democratic club in this city at the time of the explosion delivering a lecture on national preparedness. He was notified of the accident, but after the interruption went on with his address.

The explosion occurred while the submarine's batteries were being recharged, according to a statement made at the navy hospital by one of the injured men. It was caused by hydrogen gas, he said.

Men working near the E-2 heard a terrific detonation and then saw a great burst of flames shoot from one of the hatchways.

E-2 Was First Submersible to Be So Equipped.

NEW RESTRICTIONS ON GOLF AMATEURS

Chicago, Jan. 15.—New restrictions on the activities of golf amateurs were adopted here today by the executive committee of the United States Golf association. The ruling brings the golf amateur to the plane of experts in track and field athletics so far as getting indirect profits as a result of proficiency in the game is concerned.

Under it amateurs "are prohibited from accepting or holding any position as agent or employee that includes as part of its duties the handling of golf supplies; or engaging in any business wherein one's usefulness or profits arise because of skill or prominence in the game of golf."

DEATH SUMMONS AGED RETIRED CAR PAINTER

Thomas J. Rodabaugh Had Been Employed by the Railroads 56 Years.

A year's illness due to a complication of diseases resulted in the death Friday evening of Thomas Johnson Rodabaugh, one of the best known and most highly respected retired shopmen of Fort Wayne. Mr. Rodabaugh was retired from the service of the Pennsylvania railroad nearly ten years ago after he had completed fifty-six years of active service in railroad circles.

Death came at 8 o'clock at the family home, 1116 Washington boulevard west. The end was not unexpected as he had been hovering between life and death for the past week. Mr. Rodabaugh was 80 years of age last October 9.

The deceased was born in Summit county, Ohio, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rodabaugh, early settlers of the Buckeye state. He was reared on a farm until his twelfth birth anniversary and the following three years he was employed in his father's store. In 1850 he took employment with the railroad company and five years later came to Fort Wayne, where he assisted in track-laying on the Wabash between here and Defiance.

In August of the same year he returned to Fort Wayne and learned the painter's trade under J. J. Kammer. Eight months after he had learned the trade he took employment with the Wabash railroad where he remained until June 29, 1860. At this time he took a similar position with the Pennsylvania

George H. Fink Then Disappears With Valise and Payroll Cash.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 15.—Four hours after he had walked out of the office of the Hercules Buggy company with $17,000 in currency intended for the company's pay roll, George H. Fink, assistant bookkeeper was captured at noon at Boonville by Prosecuting Attorney Ora Davis, of Warrick county.

Fink was accustomed to putting the pay roll money in envelopes for the employes of the Hercules company and today complained that the bank had made a mistake in the sum furnished. He put the currency into a valise and left, saying he would have the cashier go to the bank to have the mistake rectified. Instead he left the building.

Missed in Half Hour.

He was missed in half an hour and when it was found the money was missing search was instituted. The city police and private detectives scoured the city.

HENRY ADDRESSES NEW FARMERS' CLUB

The first meeting of the Allen County Agricultural association since its organization was held Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the assembly room of the court house. A fair-sized crowd was present. George V. Kell, of Eel River township, presided and gave a short talk. The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Clarence Henry, county agricultural agent, who spoke on proper methods of feeding hogs. He reviewed the recent feeding demonstration that was conducted on the farm of Frank Butt in Maumee township by representatives from Purdue university.

RUSS FAIL IN FIVE ATTACKS

EMPEROR WILLIAM AGAIN IN PUBLIC

German Monarch is Making Satisfactory Recovery from His Illness.

Today's War News Given in Summary

The eastern field of war again resumes prominence with the resumption of the offensive by the Russians in Bessarabia. There had been a cessation of activity in that part of the fighting front for several days. Vienna now reports, however, that the Austrian lines have been subjected again to determined attacks, but that the Russian attempts to break through were repulsed, although the attacking forces in great numbers advanced five times to the assault, the Austrian artillery proving deadly in stopping the Russian offensive.

London advices indicate a belief among American commercial interests there that Great Britain will shortly announce an actual blockade of Germany, superseding the trade restrictions imposed by the orders in council.

The front in France and Belgium has been the scene of no important fighting recently. North of Saloniki where the Anglo-French forces are preparing themselves against an expected attack by the Teutonic allies there has been further blowing up of railroad bridges as a defensive measure.

Germany, in replying to Great Britain in the Baralong case, reiterates the charges made against the British auxiliary cruiser's officers, accused in affidavits of Americans on the steamer Nicosian of having refused quarter to members of a German submarine's crew. The German government declares unacceptable the British offer to submit the Baralong case to a tribunal comprised of American naval officers if Germany would submit three specified cases of alleged outrages committed by Germans on the high seas to the same court, Germany declaring that in none of the cases mentioned were German officers trying to destroy helpless persons. In view of the British declination to bring the accused officer of the Baralong to trial, Germany, the official note announces, will take matters into her own hands and adopt measures of reprisal corresponding with the provocation.

BARALONG CASE PROVOKES WRATH

Germany Spurns British Proposal for American Naval Inquiry.

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(Via Sayville.)—In its reply to the British government in the Baralong case, the text of which was made public here today, Germany takes the ground that Great Britain no longer desires to observe the requirements of international law in regard to German submarines and breaks off negotiations on this subject.

In addition to announcing decision to take measures of reprisal, as made known yesterday, the German government rejects Great Britain's proposal for examination by a neutral board of the Baralong incident and also of three cases in which it is charged Germany violated international law in submarine operations. The note was delivered to Great Britain through the American embassy.

The Baker boy's body was not recovered for fully an hour, the Metter lad ran safely from the place, and the little Paulson boy, knocked half unconscious by the fall, struggled from the water and crawled up the bank.

The boys had been playing about the flooded district south of the river channel and almost in the shadow of the Walton avenue bridge, and as night fell they began to dare each other to go out on the thin edges of the ice. "Bannering" they called it, and they had been out there nearly twenty minutes before the cracking ice told them of their danger.

THREE POLITICAL MEETINGS ARE HELD

Democratic Committeemen Meet to Hear Primary Law Discussed.

Three important political meetings were held in Fort Wayne Saturday afternoon. At the call of District Chairman Edward G. Hoffman a meeting of the democratic precinct committeemen was held at 2 o'clock, in the circuit court room No. 2, the purpose being to discuss the new primary law and to make arrangements for the primary election, to be held March 7. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather practically all of the committeemen were in attendance and much interest was manifested.

While the democratic committeemen were in session a large number of republican workers met at the call of County Chairman Stultz in the hall above the Lyric theater. The purpose of the meeting was to talk over organization matters.

At 3 o'clock a meeting of the Traveling Men's Republican club recently organized was held in the Anthony hotel.

Arrangements were completed Saturday for a reception next Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 7:30 o'clock at the Anthony hotel in honor of Congressman John A. M. Adair, candidate for the democratic gubernatorial nomination. Following the reception he will speak at 8 o'clock in the assembly room of the court house. A series of meetings have been arranged for Congressman Adair throughout the district.

the German memorandum in the Baralong case by expressing doubts on the one hand of the correctness of the facts communicated by the German government, and by making an accusation, on the other hand, against German military and naval forces of having deliberately committed countless crimes against international law and humanity which had been unpunished, and compared with which the alleged offense of the captain and crew of the Baralong fades into insignificance. The British government has contented itself with mentioning without any evidence three incidents in connection with naval warfare in which German officers are alleged to have committed atrocities in violation of international law.

Germany Resents Accusations.

"The British government proposes an investigation of these cases by a court composed of American naval officers, and under this condition is ready to submit the Baralong case to the same court."

"The German government protests most sharply against the unprecedented and unprovoked accusations of the British government in regard to the German army and navy and the imputation that the German authorities have not dealt with any such crimes as have come to their attention. The German army and navy in this war observe the principles of international law and humanity and the higher authorities insist that in the event offenses are committed they shall be investigated most closely and punished sternly.

"The three cases mentioned by the British government were investigated thoroughly at the time by competent German authorities.

The Three Cases.

"First, in the case of the sinking of the Arabic by a German submarine, the investigation showed that the submarine, commander was forced from circumstances to draw the conclusion that the steamer was attempting to ram his craft. He therefore believed himself to be acting in justifiable self-defense when he attacked the ship.

"The second case mentioned—the attack of a German destroyer upon a British submarine—occurred in this manner: A fight developed in those waters between two warships, in which the submarine defended itself by gun fire. The British government can have little ground for advancing the charge that Danish neutrality was violated by the German attack, in view of the fact that British naval forces in a series of cases attacked German ships in neutral waters.

"Finally in the case of the destruction of the British steamer Ruel, the German submarine merely applied measures of reprisal announced by Germany in February, 1915. These measures are in harmony with international law because England is endeavoring by illegal means to tie up the legitimate maritime commerce between Germany and neutral countries, to cut off Germany from all natural imports and thereby starve the German people. Appropriate reprisals are permissable against measures in violation of international law.

"In all three cases the German naval forces intended only to destroy hostile ships, and in no way to slay helpless persons who were attempting to save their lives. The assertions to the contrary of the British government must be repudiated with all decisiveness as untrue."

American Inquiry Rejected.

"The German government is of the opinion that it must reject as inacceptable the British approval to submit these three cases, together with the Baralong case, to investigation by a court of American naval officers. It takes the standpoint that charges against members of the German forces must be investigated by its own competent authorities, and that the persons accused be given every surety of an unprejudiced verdict, with just punishment where necessary. In the Baralong case it has advanced to the British government no request other than this, not doubting for a moment that a court martial composed of British naval officers would inflict suitable punishment for the cowardly and perfidious murder. This request was the more justifiable because of the fact that the guilt of the commander and crew of the Baralong was established practically beyond doubt by affidavits made by Americans who are neutral witnesses, and submitted to the British government.

"The manner in which the British government has answered the German memorandum does not correspond in form and contents with the gravity of the situation and makes it impossible for the German government to negotiate further with the British government in regard to this matter. The German government, therefore, takes the ground as the final result of the negotiations that the British government, under empty pretexts, has not fulfilled the justifiable demands of the case and thereby has made itself responsible for the crime of defying international law and humanity, showing that it desires no longer to observe, in respect to German submarines one of the first rules of war—namely to spare enemies incapacitated for further action in order to prevent them from conducting warfare at sea in accordance with established international laws.

"Inasmuch as the British government has declined to make amends for this outrageous incident, the German government feels itself compelled to take into its own hands punishment for this unatoned crime, and to adopt measures of reprisal corresponding with the provocation."

railroad and eight years later was appointed foreman of the paint shop. Several years before his retirement he was made master car painter. He was placed on the pension roll November 1, 1906.

He was a member of Plymouth Congregational church and also of Wayne lodge, F. & A. M., and of Fort Wayne lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F. He held office in the latter organization for thirty consecutive years. Mr. Rodabaugh was also a member of the volunteer fire department for sixteen years and eight months.

He was married in 1857 to Elizabeth J. Snyder, who survives him, as do a daughter, Mrs. Rose Jones, of Colorado Springs; a brother, Adam Rodabaugh, and a sister, Mrs. Jane McFerran, both of Fort Wayne.

Incident of His Retirement.

Mr. Rodabaugh was placed on the "honor roll," as the officials and the employes of the company call retiring to the pension system, November 1, 1906, shortly after his seventy-first birth anniversary. His retirement from active service was the occasion for a big demonstration by the officials, foremen and shopmen, who gathered at his home and presented him with a gold-headed cane and a magnificent electric lamp, which he ever afterwards considered among the most valued of his possessions. The gifts and the gathering were a surprise to Mr. Rodabaugh, but Mrs. Rodabaugh had been advised in advance and was prepared to furnish refreshments and provide other features of amusement for the guests, who filled the ground floor rooms and a part of the upper story of the spacious house. A few days previous the employes of the paint department presented Mr. Rodabaugh with a magnificent buggy. These incidents illustrated the warm sentiment entertained by his associates for Mr. Rodabaugh.

telephoned to its Boonville office by the Evansville, Suburban and Newburg interurban line. Garland Stevens, an employe of the company, recognized the man from the description and notified the prosecuting attorney.

Fink at first denied his identity, but at a hotel he had visited on his arrival the authorities found a suit case containing the missing money and he later admitted the theft. Prosecutor Davis says.

He was brought back here this afternoon. Fink is 35 years old and is connected by marriage with prominent families here.

COUNTY AGENT WILL USE LOCAL PICTURES

Eighty of the two hundred lantern slides of pictures taken in Allen county to be used by him in his lectures were received Friday by Agricultural Agent Clarence Henry, of Allen county. The slides will be used at farmers' meetings, institutes and similar gatherings. In addition to the local pictures forty-six have been selected out of a list of 1,800 at Purdue university.

The pictures take up dairying, silos and silage, alfalfa, stock feeding, special hog work, special horse work, demonstration work, soils and other agricultural subjects.

Mrs. William Salzer Puts Her Sad Case Up to the Courts.

Anna Salzer has begun action in the circuit court against William Salzer for divorce, and states that since their marriage in 1907 he has repeatedly deserted her and that they are not now living together. It is related that once the defendant ran away from home and was arrested in Clinton, Iowa, and brought back to Fort Wayne, where he was prosecuted for neglecting his twin children, now 4½ years old. Besides this the wife says he treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner, cursing her and calling her names too vile to set out in her complaint. She asks the custody of the twins and an allowance for their support. Stephen A. Callahan is her attorney.

Notes of the Courts.

Frank V. Walters has brought suit in the superior court against George and Esther B. Crance to collect $200 on a note and foreclose a mortgage. Howard Hanthorn is attorney for the plaintiff.

Ernest C. Haines sues Louis L. Gerardot in the superior court to collect $105 on a note. McAdams & Hartzell are the plaintiff's attorneys.

Jacob Flaugh has begun suit in the circuit court against Henry Flaugh for partition of real estate. McAdams & Hartzell appear for the plaintiff.

In the suit of George W. Coleman vs. Frank C. Hubler, an action for $5,000 damages for slander, a notary public has filed a motion in the circuit court to require the plaintiff to answer certain questions in examination.

In the suit of Cora A. Ely vs. Lymon D. Burnett, to recover $1,500, the plaintiff says is due her for managing certain business of the defendant and paying his taxes, the defendant has filed in the superior court a motion to require that the complaint be made more specific.

The defendants in the divorce suits of Clara Long vs. Louis Long and Nora Cheviron vs. Theodore Cheviron have been cited to appear in the superior court, January 20, to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt in having failed to obey the court's orders as to payments.

The suit of the state ex-rel. Julius Zell vs. Alfred Horstman and the Equitable Surety company for $5,000 damages, has been sent from the superior court to Huntington county for trial on change of venue.

The suit of Earl Schane vs. George A. Miller, et al., has been set for trial before a jury in the superior court January 18.

In the superior court the suit of R. L. Polk & company vs. August Klein has been settled and dismissed.

The superior court has rendered a finding for the plaintiff in the suit of Essie Alice Thorne Stone vs. Ed C. Gibbony to enforce collection of a note.

The case against George Beach for embezzlement has been dismissed from the circuit court.

The Fort Wayne Outfitters' company has filed suit in the superior court against Eve May and Frank Ashbauch for the collection of $50 and replevin of property and a similar suit against Ella D. Hicks. Somers & Kennerk appear for the plaintiff.

The circuit court has set January 19 for the hearing of the case against Henry A. Wiebke, former proprietor of the Hof Brau for violations of the liquor law.

County Recorder Allen Hursh has received from the secretary of state formal notice that the Pony Cigar company, of Fort Wayne, a corporation, has complied with the law and is therefore legally dissolved.

MRS. PANKHURST IS HELD UP ONCE MORE

Detained at Ellis Island Because She Had Been in Prison.

New York, Jan. 15.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British suffrage leader, was held at Ellis island immigration station today when she arrived here on the steamer St. Paul. Federal authorities said Mrs. Pankhurst was detained because she had served a sentence in a British prison. She was similarly detained when she arrived here more than two years ago, but was quickly released and allowed to enter this country.

Mrs. Pankhurst said her present trip unlike the visit she made to this country in the fall of 1913, is in no way connected with "votes for women," but that she is here in connection with the Serbian relief work in which she has been interested for some time. The suffrage leader intimated that she is here to make some revelations regarding the present situation in the Balkans.

RUSS FAIL IN FIVE ATTACKS

the Austrian official report dated January 14 and received here today.

The Austrian official statement follows: "On the Bessarabian front the Russians have again attempted to break through near Toporoutz and east of Karinezle. Five great attacks failed. The well-directed Austro-Hungarian artillery fire contributed eminently to the repulse of the Russians. Since the beginning of the battle in east Galicia and Bessarabia the Austro-Hungarian forces of Gens. Pflanzer, Baltin and Bothmer have taken 5,100 Russians, including thirty officers. Austro-Hungarian patrols routed Russian field guards near Karpilovka."

Emperor William made several public appearances in Berlin, according to the Overseas News agency, which also states that he took luncheon at the residence of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, and that he was joyously cheered by the crowds as he drove to the chancellor's residence.

HUERTA'S WIDOW GETS ALL.

Dead Mexican Leader Leaves But $1 to Each of His Children.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 15.—The will of Gen. Victoriano Huerta was read today, although it may not be officially recorded for a week. The instrument gives to his widow, Arsemelia Guilar Huerta, all his property, "real and personal, wherever it may be located."

Each of his eight children is given $1, this to comply with the provisions of the Texas law. Nothing in the instrument reveals the amount of the estate.

MAYOR HOSEY TALKS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Tells South Bend People What Fort Wayne City Plant Has Done.

Talking to a mass meeting of South Bend citizens, where a maximum rate of 10 cents is paid for electric current, Mayor William J. Hosey on Friday night showed what municipal ownership had done for Fort Wayne, not only in the matter of public lighting but in bringing down the maximum rate to 7 cents, with the possibility of another reduction in sight. The mayor found South Bend discussing a movement for municipal ownership of electric light, and interested in the project, he told them how, with an original outlay of $345,000, raised by taxation this city had acquired a modern and thoroughly equipped plant now worth $700,000, half of the cost being met out of the revenues of the city's business in selling current. The mayor pointed out that vastly more than the money raised by taxation for the construction of the plant had been saved to the people by reason of the reduction of rates the municipal plant had brought about. The city council of South Bend has a special committee at work investigating municipal ownership, though the city has made a ten-year contract with the lighting corporation there, while the old contract has not yet expired.

EXPECT TO MAKE A CONTRACT.

Park Board Receives Bids Monday for Paving Rudisill Boulevard.

From the inquiries that have been made by contractors the park board expects that eight or ten bids will be submitted Monday afternoon for the paving of Rudisill boulevard from Piqua avenue to Broadway. Three Fort Wayne contractors are expected to submit proposals, while the others will come from out of town construction companies. The pavement is to be of asphalt macadam and the specifications are "open," so that all brands of asphalt may be proposed. It is understood that there will be no further legal obstacles raised to the paving of the street. The board expects to be able to award a contract to some one of Monday's bidders.

CITY ASPHALT PLANT REPORT.

The annual report of William C. Droege, superintendent of the city asphalt repair plant shows that during the year just closed the city kept its asphalt streets in repair at a cost of 74 cents a square yard, whereas it formerly cost under the contract system about $1.35 a square yard. For private work performed by the plant during the year the sum of $1,306.35 was received.

PREPARING SEWER PLANS.

Plans for the big sewer system that is to give a large territory in the far east end of the city much needed drainage are now under way and will be reported to the board of works at an early day.

RETAINING WALL COMPLETED.

The retaining wall constructed along the south side of the Wabash track elevation from Pine street to Taylor street to protect the abutting private property has been completed by the Carmichael-Cryder Engineering company. The earth from the excavation was used to make the fill for approaches to the Harrison street bridge and was hauled there over three different steam railroads.

LAUNCHES STILL AT THE WORK OF RESCUE

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 15.—Launches are still busy in the lower Ohio river rescuing people who have waited until the last minute to leave their homes in the bottoms. Reports reaching here today indicated that between 75 and 100 families have been taken to places of safety. Boats are also in demand to move corn.

The weather bureau today announced that the river will come to a standstill here Monday or early Tuesday with a crest short of 44 feet here. While portions of outlying residence sections will be partly inundated at this stage, the city proper and railroad communications will not be affected.

SEVERAL LODGES INSTALL OFFICERS

Several Fort Wayne lodges initiated recently elected officers Friday evening as follows: Sion S. Bass post, No. 40, G. A. Lawton camp, No. 35, United Spanish War veterans.

Under the auspices of the Allen county board of the A. O. H., arrangements are completed for the Hibernian ball to be held Tuesday evening, January 25, at the Elks' auditorium. Carl Roembke's orchestra will furnish a special musical program. The auditorium will be decorated in green and gold.

DR. GEISEL WILL BE HERE NEXT WEEK

Word has been received by Professor F. W. Miles that Dr. Carolyn C. Geisel, of Battle Creek, Mich., who was to have delivered a series of lectures here this week under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher clubs, is very much improved from her attack of typhoid pneumonia, and she will be able to fill her engagement here next week.

The lectures will be held on the corresponding days of next week and the programs for each will be carried out as was planned for this week.

The telegram received by Prof. Miles follows: "Am better. Shall I come January 19, 20 and 21? Wire here immediately." The message was sent from Tekonsha, Mich.

OLD PURDUE HAZING CASE SET FOR TRIAL

Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 15.—The Purdue university hazing case in which Miss Mabel Rogers, of Shoals, alleges that her nervous system was injured when she was hazed by seven young women at Purdue in January, 1914, has been set for trial February 18 in the Montgomery circuit court. Miss Rogers asks $1,000 damages from each of the defendants. One of the defendants, Miss Mary Clark, of Clark's Hill, died last year. The other defendants are Ruth Cowan, of Chicago; Mary Sheridan, of Attica; Agnes Phillips, of Monroeville; Mary Blue, of Star City, and Helen Lee, of Oxford. The case came here from Lafayette.

OIL SUPPLY MEN ENTERTAINED.

The monthly meeting of the employes of the Fort Wayne Oil and Supply company took the form of a banquet at the Anthony last night, all of the thirty-eight persons connected with the company being present. E. W. Puckett was the toastmaster and many of the employes responded to toasts. For two or three years the employes of the company have held meetings to discuss business affairs and at the meeting a year ago it was decided that the January gathering of each year should be a social affair, at which business is entirely forgotten and only pleasure and goodfellowship is allowed to prevail.

WOMAN'S DEATH HERE LEADS TO AN ARREST

Muncie, Ind., Jan. 15.—Ora Switzer, of Muncie, was arrested here last night on request of the Celina, Ohio, authorities, who believe he knows something of the murder of David Beery, who was found dead in a traction waiting house near there on April 4, 1912. Detectives have been working on the case off and on for four years and their first clew came recently when Mrs. Frank Merica died at Fort Wayne. Her daughter, Alma Switzer, is a former wife of Ora Switzer and recently she and her sister were arrested at Celina and held on a charge of disorderly conduct. It is believed that the former wife made a confession or statement that led the Celina authorities to cause Switzer's arrest. He has been living in Muncie for three years. Celina officials will take Switzer back to Celina and he will be questioned closely regarding the affair.

Switzer stated that he thought the whole affair to be a plan of his father-in-law and wife and denied any connection with the crime.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK CROSS, FEVERISH

When constipated or bilious give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

ANDREWS HAS BIG REVIVAL

Andrews, Ind., Jan. 15.—Success has been assured for the revival meeting in the Andrews M. E. church by the increasing interest during the second week of services. Evangelist O. L. Cotteral and the music director, Chester F. Harris, will continue the meetings probably four weeks. Thirty conversions and decisions have resulted from the few invitations issued by the evangelist. As the sermons are continued invitations probably will be more frequent. Mr. Cotteral is well known to Huntington county people, having conducted the big tabernacle meetings for the Markle churches. Besides the regular services shop meetings are held. Wednesday the evangelist talked to the workmen in the Wasmuth-Endicott factory. Next Tuesday evening the members of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges, and probably employes of the cabinet factory, will march to the church in a body, the Andrews band leading.

NEVER DIVORCED; NOW BIGAMIST

Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 15.—A letter of much interest was received at the county clerk's office, which brought out the fact that Frank Ryan, former saloonist here, now in Canada, is a bigamist. Golden C. Ryan, his second wife, sent the letter here in order to learn what steps she would have to take to free herself of Ryan. Following the receipt of the letter, the records at the clerk's office here were gone over and it was learned that Ryan was never divorced from his first wife, Ida Ryan. The records show that Frank Ryan was granted a divorce, but that the decree was later withdrawn when his wife was able to show that fraud had been practiced in obtaining it. The first wife then sued him twice for divorce, but never obtained a decree. Nevertheless, Ryan married again. His second wife is now a resident of Tampa, Fla.

COLUMBIA CITY WOMAN DIES.

Columbia City, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Jason Sigler passed away suddenly at her home on the south side after having been bothered with heart trouble for many years. On Thursday evening she assisted in the preparation of the evening meal and ate a hearty supper. She retired shortly after supper as she was tired and restless. Some time after retiring she notified members of the family that she was feeling badly and they offered her all the relief within their power, and also sent for Dr. C. L. Souder; however, the patient died before he arrived. Miss Adaline Dennis was born near Roanoke, Ind., December 27, 1862, and at the time of her death was 54 years of age. Mrs. Harry Crabbs and Mrs. Ben Steward, of Fort Wayne, are sisters of the deceased.

LODGE MERGER IN HIGH COURT.

Van Wert, Ohio, Jan. 15.—The suit to annul the merger of the Home Guards of America and the American Insurance Union has been taken to the court of appeals both on appeal and error. The first petition in the suit was filed December 13, 1915, and following this the defendants filed a demurrer claiming that the court in which the case was filed had no jurisdiction in the matter and the plaintiff had no right to bring the suit. It was contended that the suit should be brought by the attorney general of the state of Ohio. The demurrer was heard by Judge Bailey of Ottawa, and was sustained.

AGED WOMAN ENDS LIFE.

Montpelier, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Martha Davis, aged 55, living near Pleasantdale, southeast of this city, ended her life by taking carbolic acid. She took the acid about 7 o'clock and died an hour afterwards. Drs. Buckles and DeWees were called, but she was dead before they arrived. She is the wif of Enoch Davis, but they have not been living together. She leaves two sons, Jesse and Claud, who reside with their mother and three daughters, all married.

The reason given for her committing this rash act, was that she has been in ill health for some time, and was going blind.

NEWLYWEDS HAVE FIRE LOSS.

Bluffton, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Homer Tinkel, newlyweds of Liberty Center, were losers of about $75 from a fire at their home Friday when the heating stove fell over on the floor, destroying the rug and demolishing the stove. Mr. Tinkel was lifting the stove off of rollers to put it on a zinc base and the base of the stove broke, letting the stove fall over on the floor. The hot coals were scattered ovr the floor and it was only the quick work of Mr. and Mrs. Tinkel that saved their home from destruction. Mrs. Tinkel was formerly Miss Gladys Mosure, of this city.

OUCH! LUMBAGO! RUB PAINS FROM SORE, LAME BACK

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now listen! That's lumbago, sciatica or maybe from a strain, and you'll get relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on your back and out comes the pain. It is harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and after using it just once, you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years.—Advertisement.

DELINQUENT LIST SMALL.

Columbia City, Ind., Jan. 15.—Whitley county's delinquent tax list this year is the smallest since the memory of man runneth to the contrary in the early organization of the county. This might be referred to as another evidence of the prosperity of the people in general. The list for 1915 shows 38 items, reduced to 37 descriptions. The sale of the property involved will occur at the court house door Monday, February 14th, and will be in charge of County Treasurer Oliver E. Long. The total delinquency amounts to $1,751.18, and one-half of the amount is on ditch assessments.

WOODBURN TO HAVE REVIVAL

Woodburn, Ind., Jan. 15.—What is proving to be one of the biggest meetings held in Woodburn for many a day is going on at the Missionary church, conducted by Rev. J. Gregory Mantle, D. D., of Louisville, Ky. Dr. Mantle is a man of wide experience, having preached the gospel in almost every land under the sun during the last forty years. His manner of expounding scripture is unique, his messages exalt the Word, making impressions upon the hearers that are "simply unforgettable." One of the strong features of the meetings is the excellent singing by Prof. Gerber and the choir.

FALLS FROM CHAIR; BREAKS ARM.

Warsaw, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Catherine Watson, an aged resident of Etna Green, is suffering from a broken arm as the result of a fall. Mrs. Watson, who is an invalid, resides with her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Decker, and was injured when she fell from her chair. She is the widow of the late Jas. Watson, who was a civil war veteran.

TO SELL MONTPELIER POOLROOM

Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 15.—The property of John A. Van Gordon, Montpelier man, who disappeared from his home several months ago, and has not been seen since, has been ordered sold in circuit court, in order to meet judgments of creditors. A. G. Emshwiller was appointed receiver to look after the rents and profits of the real estate during the year of redemption allowed by law. It is believed that there is sufficient property to pay all debts.

MONTPELIER LODGES INSTALL

Montpelier, Ind., Jan. 15.—The Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Neighbors, Wednesday evening, held their joint installation services. There was over a hundred present. Mrs. Sophia Diefenbaugh, of Fort Wayne, acted as installing officer for the Neighbors, while F. M. McDonnell installed the Woodmen officers.

TO PROMOTE VAN WERT'S HEALTH

Van Wert, Ohio, Jan. 15.—Recommending a better sewerage system and a visiting nurse for Van Wert, Health Officer Church has made his annual report. While the number of cases of contagious diseases was greater last year than in 1914, most of the cases were whooping cough and measles. In 1914 there were nine cases of smallpox, while in 1915 none were reported.

Riches and Fame First, Then She'll Get Married

Mae Marsh, Young, Beautiful, Beloved of Film Fandom, Says She'll Wait Till She's Thirty, Anyway, Before She Acquires a Husband.

HOW do you like this idea for arranging your life: Get all your work done in your youth; grab fame firmly and hold on to it till you are middle aged, then marry and rear a family, releasing fame from your grasp and finding joy in a quiet, secluded country home?

Not so bad, you say, for some bookish individual who isn't attractive anyhow and hasn't a chance at the sweets of life? But utterly preposterous for anybody the gods have favored with beauty and talents, vivacity and charm.

Very well. Now I give you three guesses as to who has laid out this life program for herself. No, it's not a female professor of mathematics; not a writer on "The Parallelism Between Morphology and Characterology;" not even a suffragette; but a very lovely young person by the name of Mae Marsh, idol of 2,000,000 screen fans—the girl who figures so thrillingly in "The Birth of a Nation," running for her life through the landscape and plunging off the cliff to escape her pursuer!

Too Busy For Love Affairs.

Yes, sir. Little Mae Marsh, the blue eyed, the golden haired, the adored, the flattered, the pursued. The girl whom David Griffith calls the Bernhardt of the movies because she puts more electrical temperament into ten feet of film than lots of 'em do in ten thousand. The girl who has no "up stage" manner, no airs, no egotism, no fur topped boots, no lip rouge.

If that time old question of personality and the stage is still up for discussion those of the opposing side are lucky not to see Miss Marsh if they are bent on keeping up their end of the argument, for at the first glance and after a minute's conversation any one must recognize that this girl from California is the replica of the loving, lovable, earnest, playful little sister immortalized in Mr. Griffith's great civil war play. In the first place, she is scarcely older than that, even now, when she is within hailing distance of her twenties.

There is the same dignity that just escapes being primness and that same spontaneity and vivacity, that same alternating repression and expression of emotion that make the girl of the screen so adorable and that go so far in the making of one of the most splendidly developed climaxes that have characterized any play on stage or screen in a long, long time.

There is apparently no pretense about Miss Marsh. Quiet and unassuming, she nevertheless is fully appreciative of the advantages that have been hers without depreciating the qualities in herself that have impelled her to make the most of those advantages. And when one has that sense so well developed and the ability she so evidently has to weigh possibilities and limitations impartially, even though they be her own, it is an invaluable asset.

"Most people think love and marriage belong exclusively to youth," says she. "Now I know better. Youth is the time to work. You can't work when your mind is on love affairs.

"Of course for some women marriage is a career. Then it's all right to go into it young and make a success of it just as a man makes a success of his business or an actor goes after fame in his profession.

"But for me—NOT! I've watched my sisters in their love affairs and marriages, and, believe me, it fills their lives. There isn't room for any other career.

"Why isn't it better to put all your energy when you're young into work that will leave you free at thirty-five to take up something entirely different and use a whole new set of talents and interests? Won't I be a better wife and mother at thirty or thirty-five than I would be at twenty?

Expects Wisdom Later.

"In order to be successful in any money earning career you must have energy, youth, sparkle. You don't need wisdom especially. But you do need it to be a good wife and mother. Don't you see I'm right?"

Miss Marsh could make you see anything, she's that earnest and full of what Jimmie would call "punch."

It is to that quality she owes her quick rise to stardom from the humble position of "extra girl" out on the coast. However little she had to do, she managed to put "pep" into it.

Her motto seems to have been, "Whatever you do do it with vim, no matter if you do have to lie down with the smelling salts under your nose and a wet towel on your head afterward."

"All my life I've realized that in order to put things over you've got to do them with spirit," goes on the little film lady. "I used to spank my dolls energetically. I used to do everything 'as hard as I could.' When I left school to be an 'extra girl' in Mr. Griffith's company five years ago how my classmates sneered!

She'll Be Gay at Sixty.

"Now those very same girls, many of them married and the mothers of children, shower me with notes of admiration, inviting me to all sorts of social functions. But if there's anything on this earth I can't bear it is society doings.

"Pink teas, dog shows, tango parties and receptions are my idea of nothing to do. Maybe when I'm sixty I'll devote myself to dress, dances and dinner parties. But for now give me sensible togs, lots of work and a typewriter to compose plays on and I ask nothing more.

"I am in my right sphere," she says, "and so, naturally, I am happy. I never have gone through the shifting process of so many girls who are set to earn their own living, going from one kind of occupation to another, because, you see, I knew exactly what I wanted to do and I made for it, although"—laughing—"goodness knows it took some courage, or, rather, it would have taken courage, had I been of a wavering disposition."

She is still frail looking and still slender, but graceful as a fawn and with some of that pretty creature's characteristics—the quick intelligence, quick movements, alertness, and when she is off guard, when she forgets she is being interviewed, when she is not constantly reminded by the whispers and stares of passersby that she is a heroine of the films, she is entirely natural. Apropos of that, she says it is on the screen that she is really her most natural self and that it is in conventional life she finds herself acting.

"I suppose," she says, "that sort of subconsciously I have the idea that I must show a difference in my manner, but I have done so much of the picture work and so thrown myself heart and soul into it that it is really difficult for me to separate myself from it."

"But"—with the little quizzical look that suggests laughter and tears and other things at the same time—"I suppose it's that way with every one who makes any sort of success out of what he undertakes, though my work is really nothing more than play to me, because I am so enthusiastic about it. I shall be perfectly content to be a moving picture actress all my days; that is"—hastily—"provided I can continue to live in California.

"I wrote Mr. Griffith that Rockefeller has nothing on me."

Mae Marsh sent a gay little glance across the top of a glass of raspberry parfait.

"Then it pays to be a motion picture actress?"

"It pays so well that the first week I worked at it I wouldn't speak to any of the girls I had gone to school with."

"What was the sum that made a plutocrat of you?"

"Three dollars a day. I was sixteen. I had gone into the studio where my older sister was posing, and when she wasn't looking I applied for a job. They told me to come back and see Mr. Griffith. I did, and got a job. So you see it isn't true that Mr. Griffith saw me playing about the studio and saw possibilities of an actress in me. I saw him working at the studio and saw my future possibilities in him."

Then she ceased jesting and became a serious young person, as she is—well, half the time. That she can be tremendously serious every one who has seen the little Southern girl in "The Birth of a Nation" knows. Mae Marsh looked as pensive as any pictured Madonna when she spoke of that tragic picture.

"I did the three scenes—my flight, my fall on the rocks and my death scene at home—in one afternoon," she said. "What an afternoon's work that was! I went home and went straight to bed without dinner. I couldn't eat. And I stayed in bed right round the clock, twelve hours, to catch up in the race with my strength. Walter Long, the young man who plays the villain, is a good friend of mine and a dear, nice chap, but when I looked over my shoulder and saw him, his face blackened, rushing toward me I looked down the big rock and was really ready to jump from fright."

"But about you and Mr. Rockefeller?" I urged.

The California girl who has become so great a favorite in the pictures and who, D. W. Griffith predicts, will become a still greater one, sat primly in her chair and tried to look pompous. It was an effort that failed. Her face broke into an eddy of smiles and dimples.

"I'm on a vacation," she said proudly. "I was allowed to come away for a month, on salary, too, just as though I were working. Having the salary while not working, I spent it. I had automobiles and flowers and went about shopping and sightseeing. We stayed at Brown's Palace, Denver. Mr. John D. Rockefeller was staying there. My automobile drew up behind his at the curb. It was as fine as his. I ate in the same dining room as he. One day I sat at the table next to his."

She drew her face into solemn lines to make me believe she was profoundly impressed by her proximity to the multimillionaire of the mining troubles. But she was not in the least impressed. If ever a girl belonged to the democracy of those who do it is Mae Marsh. But she overflowed with the spirits of twenty, and her vacation was an event of huge importance to her, as little events are when we are not big in years.

"Suppose you tell me something about Mae Marsh for those who want to know more about her?"

"I began—that is, I was born in Madrid, New Mexico. My father was auditor of the Santa Fe Railroad and we lived in a lot of places while I was little. My earliest recollection is of sitting on the cabin floor in a Mexican cabin and eating tortillas. Mother says I spoke Mexican beautifully, only no one at home could understand me.

"I have a very vivid recollection of the San Francisco earthquake. I was at school at the Sacred Heart Convent. Something heavy came crashing down upon me. I cried: 'Oh, don't! Don't, sister! I won't do it again.' I thought one of the sisters was spanking me. We were taken into the yard, and after an hour and a half mother came for us. She had walked across San Francisco to get us. We lived in a tent. I thought that was lots of fun. Mother paid $25 the first day for food. The next we didn't have anything to eat. We lived out of doors for three days in Golden Gate Park. I saw a man shot for stealing a drink of water.

"Then we moved to Los Angeles. My sister went into moving pictures, and I followed her. That was four years ago, when I was sixteen. The first work that won recognition for me was Applepie Mary in 'Home, Sweet Home.' I am the mother now in 'The Mother and the Law,' or 'Tolerance.' It is not quite certain what it will be called. I am a mother at the same age I am now, twenty. It is being taken over again after we worked on it a year. Mr. Griffith wasn't satisfied with it. He is a most wonderful man, a genius. We players call him father. He calls us children."

The conversation shifted to faith, finally to faith in prayer.

"When I have prayed for anything I have always gotten it"—again Mae Marsh was seriousness itself—"provided I was good."

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Proverb 20:1-14.

1 Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

2 The fear of a king is as the roaring of a lion: whoso provoketh him to anger sinneth against his own soul.

3 It is an honour for a man to cease from strife: but every fool will be meddling.

4 The sluggard will not plow by reason of the cold; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.

5 Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out.

6 Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness: but a faithful man who can find?

7 The just man walketh in his integrity: his children are blessed after him.

8 A king that sitteth in the throne of judgment scattereth away all evil with his eyes.

9 Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?

10 Divers weights, and divers measures, both of them are alike abomination to the Lord.

11 Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

12 The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them.

13 Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty; open thine eyes, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

14 It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.

Autos on the Rural Routes

It is interesting to note that with the use of the automoile on the rural mail routes hardly more than in its trial stage, Congressman Wood, of Lafayette, has introduceed a bill in congress to abolish the automobile from the mail routes and return to the horse-drawn vehicles exclusively. Mr. Wood's home county, Tippecanoe, was the first in Indiana to be chosen as a test of the automobile as a mail-carrying vehicle on the rural routes, and he asserts that it has been proven a failure. Patrons are said to be deluging the congressman with complaints that it is not satisfactory; that many points which formerly received mail as early as 10 o'clock in the morning are now forced to wait until late afternoon for the delivery; that many of them are forced to walk long distances to reach the mail box; that the change has resulted in wholesale removal of former carriers and that things are out of joint generally.

In the absence of information to the contrary, it is fair to assume that at least some of the complaints submitted to the congressman by indignant patrons of the rural routes are well-founded. The adoption of the automobile was upon the presumption that routes could be lengthened, more people served, more expeditious delivery assured, and that the per capita expense for the mail service would be reduced. Necessarily it means a loss of job for some carriers when their routes were absorbed by the auto-trip schedules, and therein may be the source of some of the complaint which has been assailing the ears of the new member from Lafayette. So far as information at hand discloses, there is not complaint that the service has been wrecked in any other quarter by the coming of the automobile, though the service has been similarly ordered in Marion, Vigo, Wayne, Wabash, Randolph and other Indiana counties.

Passing the fact that the question of the motorization of the rural mail routes is in the hands of the postoffice department and not of congress, that the latter might legislate itself blue in the face without doing more than relieving its mind by expressing an opinion, we do not believe the test has as yet been thorough enough to determine either that the automobile as a rural route carrier is a success or that it is the monumental failure which Tippecanoe county has branded it. The plan is worth a much more thorough trial than has yet been given it before it is cast aside.

There is every indication that the forthcoming Fort Wayne poultry and pet stock show will be not only the largest but in many other respects the finest exhibition of its kind that has ever been held here. For many years Fort Wayne has been recognized as a prominent poultry-raising center. Year by year the business is attracting new recruits and there has been a sincere effort to improve the grade of the poultry yard product. Now, too, the exposition is attracting many of the crack poultry-raisers from points at great distance, and they will place on display many of the prize birds that have reaped a rich harvest of ribbons and cups at big shows elsewhere. The Fort Wayne show will be well worth seeing.

Doubtless unwilling to accept the dictum that virtue alone is its own reward, and something more substantial in the way of preferment is also highly desirable, Judge John C. Richter, who was a bull moose leader in the Thirteenth district four years ago, is said to be about to announce his candidacy for jurge of the Laporte circuit court on the republican ticket. One excellent way in which to measure the sincerity of the republican welcome extended to returning moosers will be to note whether or not they permit them to grab off any of the nominations for office in any instance where there is the ghost of a chance for election.

Now the emperor of Russia has given the solemn assurance that the war will not end until the enemies of his country are beaten. Similar utterances have come from the authorities of every country at war on either side of the big struggle, and aside from the additional contention that each is right and the other fellow wrong it is the only point on which they are able to find themselves in agreement.

A Grant county girl has just been crowned as Indiana's dairy queen, having been awarded a gold medal for doing the best work in the dairying enterprice and keeping the best record of dairy cows. The incident very naturally gives rise to the speculation whether the Indiana dairy queen really lives up to the part of the always attractive milkmaid portrayed in song, story, picture and on the musical comedy stage.

Five women have been named as street inspectors to assist in the cleaning of streets in New York City, and it is morally certain right now that they're going to find some spots of dust that have been overlooked by the mere men who wield the brooms.

CONCRETE RIVER BANKS

(Washington Star)

The mile long mats woven of willow trees that for a generation or more have been used as the best available makeshift for protecting the silty banks of the lower Mississippi from the tremendous floods that sweep down each spring, may soon become a thing of the past, because of a discovery by government experimenters in the bureau of standards in Washington of a means for hastening the hardening of concrete. Like dozens of other valuable discoveries to the credit of the government's specialists, this one was not the result of a fortunate accident, but came from careful experimenting after the problem had been put directly up to the bureau's workers.

The advantages of protecting the river banks by revetments of concrete that would be practically permanent and at the same time would present a smooth surface to the flowing waters have long been recognized by the army engineers who have charge of the improvement in the lower Mississippi, but all attempts to make use of such protective structures have proved failures because the swift currents have disintegrated the concrete before it became hard. By a little careful experimenting the specialists assigned to the problem at the bureau of standards have found that by adding 4 per cent. of calcium chloride an inexpensive substance to the water used in mixing concrete the material has twice the strength of ordinary concrete at the age of a day, and in some cases is three-fourths as strong and resistant at the age of two days as ordinary concrete is when a month old.

The newly discovered mixture will probably be tried out on the Mississippi in the near future, and if it lives up to its promises will revolutionize river and harbor construction work everywhere. It is believed that the government discovery will also be of great value in the scores of other uses to which concrete is put.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a hard cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NO STOMACH PAIN, GAS, INDIGESTION IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapepsin" is the only real stomach regulator known.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all sick distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.—Advertisement.

creased to any appreciable extent. apply the idea of wider safety in the construction of automobiles, especially by devising better control and to improve the equipment designed to warn pedestrians of the approach of a car.

But there remains the personal element, which no sort of legislation can curb. The golden rule must be followed by all drivers before motoring will be safe. It will be just as patent a fact after all the proposed legislation is accomplished as it is now. If the golden rule governed every hand at every automobile wheel in this country, there would be a reduction in accidents such as no amount of legislation could bring about.

Better safety appliances will help, but the reckless drivers must be reformed before the mortality rate will be de-

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Henry Smith, the young attorney, is suffering from la grippe at his home on Broadway.

Manager James H. Simonson, of the Temple theater, has gone to Ottumwa, Iowa, on business.

Rev. J. Merritte Driver, the pastor, is conducting an interesting revival service at Simpson M. E. church.

T. B. Emple has sold the Bliss house at Bluffton to parties from Marion and Peru and will make this city his future home.

Over two hundred rats were killed Tuesday night in the commission house of S. Bash & Co. Local sports and their dogs did the work.

Mr. and Mrs. James Summers entertained a large company of friends in hospitable fashion at their home on Douglas avenue last evening.

Mrs. Juliette Hurd, wife of Col. O. D. Hurd, died last night in her apartments above the Mordhurst drug store of apoplexy. She was 55 years old.

"Jim, the Penman," presented by the A. M. Palmer company, did not draw a large audience to the Temple last night. Cora Tanner is the attraction this evening.

During the illness of Miss Effie Richey her place as a teacher in the Washington school is being taken temporarily by Mrs. Gene McLaughlin, of Orchard place.

Somebody passed a counterfeit five-dollar bill on Robert B. Dreibelbiss, of the Dreibelbiss Abstract agency, as he discovered when he took his cash to the bank today.

The Little Turtle club gave a most enjoyable reception at the Electric club rooms last evening. Messrs. Louis Fox, John Muldoon, Henry Auth, Dr. E. J. McOscar and John Schwieters were the committee of arrangements.

The Occult Science club is the name that will be adopted by an organization in this city that will conduct studies and investigation into the mysterious. It will include quite a number of prominent men and women in its membership.

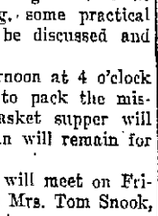
What to Do for Itching Skin

Eczema, ringworm and other itching, burning-skin eruptions are so easily made worse by improper treatment that one has to be very careful. There is one method, however, that you need not hesitate to use, even on a baby's tender skin—that is, the resinol treatment. Resinol is the prescription of a Baltimore doctor, put up in the form of resinol ointment and resinol soap. This proved so remarkably successful that thousands of other physicians have prescribed it constantly for over twenty years.



Resinol usually stops itching instantly, healing the eruption quickly, unless it is due to some serious internal disorder. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap can be bought at any druggist's, and are not at all expensive. Write for free sample, Dept. 6-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SOCIOLOGY INSTRUCTOR SPEAKS

To First Presbyterian Men's Club on Suffrage Movement.

Prof. Edward H. White, instructor in sociology at Purdue university, spoke to the members and friends of the Men's club of the First Presbyterian church Friday evening on the causes of the strong movement for equal suffrage. It has come about in the same manner, said Professor White, as did the status of the man about the home during the great revolution of the industrial world. Until that time, asserted the professor, the man was around the house nearly as much as the woman. When the change came he turned the affairs of the home over to the woman. The changed home life today reacts on woman and accounts for the feminine movement, just as it did fifty years ago with man.

VOORHIS ELOQUENT SPEAKER.

Kokomo Lawyer at First Presbyterian Church Sunday Evening.

Much interest attaches to the address by Hon. W. R. Voorhis, a Kokomo attorney, who will be heard Sunday evening at the First Presbyterian church on "A Lawyer's Estimate of Christ." Mr. Voorhis comes under the auspices of the Men's club. He was the speaker at the opening of the Lyon tabernacle in Fort Wayne and is one of the state's gifted and forceful orators.

Class to Take Communion.

The class which was confirmed Sunday night at Trinity Episcopal church by Rt. Rev. Bishop John Hazen White will partake of holy communion for the first time at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The men's corporate communion also will be administered Sunday. The senior chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will also attend in a body.

Ministers Hold Regular Meet.

The Fort Wayne Ministerial association meets Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at the First M. E. church, Wayne and Lafayette streets. Luncheon will be served following the meeting. Rev. J. A. Nipper and T. P. Potts will be the hosts. Rev. A. J. Folsom and Rev. E. E. Howe will read papers on "Simultaneous Evangelistic Meetings."

First Epworth League

Miss Bonetta Kanaga has been selected leader for the devotional meeting of the Epworth league of the First M. E. church, Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The subject for discussion is, "Evangels of the Home Land."

Edw. H. Miller. 2128 S. Calhoun

Many and marvelous are the wonders of Nature, but her chief masterpieces are the wonderful West Baden Sprudel Water Springs at West Baden, Indiana. When she created these springs she certainly pinned a medal on herself. This water is a boon to every man who has a sluggish liver, bad stomach or lazy bowels. It is Nature's panacea for the indoor worker.

A single glassful of West Baden Sprudel Water once a week will convince you that life's "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace;" otherwise you may find the path of constipation leads but to the grave.

More than a million people have journeyed to West Baden. They stopped at the luxurious hotel. They drank of the health-giving water and returned home well and happy. This excellent water now is bottled at the springs. Druggists sell the small size for 15c, the large one for 35c. Buy a bottle. It is Nature's cross-cut to good health.

Miller's Pharmacy, at 2128 South Calhoun street, and of which Edw. H. Miller is proprietor, is more than a place to buy stamps and toilet articles. Scores of people know him to be honest, capable and scrupulously careful, whether compounding prescriptions or giving advice concerning some minor ailment. His recommendation of West Baden Sprudel Water should convince you of its merit.

"PI GAM" MAKES BOW TO ADMIRING PUBLIC

New High School Publication is Distributed Friday.

A literary gem, a sparkling, scintillating contribution to the literature of the age, published under the name of the "Pi Gam," was issued at the Fort Wayne high school Friday, and distributed to the pupils, with the warning that the outrage is to be repeated each Friday till the end of the school year.

The Pi Gam is edited by Ralph Dunkleberg, who writes under the nom de plume of "Adam Knutt," and there are several other bold conspirators associated with him in the undertaking. Several weeks ago a crowd of the students at the school became dissatisfied with the editorial policies of the Caldron, the school paper, and decided to put on this editorial venture of their own.

Then it has been whispered around that the paper was to be one of the variety "scandal," and that when it once appeared Willie Hearst would take to his hole. But here it comes, without so much as a question about dress suits, or basketballs, or New Year's eve doings.

The first editorial in the Pi Gam states that the editors of the sheet realize that there is worth in the Caldron, and that they do not intend to "buck it," but that they are going to "speak our opinions freely," etc.

Prof. Louis Ward, acting principal of the school, was asked today whether the faculty was represented on the editorial board, and answered with a "No" in seven keys and eleven languages.

MAKING EFFORTS TO GET AMERICANS OUT

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 15.—The movement of General Trevino and other Carranza military commanders, to round up and destroy the bandits, who massacred eighteen Americans last Monday, divided attention on this side of the international boundary today with efforts to bring out of the Mexican danger zone foreigners who failed to heard the relief train which brought fifty-two refugees to this city last night.

A train sent from here reached the city of Parral last night and is expected to arrive at Juarez tomorrow or Monday, under escort of Carranza troops. According to mining company officials and some of the men who came from Chihuahua city last night, about one thousand Americans are still in northern Mexico. There are, it is estimated, approximately 150 in the vicinity of Chihuahua City, 35 near Torreon and Parral and 500 in the Mormon colony at Casas Grandes. Apprehension for the safety of these was lessened somewhat by reports that the Carranza military chiefs are taking measures to protect foreigners in the territory under control of the recognized government of Mexico. Information comes from Chihuahua City to the effect that Gen. Villa, who is held responsible by many on the border, for the deaths of the Americans at Santa Ysabel, has only forty men with him and that instead of moving northward, he is making toward Guerrero, which is west of Chihuahua.

AWAIT FORMAL REPLY.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Gen. Carranza's formal reply to representations from the United States demanding that he run down and punish the murderers of American citizens at Santa Ysabel, Mexico, still was awaited today though indirect assurances had come from him that this would be done.

Despite renewed demands in congress for intervention in Mexico there were no indications today of a change in the administration policy to give Carranza and the de facto government of Mexico a free hand in running down the assassins of Americans and in restoring order and protecting foreigners in that republic. President Wilson with the backing of his cabinet and democratic leaders in congress was represented as being determined not to be driven into sending an armed force into Mexico on account of war talk and cries of vengeance

A week of social quiet so far as any large parties or dances count is ending with the promise of at least two brilliant social affairs in the coming week. On Monday afternoon at the Commercial club Mrs. William H. Dreier and her three daughters, Mrs. Edward Gilmartin and the Misses Dreier are to entertain at auction. On Wednesday afternoon at the Anthony hotel Mrs. William K. Noble and Miss MacDougal are to receive their friends at half past 2 o'clock.

The personal friends in this city and admirers of the drama in general will learn with more than common interest of the approaching production of a play written by a former Fort Wayne woman, Mrs. Thomas Crighton, of Cleveland. Mrs. Crighton has been in New York for some months working on her play in conjunction with William Elliott, an actor and playwright himself, who is a son-in-law of David Belasco. The play is named "The Greatest Nation" and a company of noted players have been rehearsing it for some weeks. Mr. Elliott is to produce the play, which will have its first try-out in New Haven, Conn., next week. On January 24 the play will be given in Washington, D. C., and afterwards will open in New York. Olive Wyndham and Madam Yorke are two of the important members of the cast. The latter actress is a protege of Sara Bernhardt.

Miss Linda McKinnie left on Saturday for a six weeks' visit in New York city.

Benjamin F. Kraft, of Chicago, is in the city visiting friends and attending to business matters.

Paul Schaffer, of Warsaw, was the guest on Friday of Miss Hilda Weimer, of Buchanan street.

Mrs. A. Pressler, of Lakeside, has returned from a visit in Indianapolis, with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Maurice Lohman entertained her mother and sister, Mrs. and Miss Bippus, of Huntington, on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Park, of Highland, Mich., are guests of Mrs. Frank Park, of East Berry street.

Miss Junetta Schoch entertained the Alpha Omega club Friday evening and Miss Mabel Vernon was initiated.

Miss Minnie A. Graham, who is ill with pneumonia at her home, 710 East Lewis street, is somewhat improved.

Mrs. J. H. Steinrock has returned from a three months' visit with her mother, Mrs. Vaughn, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Mrs. L. E. Rehling and Miss Dolly Rehling have gone to Chesaning, Mich., to attend the wedding of Rev. Mr. Bickel.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hughes, of Lakeside, have been called to Nashville, Tenn., by the serious illness of their daughter, Mrs. N. C. Coverdale.

Mrs. Paul Newell Turner, of New York city, is coming here to spend the month of February with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sperry, of Fairfield avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Hess and little child, have returned to Pittsburg, after a holiday visit with Mrs. Hess's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson, of Grace avenue.

Miss Irma Crouse has returned to her studies at the National Kindergarten college, Chicago, after spending the holiday season here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Crouse, of Third street.

Mrs. W. R. Hillary, of Toledo, O., came Thursday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. H. Van Sweringen, who has had an attack of the grip but is so much improved that Mrs. Hillary returned home today.

Mrs. Robert Fox, of Forest Park boulevard, entertained on Thursday evening by giving a small and informal dinner party in honor of her guest, Mrs. Will Sherwood, of Detroit, who left the following day for her home.

Miss Marie Landenberger, of Fairfield avenue, is to leave next Tuesday for Indianapolis, to join her friend, Miss Jeanette Judson, and take an extensive trip with her during which they will visit school friends in St. Louis, Mo., Ft. Worth and Dallas, Tex., and Texarkana, Ark.

Mrs. George W. Jones, of Omaha, Neb., who had been here visiting Mrs. Wagner, of Brackenridge street, and other friends, and who also went to Detroit, to visit her daughter, Mrs. Harry McCracken, formerly Miss Hattie Jones, of this city, left on Friday for her home in the west.

Miss Leota Anspach, of West Jefferson street, was hostess on Thursday evening for a literary club recently organized by a number of high school alumni of the 1912 class. Miss Marian Ingham spoke about the lives and writings of Tennyson, Byron and Browning. Other young ladies attending the meeting were Misses Margaret Essig, Matilda Stolte, Esther Hofer.

Miss Mary Louise Rhamy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Rhamy, had a birthday party on Saturday afternoon for her neighborhood playmates and school friends. It was the prettiest kind of a party, too, with more dainty things that were pink and white than just ice cream or candies. There were a lot of small girls with pink cheeks to begin with and pink bows of ribbon about them somewhere. Then there were pink flowers, little baskets of pink tied with pink fluffy bows and filled with candy, pink caps, pink and white napkins of a flower design, and the most wonderfully frosted cake that told everyone the whole story of the party. The supper was served at 5 o'clock after the children had enjoyed various games and music and then each one received a souvenir to take home to help her to remember Mary Louise and her birthday party. The guests were Margaret Ann Keegan, Aimee Thomas, Mary Katherine Geake, Louise Rogers, Norina Addon, Mary Jane Crane, Mary and Louise Larwill, Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, Violet Reinewald, Mary and Linda Leslie, Louise Metzger, Julia Calhoun, Elizabeth Urbahns, Dorothy Moesman.

Traveling Art Exhibit.

An exhibition of pictures from the Heron Art institute, Indianapolis, is to be shown in Fort Wayne, beginning on Jan. 31 and continuing four days. It is probable that the exhibit will be displayed at the Anthony hotel under the auspices of the Fort Wayne School of Art. The pictures will be works of Indiana artists.

BIG ATTRACTION FOR CHILDREN.

The primary teachers of grades one to four of the public schools have formed an association for the purpose of bringing one or two good lecturers to the city each year. For their initial lecture for the children (old and young) the association has selected Cyrus DeVry, of Chicago, to give two talks. Mr. DeVry is the man who has charge of the Lincoln park zoo, of Chicago, and he lectures and talks on "Wild Animals in Captivity" at the Chicago Zoo. These talks are illustrated by moving pictures and should not be missed by anyone, even adults find the pictures and the talks immensely interesting. The first of these illustrated talks will be given a week from today at the Orpheum theater. There are to be two lectures to prevent a crowd that might be uncomfortably large, if but one were given. The first lecture will be at 9 o'clock and the second at 10:30 o'clock next Saturday morning. Grown up people will be charged ten cents for admission and all children a nickel. If the primary association makes any money after expenses are paid, the money will be kept to use for purposes similar to this. This illustrated lecture is to take the place of next Saturday's moving picture show that is under the management of the Mothers' club. All children of the city will be welcome at these moving picture shows as the price is put at five cents to make it easy for all to go. Saturday children who possibly can are asked to go to the 9 o'clock talk, because if everyone does want to go even the capacity of the Orpheum theater will be tested if all try to get there at the same time.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY NOTES.

The students of Sacred Heart academy gave their first entertainment for the new year last Wednesday. The interesting and well given program included the following: "After the Lights Went Out," a poem referring to the close of the Panama-Pacific exposition, by M. E. Carroll; radiopticon views of the Christmastide, shown by E. Bloom and M. Kuebler; recitation, "Christmas Alway," by Charlotte Tobey; stereopticon views concerning the nativity and infancy of Jesus, taken from the great masters of painting, with singing during the close of appropriate hymns by the vocal pupils. Visitors present at the entertainment were Mrs. M. Fleming, Mrs. A. E. Carroll and Miss M. Lynn.

WITH THE STUDY CLUBS.

The College club held an interesting meeting on Friday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A., and listened to important talks on the City Beautiful, given by Leo J. Ninde and D. N. Foster.

There will not be a meeting of the Morning Musical society during the coming week as an artist recital is scheduled. At present the club is not prepared to state what its next big recital will be, but negotiations are in progress for a noted artist. It has been hoped to bring the Minneapolis orchestra here and a date had been made but was cancelled by the orchestra for reason of an unexpected change in their itinerary.

The evening meeting of the Twentieth Century club held on Thursday, with Mrs. Alice Meigs, was also a guest affair, and the entire program afforded the company much pleasure. Mrs. Grosjean read a paper on pictographs that was illustrated by Mr. Grosjean and Mrs. Griest gave a good talk on "Pan-Slavism." There was music and later refreshments were served by the hostess.

Les Causeries du Mardi will meet on Tuesday, with Mrs. C. A. Horton, 504 East Lewis street.

The Woman's Reading club will meet on Tuesday, January 18, with Mrs. John Shoaff, with Mrs. Worden and Mrs. Beers as assisting hostesses.

The Thursday Shakespeare club will meet the coming week with Mrs. E. D. Eward, of Spy Run avenue, for its annual winter picnic. All study will be laid aside for the program of fun and dining.

Mrs. J. D. Tinsley will be the hostess for the meeting of the Travel club on Monday. Aside from the travel talk, which will concern a Mississippi river trip, the abolition of slavery will be a historical topic for study.

The Fortnightly club will hear a discussion of "A Far Country," by Winston Churchill, which will be presented by C. R. Lane. Walter L. Moll, Miss Wilbur, Dr. M. F. Porter, and Mrs. Fred McCulloch are to assist in the program.

The Current Literature club will meet on Tuesday with Mrs. Freese. A reading of "Chitra," by R. Tagore, is the program.

Mrs. C. W. Sperry is to be the hostess for the Duodecimo club next Wednesday afternoon. Native birds of Indiana will be told of and Mrs. Bower will mention special parts of the "Song of the Cardinal" in illustration.

The Business Women's club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. on Monday evening, the 17th inst., for a general discussion of current events. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested.

The Bay View Study club will meet with Mrs. J. P. Martin, 630 West Creighton avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The lesson will be a life study of Robert Burns, which Mrs. Paulson will conduct. Each member of the club is to recite a Burns poem.

The Mothers' club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. M. F. Porter will give a talk on "Shoes and Feet," Mrs. James E. Eliott will sing and refreshments will be served.

TO THE LADIES:

This is the year you may attend the Poultry Show in comfort.

Plenty of parking place for your electrics.

Wide aisles in the exhibition rooms.

Large, well-lighted quarters for the hundreds of handsome birds and specimens of prize pet stock.

Bring the children. You will all enjoy the exhibit. You will see poultry that captured first prizes at the San Francisco Exposition—dainty little bantams and their big brothers and sisters—handsome bronze turkeys—pretty rabbits and hares, the delight of the little folks. All children under 12 years of age are admitted free when accompanied by parents.

And for you: A special exhibit of dressed poultry, showing you how to choose the best.

Exhibition hall: Two squares north of the court house, on Calhoun street.

We know you will like the exhibition. The show opens Tuesday, January 18. Make you plans now so you can attend.

Respectfully,
POULTRY ASSOCIATION OF ALLEN COUNTY.

Mrs. Lena Blazer, Hurt in Crash of Jitney and Street Car, Low.

Mrs. Lena Blazer, 1125 Polk street, who sustained a fracture of the skull and internal injuries at Huffman and Sherman streets, Christmas eve, when a jitney bus in which she was a passenger was struck by a street car, has had a relapse and is in a very critical condition at St. Joseph hospital. Dr. James M. Dinnen, who attends her, has little hopes of her recovery.

F. W. Luttman, motorman on the street car that struck the jitney bus, has been under arrest since the morning following the accident, but at liberty under $300 bond furnished by the Traction company.

The jitney bus was driven by Oscar Schust and was occupied by Mrs. Blazer and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Rosa Shaw, who also resides at 1125 Polk street. The bus was proceeding east on Huffman street and the street car, going in the same direction, struck the automobile from behind. That the car was traveling at a high rate of speed was shown by the fact that after the first impact of the collision, when the jitney was bumped forward, the car again hit it, throwing it to the curb against a pole. The car proceeded more than 100 feet before it was stopped.

Mrs. Blazer and Mrs. Shaw were both hurt, the latter not seriously. Mrs. Blazer was taken to St. Joseph hospital, where she has since remained. Luttman was arrested on a charge of assault and battery and his case has been continued from time to time to permit Mrs. Blazer to recover sufficiently to appear in court as a witness.

ELEVEN BOYS START SCOUT TROOP NO. 3

Although only eleven boys took the Boy Scout promise at Trinity Episcopal church Friday evening and were organized into Wayne Troop No. 3, indications point to the fact that at the next meeting date as many more will enter. There were nearly forty boys present and listened with eagerness to the Boy Scout work as explained by State Scout Commissioner L. O. Wetzel. After the work of organization, fifteen or twenty youths filled to the brim with enthusiasm came to Mr. Wetzel with the same question, as to whether or not it would be possible for them to join next week.

Troop No. 3 will be headed by Scoutmaster J. S. Farrel, and Assistant Scoutmaster A. K. Patterson and is composed of the following young lads: Lawrence Fletcher, Robert Clause, William Grage, Linus Link, Norman Hindle, Robert Wheatley, Ralph Buelow, Maurice Grage, Roland McCurdy, Richard McCurdy, D. Jones and William Leggett.

Troop No. 1 of the Boy Scouts of Fort Wayne was organized two weeks before Christmas at the First M. E. church. Last Friday night Troop No. 2 was formed at the First Presbyterian church, Troop No. 3 last night at Trinity Episcopal church, and Troop No. 4 will be organized next week.

MAGAZINE AGENT HELD FOR CRIME

Leo Sunday Charged With Obtaining Money by False Pretense.

Leo Sunday, who has been sailing with the moniker Daniel Shelley at his masthead, was arraigned in the city court, Saturday morning, on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses, was continued until the 20th inst. and went to jail in default of $500 bond. Sunday was arrested by Detective Sergeant Walter Immel and the specific charge against him is that he obtained $3 in cash from Prof. William H. Kruse, of the faculty of Concordia college as a subscription to the Scientific American. Sunday is said to have found other victims in Fort Wayne. He had been employed by the subscription department of the Scientific American, as is shown by a letter found on him and written by the manager of the Cleveland agency reprimanding him for obtaining subscriptions by writing contracts that could not be fulfilled. The manager ordered Sunday to cancel those orders and return the money. On Sunday were also found a large number of the duplicates of contracts written in Toledo. There is evidence that Sunday has not been employed by the Scientific American for several weeks and that he has pocketed all the money he collected on subscription contracts. The police will take steps to learn more of him before his hearing begins. He is a young man and talks his business glibly.

Talks Himself to Jail.

"That fellow's a card; listen to him," remarked a police officer in the city court Saturday morning, when Jake Meyers was taking the stand to testify in his own defense after Officer Elmer Coulter had told the court that Meyers had been ejected from a saloon and kicked out of a restaurant and was a general nuisance when drunk. Meyers was not unaware of his high repute as "a card" and on the stand sought to live up to it. He was jocular with the court, facetious with the prosecuting attorney and so full of funny things and smart patter that the charge of drunkenness was almost overwhelmed in the fluency of his conversation. Finally Judge Kerr broke the spell of Jake's hypnotic blarney and tagged him $5 and costs and promised him the state farm next time.

Other City Court Cases.

Lee J. Hartzell, counsel for Robert M. Dickerson, the forger and ex-convict, appeared in court and consented to the request of teh state for a continuance until next Tuesday. Dickerson himself had previously been granted two or three continuances.

George Clark, a souse who had a big hole in the back of his head, the result of a fall, was continued a week to permit his recovery and put under $100 bond.

These other drunks were disposed of: James Kelly, $1 and costs; Charles Bingham, continued to Wednesday under $100 bond; Edward Turner, $1 and costs; Frank Smith, continued indefinitely; Sylvester O'Loughlin, continued to Monday under $25 bond; Peter Gallagher, continued indefinitely.

FINAL AUTOMOBILE ORDER.

Chief of Police Directs Arrest of Those Without Licenses After Monday.

Chief of Police Charles Lenz has issued his final order relating to the enforcement of the automobile license law. Beginning Monday officers are to arrest the drivers of all cars that have no 1916 license tags. A receipt showing application for license will guarantee immunity. The order to Captain Richard Kelly, night commandant, and Lieutenant Harry Grimme, day commandant, is as follows:

"You will instruct your officers to be on the lookout for all parties running automobiles in this city with 1915 licenses attached thereto, beginning Monday, January 17, 1916, bring them to the station and file affidavits against them, charging them with failure to provide their machines with 1916 number as the law prescribes.

"All parties, however, who may be brought to the station, and can show a receipt that they have applied for their 1916 license, may be given a chance to run on their 1915 license until the arrival of their new license. However, it will be necessary to take the names and addresses of the owner of the car and their 1915 license number.

"There will be no further orders issued on this matter and its contents will be final."

MRS. SCHLINK NOW AT HOME.

Mrs. Herman Schlink, the bride of a year who suddenly disappeared from her home, 327 Brandriff street, last Tuesday afternoon, while her husband was at his work as a pipefitter in the Wabash shops, and was located by Chief of Police Lenz at Columbia City, has returned to Fort Wayne and is now at her residence. Her husband went to Columbia City and accompanied her to Fort Wayne. Mrs. Schlink met him at the Pennsylvania station in Columbia City and the meeting was very affectionate. The young wife's escapade followed a trifling domestic row and she hastily decided to run away. She was in Logansport before she went to Columbia City.

OPEN HOUSE AT MANUAL SCHOOL

The Fort Wayne Manual Training school will hold open house in all departments Tuesday evening. All shops, including carpenter, backsmith, pattern-making, machine and foundry will be open, and the mechanical drawing, sewing, cooking and art departments will be running full blast, with students at their places and instructors to demonstrate the various branches of the work.

The shops downstairs will open at 7:30 and the third floor rooms will start operations half an hour later. The classes continue till 9 o'clock. Last year over 2,000 people attended the open house, and with the increased interest in the project the crowd this year should be even larger. Every effort is being made to accommodate the guests and give them ample time to see each department without crowding and confusion.

There will be exhibits of finished work and products under construction, but the big feature will be the classes at their everyday work.

FINAL MEETING OF SEMESTER.

The Mathematics club of the Fort Wayne High school held its final meeting of the first semester of the school year in room 20 Friday evening. Prof. J. Will Kaiser's Throat Decide the World War?

Whether Germany's Ruler Has Cancer Becomes Issue of Grave Importance—Most Noted American Authority Says Surgery is Only Treatment.

By Frederick M. Kerby

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 15.—What is cancer of the throat? What causes it? Can cancer be cured?

On the answer to these questions may depend the outcome of the European war.

Dr. H. A. Kelly

The kaiser is suffering from cancer of throat, according to dispatches, which say only a desperate operation can save his life, and that with the loss of the power of speech.

Dr. Howard A. Kelly of John Hopkins university here, has just answered these three questions. Dr. Kelly's experiments with radium as a cancer cure are well known; he is one of the greatest surgeons of our time and a specialist on cancer. Here are his answers:

"Cancer of the throat—or rather cancers of the mouth and throat—may be either mild and incipient, or advanced and utterly hopeless," he said. "They all begin in a small spot somewhere about the tongue, the gums, the cheek, the lips or back in the throat about the tonsils, or in the larynx—or the vocal cords at the base of the tongue.

"All forms of cancer consist in a riotous overgrowth of the normal cells in any part of the body where the cancer grows. When a large mass of cancerous tissue is formed, the cancer cells in the central portion, failing to get nourishment, break down and discharge, and so form the extensive ulcers often seen associated with cancer. In this way, too, poisons are formed which are absorbed by the body at large.

"Death in the case of cancer of the throat comes from either the absorption of these poisons in such large quantities that the patient simply dies of extreme weakness and exhaustion, or it is brought about by mechanical means by the pressure of the cancer masses interfering with swallowing and with breathing.

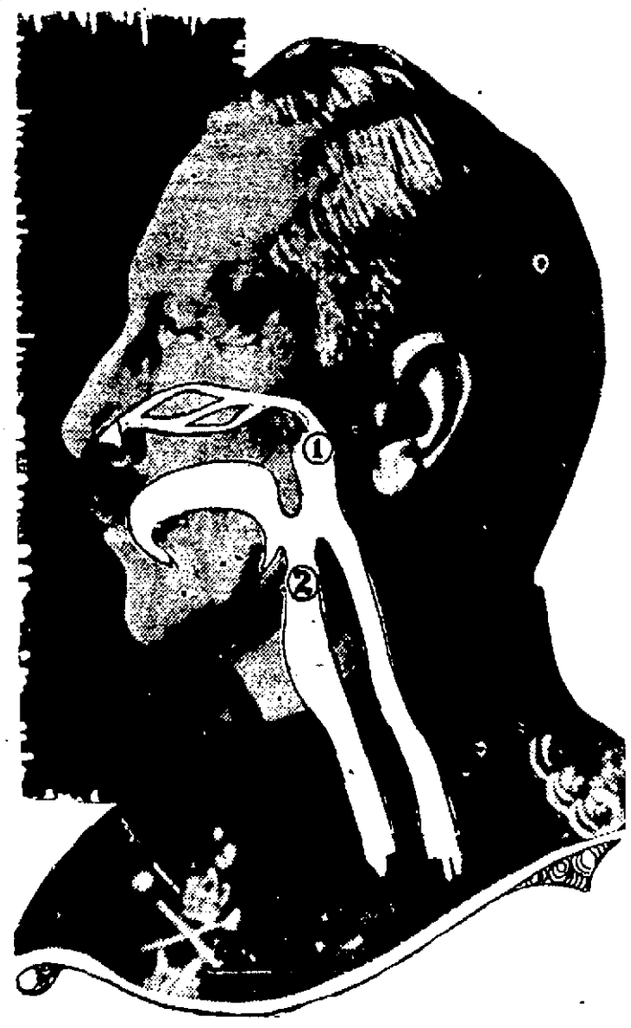
"The ultimate cause of cancer," declares Dr. Kelly, "the reason why these cells take on this riotous development, has not yet been found out. We only know this, that any chronic irritation about the mouth or throat is liable in the end to result in cancer. In this way smoking—the irritation of a hot pipe stem on a particular part of the lip—will produce it; the irritation of nicotine will produce it in any part of the mouth or throat.

"Cancer is not contagious from one individual to another. Cancer is also not directly inheritable, although the predisposition may be inherited. In other words there may be an inherited weakness—a field in which if the seeds are dropped, as we drop seeds into prepared ground, cancer may result; whereas in another individual where no predisposition existed, it would not result.

"The first step toward the proper treatment of cancer," continued Dr. Kelly, "is the early recognition of any little sore, however tiny, about the lips, tongue or throat which does not promptly heal.

"In this early stage and in a stage of irritation called the precancerous stage, the disease is practically always curable. But, if allowed to go on until it form a lump of considerable size, with every passing month the chances of cure become less.

"The treatment of cancer is absolutely, first, last and all the time, surgical. No means have as yet been discovered which will cure cancer outside of surgery, with the exception of radium, and that is at present in an experimental stage."



If it turns out the kaiser really is suffering from cancer of the throat, it may be necessary to remove his larynx to save his life. If this should be done it would be necessary to insert tubes connecting food and breathing passages, as shown by figures one and two in illustration.

ANTWERP NEWS.

Antwerp, Ohio, Jan. 15.—Miss Rose Reising went to Fort Wayne Thursday, where she spent the day with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hettinger, accompanied by his brothers, Frank and Pete Hettinger, and sisters, Frances and Cecelia, departed for their home at Pesotum, Ill., Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. John Hettinger being on their wedding trip, while his brothers and sisters were returning home from attendance at the wedding.

HE COULD HARDLY GO

"About two years ago I got down on my back until I hardly could go," writes Solomon Bequette, Flat River, Mo. "I got a 50c box of Foley Kidney Pills and they straightened me right up." Common symptoms of kidney trouble are backache, headache, rheumatic pains, soreness and stiffness, puffiness under eyes, blurred vision, sleep disturbing bladder troubles and a languid, tired feeling. Foley Kidney Pills help to eliminate the poisonous waste matter that causes these symptoms. Dreier Drug Co.—Advertisement.

INDIAN SERVICE HAS WON A BIG VICTORY

Sale of Liquor to Indians Now Almost Entirely Broken Up.

Washington, Jan. 12.—A dramatic story of the government's fight to stop the sale of liquor to Indians is outlined by Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs. So well have the efforts of the Indian service succeeded, he said, that the traffic virtually has been broken up.

Not only has the government cut the sale of liquor to Indians on reservations and elsewhere, but in one instance it has made a fifth of a state dry through enforcement of a sixty-year-old Indian treaty. Older treaties are being studied now to determine if saloons in other territory partly populated by Indians can be closed.

Minnesota is the state in which a vast area was freed of saloons by treaty enforcement. The agreement revived by the government is known as the Chippewa treaty of 1855. For many years its provisions regarding the sale of whisky had been forgotten until one day last summer it was discovered in the Indian bureau here that the convention was a perpetual bar to the sale of intoxicants in northwest Minnesota.

Indian officials determined to enforce the treaty and began, too, the study of similar agreements in other states. On October 20, last, an order went forth that saloons in several of the larger towns in the territory must close within ten days. Liquor dealers refused to close and took the fight into the courts, where it has just been decided that the treaty provisions still are in force.

Indian officials say the Indian himself first realized that alcohol was a menace to the race and that in the Minnesota treaty as well as in most of the other Indian treaties the Indian and not the white man stipulated that intoxicants should not be sold in Indian territory.

In other parts of the country officials charged with enforcement of laws against sale of whisky to Indians worked through court action. Several officers were killed.

An educational campaign against the use of alcohol, Indian officials declare, did much for the enforcement of laws. A pledge-signing campaign also was an aid. Education of the Indian against drink was undertaken through the schools, where students were interested in essay writing contests.

While investigating treaty arrangements Indian officials discovered a forgotten law permitting the government to hold up annuity payments in regions where liquor was within easy reach of Indians. This, officials assert, was one of the most fruitful methods tried. Payments were stopped until head men of the tribes promised co-operation and until officers were convinced white residents in contiguous territory would aid in law enforcement.

One Indian official has declared this touching of the white man's pocket book by cutting off payments was so effective as even to surprise the Indian service.

Reservation officials in the southwest have bent their energies towards stamping out the fermentation of Tulapai, a native Indian liquor made from sprouting corn. The use of Peyote buttons, or dried cactus crowns, for making an intoxicating drink has been checked by a department of agriculture order prohibiting their importation. Legislation has been asked to given the Indian office large powers over traffic in Peyote.

State legislation is declared to have been of material assistance to the Indian office.

Commissioner Sells concluded his review of efforts to stop the sale of liquor to Indians by saying:

"The sentiment of the people is strongly with our work, regardless of the attitude of the individual on the question of prohibition as it is understood in white communities."

WEDS FAITHFUL NURSE.

Man With Broken Back Takes Bride After Long Journey.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 15.—Claybourne Charles Smith, who traveled 8,000 miles from Natal, South Africa, to Roselawn, Ind., in a basket, with a broken back, at a cost of $25,000, and his nurse, Miss Edith Emily Buckle, of Cardiff, Wales, have been married by Rev. John Coleman, pastor of the Roselawn Methodist church.

The wedding took place at the home of Mr. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith, on their farm, near Roselawn. The bridegroom is crippled as a result of a splintered spine suffered in a mining accident and will always be a hopeless cripple. The bride is the pretty Welsh nurse who cared for Smith during the long journey. Smith, who is twenty-seven years old and a mining engineer, was graduated from Purdue university in 1907 and was employed as a mining engineer in South Africa by the London Mining Machinery company, Limited. The wedding took place Sunday, but it was not announced till today.

Get Rid of a Racking La Grippe Cough —It Weakens.

For the severe racking cough that comes with lagrippe, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is wonderfully healing and soothing. It eases the tightness over the chest, raises the phlegm easily and helps the racking, tearing cough that is so exhausting and weakening. R. G. Collins, ex-postmaster Barnegat, N. J., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound soon stopped the severe lagrippe cough that completely exhausted me. It can't be beat." Dreier Drug Co.—Advertisement.

ENDS TRIP OF 8,000 MILES IN BASKET BED

Helpless Indiana Man Will Win Bride in Painful Experience.

Roselawn, Ind., Jan. 12.—A journey of 8,000 miles in a basket bed ended here yesterday when C. G. Smith, a mining engineer of Natal, South Africa, arrived at the home of his parents. He suffered a broken back in a mine accident and is paralyzed from the waist down but nevertheless will wed Miss Amy Palmer, an English nurse who cared for him in a hospital in Cardiff, Wales, and helped bring him home. Smith and a companion were repairing machinery in the South African workings. A huge rock fell, killing his companion. At Smith's request the company started him home, appropriating $25,000 for the surgical and other expenses of the trip. The journey was broken at Cardiff so that the injured man might receive special medical attention and it was there that he met Miss Palmer. Because of the size of the basket in which Smith traveled it was necessary to take out the windows of a railroad coach to get him aboard the train.

DR. W. H. ROBERTS ACCUSED.

Father of Former Mayor of Terre Haute Is Sued for Divorce.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 15.—Dr. William H. Roberts, county health commissioner and father of Donn M. Roberts, was sued for divorce by Mrs. Louise Virginia Roberts, who alleges incompatibility of temperament, in addition to cruel and inhuman treatment. Dr. Roberts, who is 77 years old, was married in February, 1914, to Mrs. Louise V. Zink, age 73, a wealthy widow of Sugar Creek township, who had been married three times before, losing one husband by divorce and two by death. Dr. Roberts had been married twice before, losing both former wives by death.

Dr. Roberts, who is one of the oldest practitioners in Vigo county, was estranged for a time from his son, Donn M., and during the latter's candidacy for the mayoralty in 1913 submitted to a newspaper interview in which he said meaner things about his son than any of the latter's opponents said about him. He charged, in this interview, that Donn had ruined him in a material way, and was unworthy of the confidence and support of the voters of Terre Haute. Dr. Roberts was a candidate for mayor at one time against his son, but withdrew before the primary election.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 15—Rumors that the British government had released many vessels to bring about more liberal shipments from Australia and Argentina, led to a sharp decline today in the wheat market here. Announcement of a fresh advance to a new high record in ocean freight rates from the United States tended to emphasize sentiment in favor of the bear side. Opening prices, which ranged from ⅝c to 1¼c lower, with May at $1.26¼ to $1.26⅝, and July at $1.19⅝ to $1.20⅛, were followed by only a slight rally.

The close was unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼c adeance, with May at $1.27 and July $1.21.

Prospects of enlarged receipts weakened corn. Breaking of the drought in Argentina counted somewhat, too, against the bulls. After opening ¼c to ⅝c lower, the market underwent a slight further sag.

The close was steady at a loss of ¼@⅜c.

Oats eased off with corn and wheat. Commission houses with resting orders were active buyers, however, at 50c for May delivery.

Weakness in grain and hogs made provisions decline, regardless of big shipments of late from here. Signs pointed to liberal arrivals of hogs next week.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

NNew York, Jan. 15—Trading was very active today but the movement was more or less confusing. Specialties like Bethlehem Steel, International Nickel, American Coal products and New York Airbrake made extreme gains of five to eighteen points, but other issues of that class rose only moderately. Mexican issues were again under the spell of depression and rails were dull and irregular while United States Steel was under persistent pressure. Mercantile Marine issues were again the outstanding features, the preferred stock rising 2⅛ to the new record of 82½ and the 4½ per cent. certificates 2¼ to 101¾, also a new maximum. The closing was irregular. Bonds were strong, with further heavy dealings in New York Central debentures.

Such activity as attended today's initial trading was again limited to speculative issues, particularly those forming the so-called munitions group. Gains of a point were made by American Car, American Locomotive and Mexican Petroleum, while Crucible Steel, Industrial Alcohol and International Nickel scored material advances. The movement was rather irregular, however, other prominent specialties including Baldwin Locomotive, California Petroleum, Studebaker and Lackawanna Steel falling from substantial fractions to almost two points. Mercantile Marine issues were again extremely active, the 4½ per cent. bonds advancing two points to the high record of 101½.

OFFICIAL FORECASTS.

For Fort Wayne and vicinity (radius 20 miles): Snow this afternoon, tonight and Sunday; warmer tonight.

For Indiana: Local snows tonight and Sunday; slightly warmer tonight south portion.

For Ohio: Local snows tonight and Sunday; slightly warmer tonight.

For Lower Michigan: Local snows tonight and Sunday; continued cold.

Shippers' forecast (radius 300 miles): Protect shipments during the next 24 to 36 hours from temperatures as follows: North, 16 degrees; east, 20; south, 28; west, 10 to 20.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The pressure is high over northwestern districts and the Atlantic coast states, and low to the north of the lake region and in the southwest. During the last 24 hours light precipitation occurred in the eastern portion of the lake region, Pacific states and in the northern and southern Rocky mountain region. While temperatures continue low throughout the greater portion of the country they have moderated considerably in western sections since yesterday morning, but are still 20 degrees or more below zero in the northwest and in the Canadian northwest provinces.

call within five minutes after the accident occurred. The heavy metal boat was unloaded on Erie street, but a solid coating of ice extending for nearly three hundred feet to the edge of the river made it impossible to lower the boat there. Then Stationmaster Degitz and the boat squad hurried to the Walton avenue bridge, there they cut niches for their feet and lowered the boat. In the meantime Assistant Fire Chief George Jasper responded to a call sent to the fire department, and arrived with pulmotor and blankets. Soon it was seen that it would be necessary to cut the ice, for the boat was having difficulty getting into the flooded district. Again the fire apparatus made a hurry-up run back to No. 3 station, where axes and picks were secured to assist in cutting a channel.

Volunteers Find Body.

The big searchlight on the fire apparatus was turned from the bridge into the river, and under the glare of its rays the boat crew worked toward the hole in the ice that marked the spot where the boys had gone under. Lawrence Elzey, 1528 East Wayne street, and Charles Prince, another neighbor, were volunteers in the police boat.

Elzey was forward grappling with a pike pole, and Prince was at the oars, when they reached a spot fifteen feet from the hole in the ice. Elzey lowered the hook, and felt the little body against a tree, held tight by the current.

He lifted the little form from the water and took it into the boat, and the two pulled for the shore.

A Grewsome Procession.

At this point the bank is long and high and steep and the ice covering was so smooth that a man had difficulty in even standing on it. Swinging the dead boy over his shoulder, Elzey stood at the foot of the bank, while half a hundred strong men toiled to drag the boat up the bank. It was found impossible to get the heavy craft up that way, and the men turned their attention to reaching the top of the hill with the body. Forming a line, they spread themselves in a human chain up the glassy bank, and another line of men stood below. Elzey, in rubber boots and coat, himself sheeted with ice, then started the dangerous climb.

Tugging, pulling, balancing, pushing the little procession worked toward the top of the bank, while a line of spectators, many of them women, peered into the darkness from places of safety along the Nickel Plate tracks.

Slowly and carefully they climbed, every few moments Elzey standing erect and the little arms of the boy swung over his shoulders. Then they reached the top and the crowd gathered closer, while the men lifted the tiny frenched and frozen body from the icy coat of the man who had risked his life to bring it to land.

The little trailer wagon that is used for the police boat was converted into an emergency ambulance and the men pulled it by ropes over the tracks and into the street. The body was placed in the patrol wagon and taken into the city.

The boat was dragged up over the ice sheet and there still stood in the darkness at the top of the bank a handful of women straining their eyes and peering into the darkness of the flooded woodland below. The moon shone on them, but there was no other light and the women stood and talked in whispers, for they were mothers themselves and neighbors of the dead boy. Long after the last of the rescue party had left the scene they were found still standing, numbed with horror, wrispering to one another.

The Family Hears.

In the meantime there was horror in the little house at 1603 East Wayne street, where Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, parents of the drowned boy, had just heard of his tragic death. Neighbors had come to them, and they were stunned and speechless. The other children sat about silent and the mothers overcome by the sudden grief, was too horrified to weep. They stood there, the family, in the kitchen of the little house, waiting for news of the finding of the body. Outside in the moonlight neighbors crowded close about the windows and watched the family in its sorrow.

Scene of Many Tragedies.

The spot at which the drowning occurred is several hundred feet below the site of the old Wines dam, where drownings have occurred by the score in the past fifty years. Some twenty-five years ago the summer record of deaths at the spot averaged five or six, and it wasn't until the dam washed out one winter that the number of deaths decreased. Students from Concordia college were drowned in the deep hole above the dam and for years it was considered the most dangerous spot in Fort Wayne rivers.

Even in the past few years a number of people have met violent death in the vicinity.

LYCEUM FEDS GO THROUGH LAKE FOREST

Pile Up Grand Little Score Against College Team.

In spite of the fact that the old lineup was more or less shot to pieces, St. Patrick's Lyceum Feds last night hung up a win against the Lake Forest college five, the final score standing 26 and 16 in favor of the home guard. The Feds scored their first point soon after the first whistle, Miller sliding one into the basket less than a minutes after the start of play. By the end of the first half the game was practically sewed up, and the second half was without some of the thrills that marked the opening period.

Flaherty and Miller divided honors pretty evenly at forward, and although Miller has credit for more baskets, the Irishman did his share of the work and held his end of the scoring machine well in hand. Lanky Vonderhaar, the seven-foot string that has worked into the center position, stood head and shoulders over the other men on the team, and his heighth gave him a grand young advantage in several places. Blee and Brown both worked hard in the after position.

Loos, favorite for several seasons, was out of the game last night, and it is whispered about the camp of the Feds that he may not come back. He has been a consistent worker and has done some-mighty pretty work in even the past few games, while he was being shifted from pillar to post, and it would be a shame for the team to lose him. The lineup and scores:

Lyceums, 26—Flaherty, R. F.; Miller, L. F.; Vonderhaar, C.; Brown, R. G.; Blee, L. G.

Lake Forest 16—McFerran, R. F.; Coleman, L. F.; Burst, C.; Kreuger, R. G.; Grey, L. G.

Field goals—Flaherty, 2; Miller, 5; Vonderhaar, 3; McFerran, 2; Coleman, 3; Burst, 1.

Foul goals—Flaherty, 1; Miller, 5; McFerran, 4.

Referee—Island.

Aeolians Win.

In the preliminary the Lyceum Aeolians won from the St. Paul Nationals 15 to 12. The lineups and scores:

Aeolians, 15—Rulo, R. F.; Loos, L. F.; McGuire, C.; Daley, R. G.; DeWald, L. G.

Nationals, 12—Hoffman, R. F.; Stegner, L. F.; Doerfler, C.; Walda, R. G.; Linnemeier, L. G.

Field goals—Rulo, 2; Loos, 1; McGuire, 4; Stegner, 4, Doerfler, 2.

Foul goals—McGuire, 1.

FRESHIE INDOOR TRACK SENSATION.

EARL EBY.

The newest sensation in indoor athletics is Earl Eby, a youngster of the middle west, who is stepping the half mile in less than two minutes. He is a freshie at Chicago university.

Eby first attracted attention at the national meet at San Francisco last summer. He ran in the junior events and made better time in the half than the senior stars of the country. Eby's mark was 1:58. Leroy Campbell, senior winner, did the half in 2:01.

Eby has beaten such speeders as T. M. Cramer, of the Olympic club of Frisco, and D. M. Scott, of Mississippi Agricultural college.

CONCORIDA BREAKS SCORING RECORD

Piles Up Ninety-Eight Points Against Central College.

It was a horrible lacing the Concordians piled up on Central college of Huntington last night, pulling down a final score of 98 and 9. The Concordians didn't try to work in any rough stuff, in fact they didn't need to, but they played double eights around the visitors and made them look sheepish at every stage.

Luerssen got away with a record that beats anything, ever done here in a single game, with a total of twenty-three field goals and five fouls. Wacker was second with ten field goals and one foul, and the other regulars worked splendidly, and after the first half Captain Byroade sent Gremel and Hendricks, substitutes, into the fray. Both of them added to the glory of the event by scoring. Here are the lineups and scores:

Concordias, 98—Schilf-Gremel, R. F.; Luerssen, L. F.; Wacker, C.; Metzdorf-Hendricks, R. G.; Dorn, L. G.

Centrals, 9—Swales, R. F.; Mommert, L. F.; Schepardson, C.; Buss, R. G.; Auman, L. G.

Field goals—Schilf, 6; Luerssen, 23; Wacker, 10; Metzdorf, 1; Dorn, 1; Gremel, 2; Hendricks, 3; Mommert, 3.

Foul goals—Luerssen, 5; Wacker, 1; Mommert, 3; Swales, 2.

Seconds Also Win.

The Concordia Seconds put in a good night and did their part toward breaking records. The lineups and scores:

Seconds, 23—Bauer, R. F.; Brommer, L. F.; Keb, C.; Bald, R. G.; Waltz, L. G.

South Sides, 0—Miller, R. F.; Jones, L. F.; Stocker, C.; Lake, R. G.; Leibt, L. G.

Field goals—Bauer, 2; Brommer, 4; Keb, 3; Bald, 1.

Foul goals—Brommer, 3.

Making a Big League Pitcher

(By Brown Holmes).

Just how much a manager figures in the development of a star pitcher and just how much needs to be done, sometimes, to save good raw material from the great scrap heap is shown by the case of Fred Toney, counted on to be a whale with the Cincinnati Reds the coming season.

Toney was turned from a castoff "dub" into a pitcher who won a big majority of his games with a second division club last season and next to Grover Alexander was the hardest pitcher in the National league to score against.

From the time Toney set strikeout records in the Blue Grass league in 1909 until last season, he was a puzzle. He had wonderful natural ability and every good baseball judge who looked at him said he ought to be a wonder. Wise managers and catchers tried to make him the great pitcher he ought to have been, then gave up hope. He made five trips to and from the major leagues.

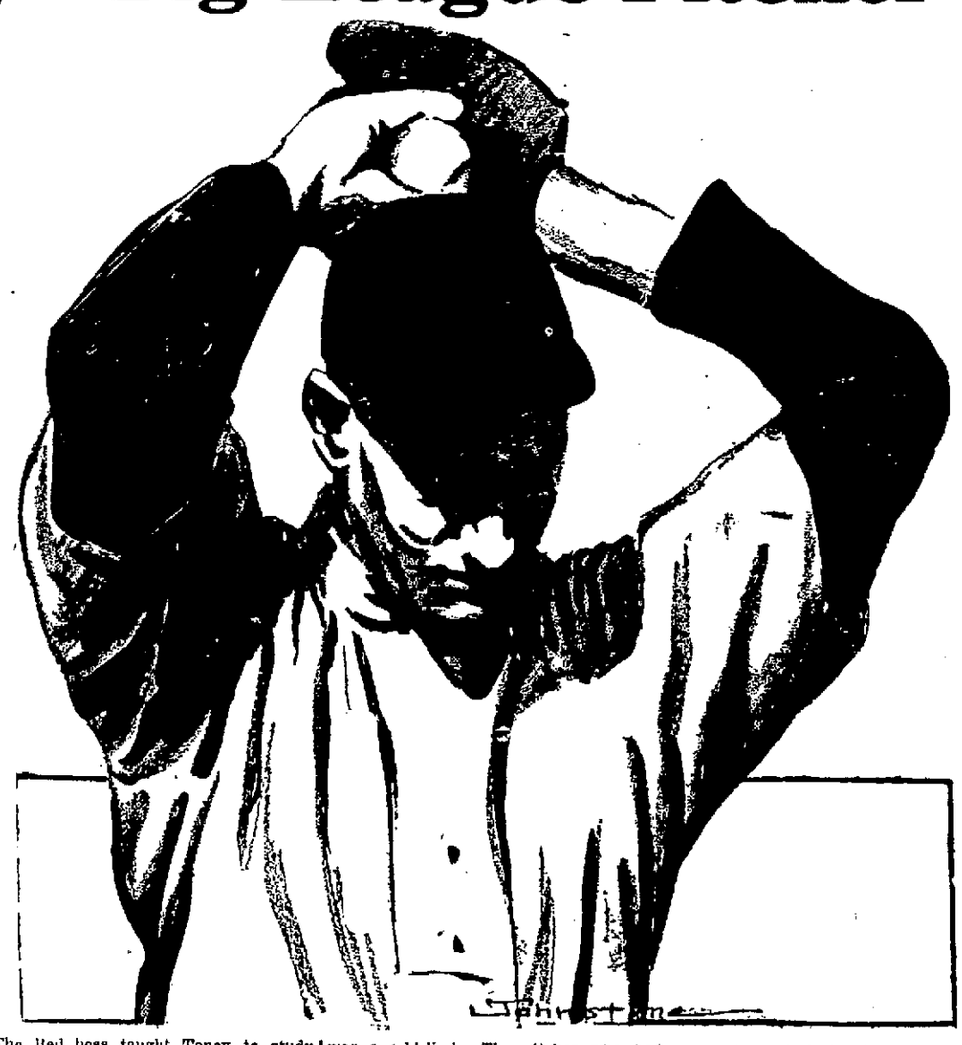
Finally, last spring, the big mountaineer found himself out of a job. He asked for another trial with the Cubs and was turned down. He wrote to every other club in the National and American leagues—fifteen of them—asking for a chance. He got one reply. It was from Buck Herzog, manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Herzog was willing to tackle the job of molding the big failure into a success.

Toney reported, without spring training, four days after the season opened. Herzog is one manager who can get a ball player in shape, and he started on the big job. He trained Toney for five weeks. He was criticized for keeping the big fellow on the payroll, but the Red leader had some ideas about pitchers and insisted on working them out.

Toney had rare speed and always tried to whiz the ball past the batter. Herzog taught him not to try to strike out every batter, but to make them bat at bad balls. Toney was a side arm pitcher; Herzog made him pitch overhand.

Herzog taught him to mix in a slow ball and slow curve with his fast one and to use his fadeaway on lefthand batters. He was taught to use the same motion in throwing his slow ball he used in throwing his speedy ones.



The Red boss taught Toney to study batters and "work" on them. He taught him to pitch with his head as much as with his arm

In five weeks Toney was ready—and he was a whirlind. The pitcher who had been the big mystery of baseball for five years won seventeen games and lost only six, held opposing teams to less than two runs a game and to a batting average of .175. He pitched six shutouts.

So, the manager who found Frank Baker and gave the game one of its greatest hitters, gave the game a great pitcher who had been lost.

"Let Me See the Color of Your Gold," Says Ed Smith; "Then I'll Produce"

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 15.—"When all the booster tickets are sold I will be ready to announce the lineup of my spring training squad," Ed Smith, holder of a Central league franchise, said today.

The committee which is disposing of 5,000 tickets for a boosters' day to provide South Bend with Central league baseball, however, expects more difficulty in selling the last block of 2,000 than the 3,000 already out. A member today said:

"It behooves every fan interested in Central league baseball to see that not only he is provided with the booster ticket but that all his friends are. We have not been everywhere as yet, by any means, but have visited many of the baseball communities we know and as a consequence they are pretty well supplied with tickets now. We are placing them in all cigar stores, and urge the fans to ask for them when they are not offered, as Mr. Smith is anxious to get officially started."

The news of South Bend's proposed return to baseball has been so widely advertised, Smith is being flooded with letters from all over the country. He will open up his office, he said, when all arrangements for taking over a Central league franchise permanently are completed.

While admitting he would soon have a very good idea of the talent he would try out in the spring, Mr. Smith said he would withhold all announcements as to the identity of the men he has in mind until he was absolutely assured of a berth in the league by the sale of the booster tickets. Made enthusiastic by the evident interest in Central league baseball expressed on all sides, nevertheless the stalwart baseball leader says he will feel better when things are all settled and he can work on a definite basis.

Les Darcy, Australian Ring Sensation, Must Add His Strength in Europe's War.

JACK KEARNS.

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—Les Darcy, the great Australian middleweight, must shoulder a rifle and add his strength to Europe's war

One more soldier added to the British firing line means a disappointment to American fight fans. Jack Kearns, who landed here recently, is one of the disappointed. He had arranged to bring Les Darcy to the United States under a three years' contract, but the order compelling the latest ring sensation to take up a new sort of fighting shattered Kearns' plans.

"All Australia made a protest against Darcy coming to America with me," said Kearns, "until finally the agitation reached such a stage that the authorities positively refused to permit him to leave his native land. Hundreds of mothers who had sent their boys to the front protested against granting a one year's leave, which I had asked of Speaker Richard Maher, of the Australian parliament.

"They held that inasmuch as they had offered up their boys to the country's cause, the fact that Darcy was a champion pugilist should not entitle him to any consideration.

"I pleaded with the speaker and even offered to put up a large cash bond to guarantee Darcy's safe return after one year, but he would not yield. He agreed with me that it would be a shame to send Darcy to the front to be shot, but he had to heed not only his own conscience, but the public feeling as well.

"The agitation to compel Darcy to go to the front became so heated that a close watch was kept upon the boy as it was freely charged that I had planned to kidnap him."

The Sportman's Creed

(By Morris Ackerman, of the Fish and Game Protective Association).

We believe in hunting and fishing as a means of honorable recreation.

We believe in catching fish and bagging game, not as a means of livelihood nor for the securing of food.

We believe in hunting and fishing during the seasons provided by law and do so. We believe in obeying those laws, and not in any case exceeding the legal bag limits.

We are ready to lend time and money to restock streams, help replenish game and birds.

We are for forestry conservation, clean streams and fair laws that relate to our fish and game.

We believe in respecting the property rights of the farmer.

The song and insectivorous birds should be protected at all times.

We believe in the great outdoors, the silent places, and in the beauties of a wonderful nature.

It is not the weight of our creel, nor the number of our catch by which we measure our success, or lack of it.

We are for punishment of violators of fish and game laws, and will lend assistance in law enforcement.

We seek the companionship of the brothers who find enjoyment in the game we love, to learn from them, and to impart the knowledge we have gained in our favorite pastime.

But the greatest of all of our creed is that the seeking of pleasure in our chosen way, is the seeking of health; the thing most valuable of all life's treasures.

CALLS FRANK BIEMER THE WISE OLD BIRD

Bud Bains, in the Dayton Evening Herald, pays the following respects to Frank Biemer:

"Frank Biemer, who is considering the purchase of the Fort Wayne club, is rather wise. Before making any offer to Owner Klitzke or before accepting one, he is making a survey of prices for various minor and big league clubs so that he may have a reasonable conception of what the Fort Wayne club is worth. Then he will reject or accept the price which Klitzke sets. Biemer insists that he will not become a magnate of the club but that he is just buying it for several Fort Wayne business men. He claims he would rather pay and see nine innings than get in free and see the last three."

LIGHT FANTASTIC RUINS RUNNERS.

Steve Farrell, track coach at Michigan university, has ordered members of his running teams to refrain from dancing at private parties or college hops. He says dancing spoils a runner's stride and there is little that is more important to a runner than the well known stride. Farrell says he will take the ban off dancing when a dance is invented with different steps than now used.

OSSIAN NEWS.

Ossian, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. J. W. Crummitt was hostess for the Whileaway club at a very enjoyable meeting Thursday afternoon. The ladies responded to roll call with maxims, and then had a very interesting discussion of current events. A social hour followed during which the ladies were busy with their needle and fancy work, and later the hostess served a nice lunch. Those present were Mesdames A. F. Roe, M. C. Aldred, Frank Zehrung, Aaron Deich, A. A. Melching, Fred Mills, Frank Foughty, D. C. Wybourn, Clyde Wagner, Charles Goshorn, Will Hoopengardner, J. E. Plummer, and Miss Maud Sheehan, of Monroeville, as a guest. The club will meet again Thursday, Jan. 27, with Mrs. Aaron Deich.

Mrs. E. H. Roe and daughter Catherine and Mrs. W. W. Fryback spent Wednesday evening in Bluffton calling on friends and attendig a cafeteria supper given by the ladies of the Bluffton M. E. church.

Mrs. A. C. Ferguson, who has been in very poor health for several months, is now at Edgerton, Ind., visiting with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Longfellow.

Miss Blanch Wilson is in Ossian visiting for a few days with her brother and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Wilson, who have just gone to housekeeping in the cottage of Mrs. Gee Lord.

Rev. J. Orr Powell, pastor of the Ossian M. E. church, has been conducting a very successful series of meetings at Prospect. These meetings will close on Sunday evening and Rev. Powell will then go to Monroeville to condute a two weeks' series of meetings in the M. E. church there.

Mrs. E. Salisbury is very critically ill and her death is expected at any time. She is suffering from pneumonia and a complication of troubles.

W. W. Fryback was a Fort Wayne visitor Friday.

Mrs. Felix Summers will be hostess for the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid society on next Thursday afternoon.

The Aikman meetings at the Presbyterian church still continue with much interest. There will also be services Saturday evening this week, and Dr. Aikman will be at both the Sunday services, leaving Monday for Cincinnati, where he goes to begin a series of meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson entertained at dinner Mr. and Mrs. Forest Wilson and Miss Grace Derr.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Yager had as dinner guests Thursday Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Aikman, Rev. and Mrs. Frank K. Baker, sons Frank and Robert, and Mrs. Anna Boyer.

A. A. Melching made a business trip to Fort Wayne Friday.

The N. M. G. club was most delightfully entertained teh other afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. C. Hunter. The ladies spent a social afternoon with their fancy work and their hostess conducted a number of interesting contests. Afterwards she served very nice refreshments of rose ice cream, cake and coffee. Those attending were cMsdames George M. Way, Frank Quackenbush, John Woodward, E. T. Hawley, J. V. Goshorn, John Hanna, M. E. Snencer, Frank McDowell, G. A. Bowman and Josephus Caston. The club will meet next time with Mrs. Bowman on Tuesday, January 25.

Pet Stock Department Brings Big Rabbit Exhibit

John H. Logan, Director

IN preparing for the sixth annual great Triangle Poultry show, to be given by the Allen County Poultry Fanciers' association in Fort Wayne, beginning Tuesday next and continuing all week, many local and out of town exhibitors are very enthusiastic.

Practically every poultry and pet stock fancier in Fort Wayne and Allen county will be represented in the coming show, as the Wayne Pet Stock association will be one of the features of this years' exhibition.

This organization is distinct from the poultry association, but as the interests are so similar, it was decided to make the affair a co-operative show, so the patrons of the show will not only have the opportunity of seeing the finest poultry ever shown in this city, but the added attractions of the Wayne Pet Stock association as well.

President C. S. Harris, of the Wayne Pet Stock association gives the interesting information that a few years ago there were but few interested in the raising of rabbits and cavies, while today there are quite a number raising rabbits for commercial purposes.

The Association

The officers of the Fort Wayne association are C. S. Harris, president; R. C. Evans, vice president; F. A. De Villbiss, secretary, and O. L. Leuenberger, treasurer. The directors are G. E. Ellison, O. A. Brown, and T. B. Berberich. The above organization was formed through the diligent work of Mr. Harris and a few of his friends who were raising rabbits more for a pleasure than for commercial purposes.

The local organization was formed at the home of Mr. Harris, June 10, 1915, at that time there being only ten members; while today the local organization is composed of thirty. The national organization is composed of fifteen hundred members.

A Large Entry

Mr. Harris states that a large and enthusiastic number of exhibitors from Ohio, Michigan and Indiana have entered into the Fort Wayne show, and the number of entries will exceed one hundred.

A great variety of breeds of rabbits are raised in Fort Wayne, among those being the Rufus Red, Flemish Giant, the New Zealand Red, Angora, White Beauties, Jet Black Giant, German Checks, Dutch Belted, English Spot, Blue Vienna, Himalayan, and the Golden Tan, and last, but not least, as in the poultry industry, the common utility rabbit.

The Judges

The coming exhibition will be conducted under its own officials, having no official connection with the poultry department. C. S. Gibson, of Detroit, secretary of the national association, and John N. Fehr, of Indianapolis, will serve as judges at the Fort Wayne show. Mr. Gibson has served as judge at the San Francisco and Tacoma shops, having also been secured to judge the Chicago show.

Many Prizes

The local club has made special arrangements for the awarding of a large number of special prizes, in addition to a large amount of cash prizes and ribbons. The exhibition promises to be the largest ever held in the middle west.

A Vast Industry.

The raising of rabbits in America is practically a new industry, but is multiplying rapidly.

California now ranks as the leading producer of rabbits in America, there being thousands of pounds of rabbit meat shipped to San Francisco and Los Angeles markets each week.

A Large Club.

One club in Germany has a membership of 40,000, mostly all of which are engaged in raising rabbits for meat. The large hospitals of European countries possess their own "rabbitry."

The Poultry Association

The Poultry Fanciers' association of Allen county is now one of the very strongest organizations in the United States. Steadily from year to year the Fort Wayne poultry show has been climbing upward until it now ranks as one of the leading shows in the middle west. Not only this, however, but Fort Wayne also ranks as one of the greatest centers of fancy poultry in America. A large number of Fort Wayne fanciers have a national reputation as breeders and advertisers. Thousands of dollars have been spent by breeders in and around Fort Wayne for fancy poultry and each year they are spending more money in that line.

Members and Entries

The entries for the exhibit closed at 6 p. m., on January 6th. The following are the members of the associations and their respective breeds:

The Judges

As has been the custom of the association in past years, great care and judgment has been used in the selection of judges for the exhibit. The show this year has already given so much promise of eclipsing the shows of past years that it has been decided to use the services of three competent judges, these being, Geo. H. Northrup, of Granville, N. Y.; H. A. Pickett, of Mattoon, Ill., and A. E. Hamlin, of Angola, Ind. These men have judged some of the biggest shows in the middle west including Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and many other prominent shows.

Many State Meetings.

In connection with the present show the state meets of the following clubs will be held here: American White Orphington club, National Partridge Wyandotte club, National Single Comb White Leghorn club, International Single Comb Black Minorca club, American Single Comb Brown Leghorn club, and the American Houdan club.

Merchants Respond

A vast amount of interest has been shown the association by the merchants of the city, who have shown much generosity in donating many handsome silver cups to be awarded to the winners.

Poultry for Pleasure and Profit

Not very many years ago it would have been a hard matter for a person to have found very many people in Fort Wayne who raised poultry for pleasure. People in general in those days looked upon poultry as the farmers of today do, the good woman's work. For profit the ladies got just what the poultry was inclined to produce, no pains as to their feeding, housing and the like being given them.

But today all is different and a man or woman who can breed poultry intelligently is looked upon as a business man or woman, and the by-products of the business are eagerly sought after at about any reasonable price the producer wishes to ask. As for pleasure, you will find perhaps as many people keeping poultry today as those following other pleasurable pursuits, and for profit everybody seems to be keeping them. You can find a flock in nearly every back yard, and many of the thoroughbred kind, too.

There are many branches of poultry raising that affords much pleasure as well as profit. The pleasure and profits derived from poultry raising are such as will bring into action more important matters. People have learned that it takes as much skill to raise good chickens and to produce an abundance of eggs as it does to do anything else one might think of taking up. The poultry industry is no longer a small thing. The great American hen and her products are said to be worth a billion dollars.

Champion of World

Fort Wayne now has the distinction of raising the champion bird of the world. W. D. Holterman, the widely known breeder of Aristocratic barred rocks, recently having won this distinction at the great Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco, this show being the largest poultry show ever held in the country, there being on exhibition 7,725 specimens of the poultry industry.

This bird will be on exhibition at the Fort Wayne show.

In speaking of his recent winning, Mr. Holterman gives his views on poultry raising: "I did not begin raising poultry for merely the profit that was in it," he says, "but it was to escape the same routine of business each and every day. I find no better means of refreshing my mind and body than by raising thoroughbred poultry, and for the man that is seeking recreation as well as profit, the raising of poultry is a pleasure to which many men and women turn. It is not the same routine of business that so many of us are compelled to go through each and every day; it is a business that varies, a business that requires but little capital, a business that can be carried on by any man that will go to his home after a day's work in the shops or office and turn away from his cares and worry with a sigh of relief and become an enthusiastic poultryman, and therefore the industry is open to anyone who is seeking recreation as well as profit."

The Officers

J. C. Howenstein, one of the leading business men, is at present secretary of the association, and it is through his constant work that the association has shown its steady increase in memberships. The other officers are: W. D. Holterman, president, and Fred C. Lang, vice president. The board of directors consists of the following: W. D. Holterman, W. L. McMillen, John F. Rissing, Fred C. Lang, S. M. Holtzman, Theo. Ebbert, J. C. Howenstein, John Logan, Henry Wiegand and John Terry.

PAYS TAXES ON CHURCH LOT

Mrs. August Covey, of Attica, Asks That $772.72 Be Returned

Covington, Ind., Jan. 15—Mrs. August Covey, of Attica, has been paying taxes since 1898 on a lot owned and occupied by the Christian church in that city, having paid $772.72. A bill for the amount was filed with the commissioners last week, but they refused to pay the claim, acting on the advice of Dale J. Crittenberger, state auditor, who believes the matter can only be adjusted by special act of the legislature. Suit will probably be filed against the county.

TURN SLUM GIRL INTO A LADY

Art of Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell Seen in "Pygmalion."

Though he does not say so, clothes play an important part in the transformation of Bernard Shaw's heroine, Eliza Doolittle, from a flower vender of the London slums into a 'lady,' fit to associate with west end society and be presented at Buckingham palace. As a scientific experiment, Henry Higgins, a professor of phonetics attemps to work the transformation by teaching Eliza to speak pure, high-bred English instead of her wretched jargon of slang and cockney dialect. He succeeds in doing this and in the process Eliza becomes a fixture in the professor's household and wins a warm place in the hearts of its other members.

That is the plot of Mr. Shaw's play, "Pygmalion," which is to be presented to theater-goers of this city. It is unfolded into five entertaining acts, enlivened by constant flashes of the celebrated Shawvian wit and epigrams, and made interesting by the delightful acting of Mrs. Patrick Campbell and her excellent company. Magda, Paula Tanqueray and Lady Patricia completely sinks her personality in the ignorant, vulgar but good-hearted girl of the slums. When she first appears, she is hardly recognizable in Eliza's ragged dress and dirty apron and she has chosen a most ludicrous costume for Eliza's visit to the professor when she goes to ask him to make a "lady" of her. In a shabby purple skirt, a ragged dull white apron, an orange waist, a black scarf and Persian border, and a purple velvet hat trimmed with straggling plumes, purple, blue, green and scarlet, she makes the audience roar with laughter.

Promptly upon being received by the professor as a pupil, Eliza is relieved of her inharmonious garments and blossoms out in a gorgeous Japanese kimono of apple green silk embroidered in gold and red.

In the next act she attends an "at home" in the apartment of Mrs. Higgins, the professor's aristocratic mother, attired in a brilliant dress of black silk with a design of clusters of pink roses and green leaves. The skirt is draped in a panier fashion and slit slightly in front. A broad black velvet girdle, a white monseline collar fringe on the sleeves and bodice front finish the costume. She wears a heavy jet necklace and close cap-like hat of black velvet with large loops.

In the fourth act Mrs. Campbell wears a striking evening gown having a skirt of coral brocade and bodice girdle of sky-blue satin, sash of blue satin is drawn from the waist line at the front around to the back at knee heighth. A lattice of brilliants pass over the shoulders. The upper part of the bodice is of splendid white lace. Over the back and sides of the skirt falls a straight tunic of white lace edged with silk fringe. A cluster of pink roses is worked at the waistline, and Eliza's long pearl necklace would excite the envy of a duchess.

In the last act Mrs. Campbell appears in a very handsome gown of oyster panne velvet, with a full hanging tunic, hanging from a hip yoke of white crepe with applique of black net outlined with silver and brilliants. The bodice and sleeves are made of applique crepe and the collar and reverse of velvet. An ornament of brilliants is placed at the hem of the skirt in front and two pink roses are tucked into the corsage. With this she wears a shepherdess hat of black velvet, having a wide black moire ribbon stretching across the front of the crown, tied at the left side of the brim and hanging in two long ends. A pink rose is fastened to one of the ends.

COUNTESS OLGA VON HATZFELDT,

"NEWLYWEDS AND THEIR BABY"

Lively Attraction Comes Thursday Matinee and Night.

As a theatrical attraction "The Newlyweds and Their Baby," that comes to the Majestic Thursday matinee and night, meet requirements in every particular. Indeed it is doubtful whether George McManus himself could have improved upon the face, figure and form of Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt, who plays the part of Mrs. Newlywed. She is there with the marcel waves, dreamy eyes, cherry lips, full bust, tight fitting dress, short skirt and all, including even the mushy talk which she hands out to Papa Newlywed and her wild ideas as to the capabilities of the baby.

But the baby! He, of course, is the center of attraction through the entire performance—that is while he is not lost to sight through the operation of the kidnappers and other unscrupulous persons seeking to ruin the Newlyweds' happiness and to wreck their family circle. Harold West, although he is twenty years of age, makes an acceptable, presentable and lovable baby, even in spite of the fact that he must bear with all the handicaps of facial expression, starchy clothes and inability to say more than "Da, Da," that McManus gave him to start with. Harold West's ability is not fully shown until he appears as Major Knott Mark. Then he shows that notwithstanding his diminutive size he is a mighty clever actor. The course of the play calls him to change from the major to the baby, and from baby to major—innumerable times, and he is always equal to the occasion.

The company numbers 40 and 1-2 people, the 1-2 of course, being the baby. The chorus is attractive and knows how to sing. The number of clever vocalists and splendid stage settings are among the features that go to make the "Newlyweds" a show of more than ordinary entertaining powers.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

World's Greatest Spectacle Coming to Majestic Soon.

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward D. W. Griffiths' wonderful new art of pictorialized musical spectacle will be the attraction at the Majestic theater for one week, beginning Monday night, Jan. 24, with daily matinees thereafter.

The first half of this great picture exhibits the salient events of the civil war, which came to a close at Appomattox fifty years ago, Lincoln's call for volunteers, Sherman's march to the sea, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theater. In the second half the south's "second uprising," this time against the carpet bag regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "little confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintains two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heartache and pathos of the stricken south are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. 18,000 people and 3,000 horses. There are 5,000 scenes in this great spectacle and it cost $500,000 to produce. On the musical side, Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This is played by an orchestra of thirty. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentment" of long ago seem most realistic. Among the popular favorites in the large cast are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Spottiswoode Aiken, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis and Mary Alden.

The sale of seats will be open Thursday morning, but mail orders containing remittances will receive careful attention. There are two performances daily after Monday, at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m., and the entertainment runs three hours.

AT KEITH PALACE

TWO SHOWS THIS EVENING.

New Palace Will Present Twin Bill Tonight—Song Revue.

The New Palace will present a double bill this evening with the first show opening at 7:30 o'clock and the curtain rising on the second show at 9:15 o'clock. These two shows will be given by the big bill headed by the Dwight Pepple's "Song and Dance Revue of 1915," with Virginia Luby, Martha Boggs and Martha Courtney leading a bevy of other pretty girls through a melange of song and dance hits that include the latest vogues in both branches of amusement endeavor. It's a darling of an act with a polish and finish that will not easily be forgotten.

The sketch, "Billy's Santa Claus," is a novel trick in which J. C. Lewis, jr., the clever little surprise of a boy actor, is the principal figure. J. C. jr.'s little sister and big sister are in the same sketch which is neatly arranged to exploit their individual talents while unraveling at least a semblance of a plot hinging on the return of Billy's dissolute papa on Christmas eve. "The Mudtown Minstrels," Creighton, Belmont and Creighton; Hawley and Hawley; Wilfred Dubois, the eccentric juggler, and the New Palace movie program complete this bill which closes this evening.

The bill for the first half of the coming week has another of the big Menlo Moore acts on it. This girl act is entitled "The Live Wires." It is in no wise a burlesque show, but is one of those tasty bits of vaudeville for which the name of Menlo Moore is famous. Jack Pearl and Herman Meyer are the principal fun-makers with this striking comedy. Nip and Tuck in bits of acrobatic nonsense; Bernham and Irwin will present their song sketch at the piano, with the Melnotte Twins in songs, laces and graces on the same bill. Phil Roy and Arthur Roy are to do their novelty farce comedy, "Fun in a Dining Car," one of the real laughing acts of the season.

VAUDEVILLE AT TEMPLE

Four Acts and Pictures With Change of Bill During the Week, to Be the Policy.

The coming week the Temple theater will return to its former love and will offer a vaudeville program of four acts and two reels of moving pictures. The bills for the first half of the week will play an engagement closing on Wednesday night, and will be followed by a new show, opening Thursday afternoon and closing on Saturday night. Three shows will be given daily, 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7:30 and 9 in the evening. The feature of the first bill will be Geo. Lovett, Mlle. Zenda and the Original Mercedes Crane, an act that was featured over the Pantages Circuit, having just closed on that time. Their work has in the past proved such a sensation that it has been found advisable to play them for the entire act week, in place of a half a week, as will be done with the other acts booked at the Temple.

Another novelty new to the vaudeville patrons of this city will be a boxing Kangaroo. This animal boxes with his sparring partner, and aside from showing ring generalship, it offers a brand of comedy that has no equal. Will H. Field will also be a furnisher of laughs. This comedian has played this city before and at that time made for himself a large following on account of his way of telling droll jokes and singing the present day song hits. Juggling Wilbur and two reels of pictures make up the bill for the first half of the week.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

"THE WINGED IDOL."

A Great Picture at the Jefferson Last Times Today.

"The Winged Idol," featuring Katherine Kaelred and House Peters, scored a lasting success at the Jefferson yesterday. The play is strong and unusual and was presented in a most artistic manner. The stage settings are elaborate and the gowns worn by Miss Kaelred are magnificent, especially the head dress. These are of the latest designs as worn by the noblewomen of the Russian court. Miss Kaelred is characterized as the most accomplished "vampire woman" on the American stage and as the Russian Countess she maintains her reputation, and she gives a wonderful interpretation of the part. House Peters, as the derelict, gives a performance that contributes materially to the enforcement of a fine theme. The subtitles are also a strong contributing factor to "The Winged Idol," lending it dignity and dramatic value. The last showing is today.

Monday, Marguerite Clark will be seen in "Mice and Men," a Paramount picture.

Indianapolis Man Too Ill to Summon Aid When Death Claims Wife.

Indianapolis, Jan. 15.—Tatrino Salvatore, 26, was taken to the city hospital yesterday and from the same bed of tattered rags the body of his young wife, Felicita, was removed to the city morgue. Felicita's body had lain beside her husband in an unheated room for many hours, Tatrino being too ill from pneumonia to summon aid. Mrs. Salvatore had expected to become a mother within a few days.

Salvatore, a laborer, had been out of work for some time and was stricken with pneumonia. He had no furniture except a bed. There was no stove. The wife "picked" coal, which was burned in an iron cooking pot placed near the bed.

The Salvatores were given their supper by kindly neighbors Thursday night. When they lay down on their bed of rags, they were hopeful, for Tatrino had been promised a job as soon as he could work. He awakened about 4 o'clock yesterday morning and found his wife had died during the night. He attempted to summon help, but was unable to leave the bed and his feeble cries brought no response. The tragedy was discovered in the afternoon by an acquaintance of the couple, who came to call. A physician said Mrs. Salvatore probably died from a sudden attack of pneumonia brought on by her condition and by ill nourishment and suffering from the cold. Salvatore's condition is serious.

AT THE TEMPLE.

The final performance of the Temple Players in "The Lure" and the end of stock at the Temple theater occurs this evening and it is certain that there will be a big throng present for the event. The Temple Players have made hundreds of warm friends during the time that they have been here and all these friends will be on hand this evening to pay their farewell respects to all of their favorites.

Miss Ethel Hamerick and Frank Gallagher, the leading actors in the Temple Players, will come in for an ovation. These two have made a bigger hit during the time that they have been playing in this city than any other actors ever seen here. Miss Hamerick and Mr. Gallagher have great roles in "The Lure," and though hundreds of people have seen them play them during the run of this drama at the Temple, those who have not yet had the pleasure of seeing them in "The Lure" will want to do so this evening.

Next week vaudeville will be the attraction at the Temple theater and the vaudeville will start at the home of vaudeville with George Lovett, Mlle. Zenda and the Original Mercedes Crane as the headliners. These people are among the biggest acts in vaudeville.

AT THE LYRIC.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" will be shown at the Lyric for six days the coming week.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a pictorial propaganda calling to arms defenseless America. It is a plea against war, not for war, urging as its battle cry a preparedness for war in time of peace.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a photo spectacle with a mission. It was written and produced by J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Vitagraph company, in an effort to awake in every American a desire to protect his loved ones. The story, based on Hudson Maxim's book, "Defenseless America," is educational in its description of submarines, aeroplanes, torpedo boats and other implements of warfare. It compares America to other countries and shows with a clearness the comparative size of our army and navy. Hudson Maxim appears and by means of small models illustrates on the screen the needs of our country.

A special musical program has been arranged for this picture. The admission price will be 10 cents and 25 cents.

Concert at the Scottish Rite Cathedral tomorrow, January 16th, at 3 o'clock. All Masons, their families and their friends are cordially invited.

Robert Fox has returned from a business trip to Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. Elmer Thornburg Beaten to Death With Club Near Elkhart.

Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 15.—The body of Mrs. Elmer Thornburg, 40 years old, wife of a farmer, who had been brutally murdered with a club, was found yesterday afternoon in bed at her home twelve miles north of this city. Her head had been battered with a stick of wood which lay near the bed. No one was in the house when the body was found, and it is not known when the crime was committed. A nephew, Sylvester Thornburg, who has been employed on the farm, has disappeared and is being sought by the sheriff.

The woman's husband is in Albany, near Muncie, where he went on a business trip early in the week. The murder was discovered by Thomas Shriner, whose farm adjoins the Thornburg place.

Shriner in passing along the road noticed the shades of the windows drawn and horses with bridles on running loose in the yard. He investigated and found the body. Mrs. Thornburg evidently had been attacked as she lay in bed.

Sheriff Reed, of Cassopolis, learned last evening that a man answering the description of Sylvester Thornburg boarded a train at Cassopolis at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. He has asked the police in other cities to assist in the search for the man.

The Thornburgs came to Elkhart county from Albany last March. The farm they occupy belongs to the brother of a local minister.

will be shown the most noteworthy achievement in the history of motion pictures. But "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" is more than a motion picture. It is a great national propaganda dealing with the most important problem that has confronted this nation since the Civil war—the problem of America's unpreparedness.

If you have a drop of red blood in your veins, you will experience in witnessing this production a thrill such as you have never known before.

You will see the enemy approaching, the powerlessness of New York, the weakness of its forts and defenses. You will see the havoc wrought by the enemy's howitzers, submarines, airships; by its shells, shrapnels and bombs.

You will see the most beautiful sky line in the world in flames, the metropolis of the western hemisphere devastated.

You will see New York fall, the desecration that follows.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" is a call to arms against war.

It was written by J. Stuart Blackton and vitagraphed under his personal supervision.

Scores of prominent Americans in the army and navy, and administrative circles have contributed to its preparation.

Mr. Charles Richman, the distinguished actor, heads a cast of eminent Vitagraph stars—a cast containing twenty-five thousand National Guardsmen, five thousand horses, eight thousand supernumeraries. It will be at this theater—

The GIRL and the GAME

A STORY OF MOUNTAIN RAILROAD LIFE

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

AUTHOR OF "WHISPERING SMITH," "THE MOUNTAIN DIVIDE," "STRATEGY OF GREAT RAILROADS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY FRANK H. SPEARMAN.

SYNOPSIS.

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scenic railroad, by George Storm, a newsboy. Grown to young womanhood Helen makes a spectacular double rescue of Storm, now a freight fireman, and of her father and his friends, Amos Rhinelander, financier, and Robert Seagrue, promoter, from a threatened collision between a passenger train and a runaway freight. Safe-breakers employed by Seagrue and Capelle, his lawyer, interrupted by Helen while stealing General Holmes' survey plans of the cut-off line for the Tidewater, fatally wound General Holmes and escape. Storm and Helen chase the murderers on a light engine and capture them. Spike has hidden the plans and manages to inform Seagrue where they are cached. Her father's estate badly involved by his death, Helen goes to work on the Tidewater. Seagrue helps Spike to break jail and uses him to set fire to a powder train hauled by Storm's engine. Helen saves Storm from a horrible death.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER IV.

When Helen Holmes took the day key at Signal the little office had already passed from the quiet kind to the remorselessly active kind of those small way stations that drive innocent men mad. Two rival lines maintaining large construction camps and getting all their supplies through Signal station, were engaged in a race to build a mountain cut-off—and a considerable one. Despite all the help Lyons, the overworked agent, could give Helen, she found the tasks of her day about all that her strength would compass. There were little moments of respite. The railroad men were, every one, considerate of her.

Nor could Helen, situated as she was, escape occasional office visits from Seagrue, whose activity as head of the opposition construction camp was unabated. Going over to the station one day to watch his men unload a shipment of material he stepped into the office ostensibly to make inquiries—in reality, to steal a few minutes with Helen Holmes, whom he found busy but alone.

Seagrue spoke blandly: "I hear you're becoming quite a railroad expert." She made no effort to reply. "Getting really clever at the key, Lyons says." Helen, entering waybills, went on with her writing. "By the way," asked Seagrue, evenly, "any word this morning from our steam shovel?"

She looked toward the window—the local freight train had just pulled in. "It may be out there now, on No. 85."

Seagrue seemed in no haste to investigate, and Helen had almost lost hope of any diversion in that direction when the office door opened and George Storm walked in.

He was just out of his engine cab, and deliberate and composed as usually, but his eyes, lighting to greet Helen, cooled when he saw Seagrue. Storm nodded curtly toward him and was greeted in kind. Then the stalwart engineman turned his attention to Helen and Seagrue was soon made to feel the pangs of being distinctly third in the situation and without an anesthetic.

"And the best of it all is," said Storm at length to Helen, "this is my last run on local freights. I am assigned tonight to the Limited."

Helen lifted her eyebrows in surprise: "Some run they're giving you!"

Seagrue took the chance to join sarcastically in: "Right in line for chief of motive power, eh, Storm?"

Storm was not to be disturbed. He only regarded Seagrue calmly for a moment. Then he turned good naturedly to thank Helen. While soldiering agreeably at this task, his fireman intruded on the scene long enough to remind him they were waiting for him to get out. Storm, with an expression of disgust at the interruption, nodded gruffly to the fireman, concluded his talk with Helen and walked out. Helen rose to go out on the platform also. Seagrue intervened to distract her attention. It was useless. She must deliver a message, she said, to the conductor, and Seagrue, peeved, was left to stay with himself or unwillingly to follow. He followed; but even then it was only to find himself watching Storm's good-bys waved to Helen from the cab. And she saw them, too; nothing escaped her attention.

Seagrue followed her with his eyes as she walked into the office. The more she showed her indifference to him—indifference sometimes bordering on contempt—the more she piqued his interest. He turned with better luck to look for the overdue steam shovel. The equipment had come and a gang of his men were preparing to set it up.

Rhinelander, in charge of the Tidewater line camp, was pushing Seagrue closely in the construction race and as the head of a big crew of men imbued with his own spirit was laughing at obstacles that made Seagrue's head ache; and with equipment actually somewhat inferior was forging daily ahead of his rival. But the mail now brought him a note from the chairman of the executive committee of his board that almost paralyzed his activities:

"Oceanside.

"Dear Rhinelander: Our survey party advise that they cannot re-locate the pass over the Superstition range. Unless you can furnish a survey of the cut-off pass before the first, our people will withdraw their financial support. BOWERS."

Amos Rhinelander, sitting at his dusty and littered desk, stared at the abrupt communication. Bowers was his friend; the executive committee of the board were with him—this he felt assured of. But somewhere influences must be at work against him. He suspected Capelle, still a board member, and a continual intriguer. Capelle was a master worker in underground effects and besides being Seagrue's own attorney was himself heavily interested in opposing enterprises of the Coast line. To throttle Rhinelander in the construction effort begun by Helen's own father before his death was to advance his own interests as well as those of his client. Rhinelander's decision as to what must be done to meet this opposition was prompt.

He consulted a timetable, called his foreman, asked for a man to carry his handbags to the station and began changing his clothes for a trip.

Not far away, and at about the same time, Seagrue was reading his own mail. It contained this note:

"Unsuccessful report concerning pass submitted. Persuaded backers to withdraw support on the first. This will stop operation on Rhinelander's cut-off, as we know he cannot produce survey.

"CAPELLE."

In Seagrue's hut a party of newspaper men from Oceanside were waiting to be taken on an inspection trip over the construction.

"I'm ready for you, boys," said Seagrue, in high spirits, to the journalists. "We'll look over the work near here first," he announced, ripping open a box of cigars.

"Hold it, Mr. Seagrue," cried a camera man, focussing on the manager. "We want you, first, right there where you are, at your desk. Hold it!"

"Bad news, Helen," he said, plunging at once into the unpleasant subject. "I am on my way to Oceanside," he added, when she had read Bowers' note. "The directors meet tonight. Someone is trying to undermine us. But whether I succeed in changing their views or not, I'm going to fight if I have to fight all night."

Helen was too upset to speak for a minute. For her, so much depended on the success of her own road in reaching the mountains with a cut-off first. Rhinelander, worried though he was, tried to cheer her up. Spike outside, listening, gathered that Rhinelander was on his way to the city. He hung around the platform till the local passenger pulled in, watched Rhinelander board it, and, mingling with Seagrue's men, walked unobserved over to the latter's camp. He found his boss with the journalists.

"What is it?" demanded Seagrue, scenting news in Spike's appearance.

"Rhinelander has just gone to Oceanside."

Seagrue smiled. "Did he get a letter this morning?"

"He did."

Their confab was broken in on by one of the newspaper men who had a print of the photo he had taken of Seagrue at his desk. Seagrue inspected this with the greatest pleasure. "Fine!" he exclaimed. "Good picture!"

A whimsical idea seized him. He wrote a word or two across the back of the print and recalled Spike. "Take this over to Helen Holmes. Give it to her with my compliments." So saying he turned to the photographer.

Spike's reception at the station was always a chilly one. This time Helen took his message and dismissed him before she opened the envelope. When she saw what Seagrue had send she was angry. Her first impulse was to tear the hateful print in two. Instead, she contemptuously impaled it on a steel file near at hand. A moment later, removing the print to file a message, she looked at the picture again. Her attention was attracted to a paper lying on Seagrue's desk. It had been caught by the camera lens. The longer she looked the more carefully her eyes fixed on this object revealed in the photograph. Very curious now, Helen opened a drawer, took from it a reading glass and studied the contents of Seagrue's desk. Her heart almost stopped beating as she realized that her suspicions must be correct. With the aid of the ordinary glass she could plainly see the survey that had been stolen from her father's library.

Helen looked toward Seagrue's camp. It was there even now, and if she could recover the precious find it was not too late to save her own interests as well as those of her own good friend, Amos Rhinelander.

How could she recover it? With fast kindling hatred of its dishonest possessor, a dozen projects for regaining her own flashed across her mind. The more she thought the more impossible it seemed to devise any scheme that could be carried out in time to help Rhinelander's fight that night at Oceanside.

But what Helen could not devise herself, was being already devised for her. Following up what Spike—an unconscionable liar—had declared a flattering reception of the picture, Seagrue resolved to seize a moment while the going was good to forward himself with Helen.

She was studying the telltale print when she heard footsteps and, startled, looked out. Seagrue was coming up the platform. She felt frightened. Could he possibly have realized his blunder and come to demand the return of the picture.

Her wits rapidly cleared. She snatched the photograph. Seagrue, opening the door, caught her, picture in hand. He walked forward pleased. It was not hard for Helen to counterfeit an embarrassment; nor was it in the least unbecoming to her. To Seagrue her look came like a burst of sunshine after many chilling storms. "What do you think of my construction headquarters?" he laughed.

Helen's gaze rested modestly on her table. She seemed to contemplate the picture with a quiet pleasure. Then she looked slowly up at Seagrue. "This doesn't show very much of the camp."—she drawled the words the very least bit—"you are awfully busy over there, I suppose."

"Never too busy to welcome our friends. Come over sometime."

"What, to a construction camp?" asked Helen, feigning just enough amazement.

"Why not? Talk about Rhinelander's steam shovels! I'll show you shovels that can do everything but vote. Come on along."

For an effective moment she hesitated. "I couldn't possibly," she declared with decision, but she allowed a note of regret to linger an instant in the tone of her explanation and glanced around. "No one here, you know."

"Well, but what time do you get off?" asked Seagrue feverishly.

"Oh, not for a long time yet."

His hopes were burgeoning fast. "See here, Helen; come over and take a camp dinner with me. Come, do. I'll show you what can be done without preparation."

She regarded him with an expression that indicated how completely such a proposal shocked her. She struggled an instant with the thought of it. Then she rejected the invitation; yet with enough indecision to invite a renewal. For the moment Helen was a heartless angler, and Seagrue deluded by vanity was unsuspectingly playing fish. Before he left—in the highest spirits he had known for many a day—he had, to his astonishment, secured Helen's promise to dine with him that night in camp. And at the appointed time she was ready.

The night was warm and a moon, rising full and into a clear sky, flooded the landscape. And after Helen's uneasiness at the strangeness of her situation had worn off, she was able throughout the trying hour with Seagrue in his hut to wear her mask of languid interest successfully. The table was served with surprising delicacies and a plentiful array of wines was in evidence. Yet, to an innocent intriguer, a whole hour never went so slowly, nor was appetite ever more reluctant than that of Seagrue's guest. Though she went through the form of eating and assumed a carefree air, his food choked her. His wines she persistently declined; but that did not dismay Seagrue, who drank quite enough for two.

Where could the survey be, now? was the question recurring always to Helen's mind. Toward the close of the dinner, Seagrue, rising, unlocked his desk for a flask of Chartreuse. There, lying in the corner exactly where she had seen it, Helen again beheld the survey, a blue print beside it. Seagrue was pawky enough to close and lock the desk after he had taken the flask out. How, she asked herself, was she to get that desk open again?

Seagrue dismissed his serving man, and this did not allay Helen's uneasiness for herself. She did not want to be left alone a minute with him now; things were getting too complicated. But could she in some way get into the desk?

Rising, she said she would clear the table a little. Taking hold of the flask he had just taken from the desk and holding out her hand with a smile she asked him for his keys. Seagrue was in no position to refuse so intimate a request. With an air of camaraderie he handed them over and Helen pushed back the cover of the desk. But as she did so Seagrue threw his arms around her. She struggled indignantly, but could not get away. For a moment there was a fierce struggle. Then with a superhuman effort she tore herself free, caught up the first thing she could lay her hand on—it happened to be a bronze match tray—and struck Seagrue across the forehead.

He went completely over, leaving Helen horror-stricken at what she had done. She listened. Outside she heard no sound. Seizing the blue print that lay under her hand, she gained the door and ran out just as Seagrue regained his feet. She had resolved to flag the Limited. Hardly touching the earth, she dashed to the station, hurried to the key and telegraphed Rhinelander:

"Have blue print of survey. Will be on Limited.

"HELEN."

It was not too soon. Through the window she saw Seagrue rushing down the platform. She slammed the office door shut and locked it. Seagrue threw himself viciously against it. The lock held, but she must get away at once. There was a window in the freighthouse and she ran into the freightroom. Seagrue had snatched up a stone. He reached the operator's window only to see Helen, who had sprung through the freighthouse window, running up the track. He followed her at top speed. Intent on escaping, she gave no thought to where she was running; it was only to get away from her hated enemy and save what she had so hardly regained. Helter-skelter through a grove of scattered oaks that fringed the hills above the sea, on and on she ran, until breath and strength were deserting her, but at every turn her detested pursuer was fast upon her heels. Between his lunging footfalls she could hear his panting threats, and the clearness of the night gave her little chance to elude his savage pursuit. She realized she was running across what had been her own father's great estate. The ocean spread suddenly below her. She had reached Signal Bay and the precipitous cliffs that frowned high above it. Like a frightened fawn she ran up the rocks and down only to hear Seagrue breathing maledictions close behind and with the distance steadily lessening between her and certain capture. Brought at last to bay, she darted down the cliffs to find a hiding place. Not a nook or cranny offered a hope of concealment and a misstep where she trod meant certain death. Panting and bewildered, she heard Seagrue climbing down the ledge on which she had found a narrow foothold. Her escape was cut off and Seagrue descended triumphantly toward her. She warned him back.

"Give me that blue print!" he shouted with an oath.

"Keep away from me," Helen panted. "You're a wretch. I'll never give it to you. I'll die first. Don't you dare come down here! I'll drag you over the cliff if I have to go over myself."

Nothing daunted, he came on. There was but one chance left to get away and, unhesitating, she took it. Turning, just when he thought he had her in his power, she sprang from where she stood on the edge of the precipice far out over the ocean below. He stood spellbound. She struck with a great splash.

At no great distance from where she had plunged into the bay a speed launch lay at anchor. Helen recognized the boat; it had, in truth, once been her own, and she had named it The Spiderwater. It belonged now to the owners of her father's estate, but she believed she might borrow it once more. Seagrue, impotent with rage, and following her down the shore, saw her reach the launch and climb resolutely up over the gunwale.

Shaking herself like a duck, and without losing a minute, Helen spread the wet blue print out on the deck, broke the motor lock and turned the launch engine over. She knew the motor well; it was a powerful Loew Victor, and after her second effort it hummed like a dynamo. While it was warming up she cut the hawser. Seagrue easily suspected she meant to get to Rhinelander at Oceanside. He looked at his watch. If he could catch the Limited he could still reach the city ahead of her. Exasperated and out of breath he hastened back to camp, routed out his chauffeur and took his racing car for the station. Hardly a minute was left to him and his hope of reaching a point where he could flag the through train vanished when he heard its whistle and saw the gleam of its headlight coming down the Signal grade.

But he would not give up. Urging his man to speed, he gained the highway paralleling the railroad track, and as the Limited shot by, Seagrue, with all the power that could be got out of his motor, actually held for a time abreast of it. Helpless with rage, he saw the last car pulling gradually past and furious at being balked, he stood up on the seat and as the car drew past him, he jumped over the rail and landed on the observation platform.

Helen was pushing the launch toward Oceanside. The ocean below the bay laps almost the edge of the railroad track, but her heart sank as she looked back and saw the night train tearing up the track and rapidly overhauling her. Instinct told her that Seagrue would somehow board that train in an effort to get to the city first. As the engine drew nearer, she picked up a pair of glasses and leveling them on the cab discovered George Storm on the right side. She waved a signal flag frantically at him, but his eyes were glued on the track ahead. Then, as if by an inspiration, she seized the cord of the air whistle at her hand and in the Morse code signaled for help. Storm turned his head and looked back questioningly along his train; then up at his own whistle. The signaling continued and his attention was finally drawn to the launch now dropping behind the train. Helen caught up her signal flag again. In a flash he recognized her, and calling his fireman over they listened to her appeal.

"Give me paper, pencil," shouted Storm, as he shut off the throttle and listened to the long and short toots that re-echoed in jerky succession from the surface of the sea against the towering cliffs and through the flying cab. On a leaf, torn from a pad, Storm scratched out the signals:

"Have survey. Seagrue on your train. Delay so I can reach Oceanside first. HELEN."

The engine whistle shrieked his answer to her eager ears:

"Something wrong with engine already."

The fireman, learning the truth from Storm, tried to persuade him, whatever happened, not to delay the train. It would cost Storm, he urged, his job.

"What's the job to me?" demanded Storm, applying the air and bringing up the train with a jolt.

Seagrue had made his way into the coach. He summoned the conductor, and being known was accorded every courtesy. But the race was now first on his mind, and when he heard the brakes grinding, and running back on the platform saw fire screaming from the wheels, he called the conductor, demanding to know the cause of the stop. Going forward together for an explanation, the two men found Storm under his engine with wrench and hammer, while in the distance Seagrue could see the Spiderwater cutting the waves like foaming glass and slipping away to where a stormy directors' meeting was in session at Oceanside, and Rhinelander was in the fight of his life to prevent summary action being taken to stop the cut-off work. In vain he showed Helen's telegram, which had come in time to rescue him from complete defeat. But Seagrue's henchman, Capelle, conniving with the disaffected element in the directorate, was pushing to a vote with every prospect of success the resolution to stop work.

"What have we got to go on?" he demanded, facing Rhinelander down. "You know as well as I do we are throwing hundreds of thousands into a project absolutely uncertain. You offer a telegram. What good is the telegram?"

Beside the engine of the Limited the conductor and Seagrue were volleying sharp and suspicious questions at the fireman. He told, reluctantly, of the mysterious launch and of Storm's exchange of signals. No more was needed to infuriate Seagrue, who now understood the connivance. Storm crawled out from under the engine and Seagrue met him with an abusive epithet. The stalwart engineman promptly knocked him down. The crew dragged the two men apart and the conductor ordered the fireman to take the Limited in. Storm, with folded arms, refusing to lend further assistance. But despite his stubbornness the big train pulled into Oceanside just after Helen stepped from the deck of the speed launch to the dock. She ran all the way up the esplanade, survey in hand, to where she could catch a taxicab and drove hard for the Tidewater building. There she alighted only to be confronted by two men—Seagrue and an officer. Seagrue pointed to Helen: "There she is! There are the documents she stole—in her hand. Arrest her!"

Before Helen could collect her senses, the officer had seized her and Seagrue had snatched the survey.

"Stop," she cried, "that is my property, stolen from my father. I, not he, am its rightful owner!"

While she protested, stormed and wept tears of humiliation and anger, Seagrue was producing papers to convince the slow-witted official that the survey belonged to him and that Helen was the thief. In spite of all she could say, he won out.

Upstairs the directors were closing their protracted session, Rhinelander vainly trying to hold them together until his ally should appear. The sound of an opening door raised his hopes. Helen rushed into the room and hastened to his side.

"The survey—where is it?" he cried, reading bad news in her face.

She told him of her battle—of how she had been robbed at the very foot of what were once her father's stairs.

Rhinelander put his arm around the despairing girl. "No matter. We know now who has our property, gentlemen. We'll get it yet."

Capelle, laughing furtively, left the room to report to Seagrue. The chairman rapped for order. Rhinelander, trying to comfort Helen, took her to her taxicab and they drove back to the launch together. Dazed, furious at her misfortune, Helen met another surprise at the pier. Storm, awaiting her return there, helped her to alight from the taxicab. She could only regard him breathlessly. He laughed in his reassuring way: "It's really I," he said to her, offering his hand. "I'm discharged—but I told the superintendent I might yet live long enough to discharge him. But I've got a marine license and I'm going to run your launch back to Signal Bay for you."

His robust humor was infectious. With Storm at the driver's wheel, they soon reached the offing in the launch and were discussing the exciting events of the night when Helen's eyes fixed on the canvas covering the deck of the boat. It was on this she had laid the blue print to dry and the impression had been definitely transferred. She seized her uncle's arm, pointed and explained. Rhinelander, jerking a knife from his pocket, cut the canvas from the deck and showed it to Storm, who headed the launch in a great foaming circle back toward Oceanside.

The directors were preparing to go home when three half-crazed people dashed into their room. Rhinelander, Helen and Storm told their story and showed their find. Excited in spite of themselves, the listeners crowded about the table. They inspected, objected and argued. The evidence was indisputable and the chairman called the meeting to order and asked its sense. Sympathy for the plucky daughter of their old president was perhaps not wanting in influencing their action; at all events, almost before Helen could realize it was being done, a resolution declaring their support should not be withdrawn, was put and carried. Bowers, the chairman, clinched his own feelings by catching Helen's hands and congratulating her.

Seagrue—pleased with what he believed his escape from a serious complication—was bound for his camp on a returning train.

SHOP AND RAILROAD NEWS

LISTENED TO A GOOD LECTURE

Vocational Airbrake Class Addressed by Westinghouse Expert.

The railway vocational class of the public schools listened to a most interesting and instructive address upon "Airbrakes" last night, the speaker being A. H. Berghane, mechanical expert of the Westinghouse Airbrake company, of Pittsburg. The class is composed of railway engineers, firemen, shopmen and others who have anything to do with airbrakes and there are upwards of thirty in it, but, on account of the short notice last night, not more than half of the class was permitted to hear Mr. Berghane. H. A. Burson, airbrake instructor for the Pennsylvania, and Prof. W. E. Gordon, of the vocational school, were present. Mr. Berghane is a frequent visitor in Fort Wayne, coming usually in the capacity of a representative of the Westinghouse Airbrake company.

AUXILIARY'S NEW OFFICERS.

Division No. 18, G. I. A., Had an Installation.

At the first regular meeting in January the following officers were installed in division 18, G. I. A. to B. L. E., by the retiring president, Mrs. Kittie Grubb: President, Amanda Somers; vice president, Clara Walker; secretary, Eliza Rhodes; treasurer, Laura Studer; chaplain, Jesaia Polhamus; guide, Jennie Rogers; sentinel, Grace Jones; insurance secretary, Anna Tourgee; musician, Ida Sinclair.

Appointive officers: Margaret Leeper, Fredricka Jornod, Lettie Ferguson, Hannah Segrist, Myrtle Fullerton, Clara Cress. After the installation refreshments were served and a social hour was spent in visiting and reviewing the work of the past year, which has been very pleasant and profitable. The society will be twenty-eight years old March 2 and will celebrate the event in the usual good old fashioned way, no doubt. "It is an event always planned for with much pleasure, as quite a few of the charter members are still living," said one of the ladies.

BOWSER EFFICIENCY CLUB.

The Rev. Elmer Ward Cole, pastor of the Christian church at Huntington, will deliver the principal address next Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of the Bowser Efficiency club. E. W. Lewis, of the card department at the Bowser works, will talk on "Irrigation," and Frank A. Thompson, also a member of the club, will render several vocal solos. The Efficiency club now has a membership of 150.

FRANK MORE HAS RETURNED.

Frank E. More, recently appointed assistant road foreman of engines of the Pennsylvania Western division, arrived home from the C. & P. division this morning. He had been there about a week looking after some special work for the motive power department, and during his absence the announcement of his appointment was made. Mr. More will assume the duties of his new office next week.

WILLIAM HAMILTON HURT.

William Hamilton, a drill press operator at the Bass blacksmith shop, sustained a painful injury at 8 o'clock last night when a piece of metal weighing about forty pounds fell from the table of the machine and struck his left foot. The member was badly bruised just back of the toes, but it is believed no bones were broken. Hamilton had to quit work and will probably be off duty several days.

BURNED BY ELECTRIC FLASH.

Machinist Harry Weber, who operates one of the lathes in the Pennsylvania toolroom, suffered a painful injury to his right hand at 8 o'clock this morning. When he turned the switch which controls the motor operating his machine, a flash of electricity enveloped the member and severely burned it. He will be unable to work for several days as a result of the accident.

AUNT DIED IN LOGANSPORT.

A telegram this morning brought to W. L. Wilt, chief clerk of the Pennsylvania motive power department, news of the death in Logansport yesterday of his aunt, Mrs. Jennie Lighthiser, a long time resident of that city. The funeral will be held Monday and Mr. Wilt will attende it.

MR. HUDSON RECOVERING.

If the present improvement in his physical condition continues, B. H. Hudson, superintendent of the G. R. & I., will appear at his office for active work Monday. Mr. Hudson was taken ill with the grip on New Year's day and for awhile was unable to leave his bed.

RECEIVED BLOW ON HEAD.

J. W. Hodwick, a helper in the Pennsylvania erecting shop, received a contusion on the head at 9:30 o'clock last night, when he was accidentally struck by a hammer in the hands of a comrade. He will be unable to work for several days.

TURNED OUT ELEVEN ENGINES.

A G. R. & I. engine, No. 98, figured in the output from the Pennsylvania erecting shop during the week ending today. The Pennsylvania engines repaired and turned out of the shops were Nos. 7512, 7079, 9076, 9953, 7311, 7131, 7408, 7484, 7517 and 9030.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

E. E. Stegner, crane operator at the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is sick and off duty.

Joseph Sterling, of the Pennsylvania toolroom, is off duty on account of sickness.

The Woman's Union Label league will have a pedro party tonight in Vordermark hall.

Passenger Conductor T. H. Coleman, of the G. R. & I. road, is off duty on account of sickness.

Albert Lacey and George Bennett have taken employment in the foundry yards at the Bass works.

Boilermaker E. G. Rickey, of the Pennsylvania shops, is off duty on account of the sickness of his baby.

E. W. Roembke and B. J. Hayes of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, are off duty on account of sickness.

Trainmaster C. E. Wells, of the Wabash, was in the city today looking after business for the company.

Pennsylvania Fireman A. C. Berdelman was taken sick at Crestline last night and had to "dead-head" home.

B. F. Sarver, general foreman of the Pennsylvania boiler shops, went to Cleveland last night on company business.

H. L. Bovine, formerly employed at the Bass Foundry and Machine works, is a new laborer in the Pennsy erecting shops.

Machinist John O. Bryant failed to appear at the Pennsylvania shops this morning and later a telephone message stated he was sick.

M. A. Welch and W. A. Dalby, machinists, were given employment yesterday in the Pennsy shops. They will start work Monday.

Piecework Clerk J. H. Kern, of the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is on duty again after an absence of a few days on account of sickness.

H. E. Hartman and Ed Hambrock, cabbuilders, and J. J. Pauser and D. Clark, of the planing mills of the Pennsylvania, are sick and off duty.

Conductors W. O. Miller, C. A. Bowman and Maurice Deatrick, of the Nickel Plate, are back on duty after an absence of a few days each.

Mrs. I. A. Herber, wife of the Pennsylvania passenger fireman, will leave tonight for Whiteside, Ohio, where she will spend several days with relatives.

Mrs. W. H. Carpenter, mother of Pennsylvania Engineer J. F. Carpenter, left today for Erie, Pa. She will also visit at St. Mary's before she returns home.

E. F. Needham, general superintendent of locomotive and car department on the Wabash railroad, was in Fort Wayne yesterday on company business.

Wayne Dochterman, clerk in the Patterson-Fletcher store, and son of Passenger Conductor M. H. Dochterman, of the L. E. & W., is confined to his home because of illness.

Arrangements are being made for a readjustment of the wages of the agents and the clerical forces in the transportation department of the Western division of the Pennsylvania. This readjustment will, it is said, mean an increase to many of the men affected. Later it will be extended to the clerical department of the motive power and the maintenance of way.

A. M. Hoffman, chief clerk to Division Engineer R. G. Jones, of the G. R. & I., resumed his place at the desk this morning, after a week's absence on account of a severe attack of the grip.

W. A. Hopkins, assistant general passenger agent of the Wabash, was in the city awhile yesterday afternoon, shaking hands with those of his old friends whom he happened to meet. For several years Mr. Hopkins was division freight agent of the road, a position now occupied by D. E. Gilbert, and in that capacity met the shippers and manufacturers of Fort Wayne frequently.

The older employes of the Wabash will recall Samuel Rogers when they read this item and learn with sorrow that he died at Los Angeles last Tuesday. For thirty years Mr. Rogers was employed on the Wabash as an engineer and later round house foreman at Tilton. He left the road fifteen years ago and went west, being engaged there for awhile in railway work. Then he retired and engaged in business at Los Angeles. Rogers retained a membership in the Danville B. L. E up to the time of his death.

FALL DOWN STAIRWAY CAUSES MAN'S DEATH

Charles A. Meyers Suffers An Attack of Heart Failure.

As the result of an attack of heart trouble, to which he had been subject for some time, Charles A. Meyers, 55 years old, fell down the stairway at the Main street entrance to the Bank building, Main and Court streets, Friday evening, at 5:40 o'clock, to his death. His skull was fractured.

The deceased lived with his son, Roy Meyers, in room 10, of the Bank block, and started to walk down stairs when the attack of heart trouble came upon him and he pitched forward unconscious. Nathan Kaplan, proprietor of the Champion Shoe Repairing company, 130 East Main street, whose place adjoins the stairway, and Abe Greenbaum, who was in the store at the time, heard the man fell down the stairway and were the first to reach him. He was dead when assistance reached him. Coroner J. E. McArdle was called and after conducting an investigation ordered the body taken to Klean & Melching's undertaking parlors.

The deceased had been a resident of Fort Wayne for thirty-five years and for the past few years he was a brakeman on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad. Besides the son, with whom he lived, the deceased has another son living at 1133 Spy Run avenue. No other relatives are living in Fort Wayne.

Concert at the Scottish Rite Cathedral tomorrow, January 16th, at 3 o'clock. All Masons, their families and their friends are cordially invited.

GERMAN LADIES TO PREPARE FOR SALE

Plans are now afoot for the holding of a German Red Cross fund sale, similar to the one held last year by the German ladies of Fort Wayne. In order to make definite arrangements for the affair which is to be held some time after Easter, a meeting of all German ladies of the city has been called for next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Turnverein Halle, on West Superior street.

At this time a committee will be appointed to make general arrangements for the affair, to select the date and place of holding the sale. The one which was conducted in 1915 was a great success and a large amount was realized for the German fund. It is anticipated that if another is held this year that it will be much larger than the preceding one.

CALL CHARGES WORK OF BRITISH AGENTS

Washington, Jan. 15.—Press dispatches from London telling of the seizure of correspondence from Captain Franz von Papen, recalled German military attache to the United States, when he reached Falmouth, England, en route to Germany, and relating that they showed that he made frequent payments to persons charged with responsibility for blowing up munitions plants and bridges in the United States, aroused the deepest interest in official and diplomatic circles here today.

The development came as a sequal to the withdrawal of Captain von Papen and his colleague, Captain Boy-Ed, the German naval attache, at the request of the Washington government. "I don't believe it," was the only comment Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, would make concerning the dispatches.

In German diplomatic quarters the impression was conveyed that it was thought possible Captain von Papen ha been connected with the published documents by British agents. It wa argued as incredibtable that von Papen, with the knowledge that his ship would be taken into a British port to be searched, would have carried any such correspondence as mentioned in the press dispatches, even if he possessed it.

At the German embassy it was said that the ambassador had paid considerable money to von Papen as salary and for the expense of such work as he was expected to conduct as military attache. Embassy officials had no knowledge of his private bank account or of how he disbursed the money. Officials decline to comment on the dispatches pending the receipts of copies of the correspondence which have been turned over to the American embassy in London for transmission to the state department.

EARLY RAILROADING DAYS ARE RECALLED

Some Interesting Phases of Transportation in Indiana Years Ago.

Franklin, Ind., Jan. 15.—John W. Branch ,age eighty-five, who died at the Marion Soldiers' home, a few years ago, was born and reared in Johnson county, and was the first agent of the old Indianapolis & Madison railroad in this city. His employment with the road began when he took charge of a local freight train. Later he became a passenger conductor, baggage master and agent.

In speaking of his railroad experiences Mr. Branch, a few years ago, when a resident of this city, said:

"The construction work on the Madison branch of the Pennsylvania railroad began in 1832, when the first rails this side of the Allegheny mountains were laid in Madison. It was not until 1847, however, that the road was built into Indianapolis. Its construction was a stupendous undertaking because of the steep hill encountered just north of Madison. After much work an inclined grade was cut through the hill, and the building of the road proceeded rapidly. Special engines were then built to draw the trains up and down the steep cut, which is a mile long, with a grade of 365 feet.

No Telegraph or Phones

"There being no telegraph or telephone connections at that time, the trains were run according to printed schedules. They were expected to pass at specific sidings, but if one reached the siding first, the orders were to wait five minutes, then if the other train could not be sighted, to proceed cautiously to the next siding. If a train proceeded past a siding point, one of the crew was sent forward, in case there were curves on the track, to be on the lookout for oncoming trains.

"The passenger trains were limited to a speed of twenty miles an hour, and were required to stop for passengers whenever and wherever flagged. Both passenger and freight engines were built lightly, and burned wood. Frequently the passengers would get out and help take on a supply of fuel for the sake of exercise. The water supply was pumped into a tank by hand. According to statistics, very few accidents occurred on the road under the system described.

Small freight cars.

"The first freight cars were built small and light, having a capacity of seven and one-half tons, which seems exceedingly small compared with the modern car with a capacity of more than fifty tons. The average size freight train was composed of twenty cars."

Mr. Branch made his passenger run from Indianapolis to Madison, eighty-four miles, in about six hours. Leaving Indianapolis at 6 o'clock in the morning he would arrive at Franklin in time for breakfast, and then proceed to Madison for his dinner. A return trip was made to Indianapolis in the afternoon. There were four passenger trains on the line, two locals and two through trains.

Mr. Branch was a son of one of the settlers of Johnson county, Branch station, southwest of this city, being named for him. He had been at the soldiers' home since last April. The body was brought to this city for burial. Besides his sister, Mrs. Pauline Ransdell, in this city, a brother, Minor G. Branch, of Muncie, survives. Mr. Branch was a civil war veteran, being captain of his company.

OVERLAND SHOW ENDS TONIGHT

Special Program Arranged for the Windup—It's Free to Everybody.

At midnight tonight the Fort Wayne Overland Auto company will bring to a close its free independent auto show. The Overland show has been a great attraction all week, affording the people an opportunity of not only seeing the various Overland cars from the Model 75 at $615 to the magnificent Willys-Knight limousine at $1,750, but also gave along with it a most entertaining program of music and motion pictures.

This is the banner day of the show and special added attractions have been put on to wind up the big show in a blaze of glory. Those who have not visited the free Overland show are cordially invited to do so this evening.

CONCERT AT S. R. CATHEDRAL.

All Masons and Their Guests Invited to Hear Fine Program.

There will be a concert at the Scottish Rite cathedral on Sunday, January 16th, at 3 o'clock. All Masons, their families and friends are invited. The concert will be given by the combined boy choirs of the Episcopal and English Lutheran churches. The following program will be rendered:

Whoever Has Foot Troubles

Should pay heed, for while there is nothing more trying or wearing on the nerves than foot troubles, in most cases they are entirely unnecessary, provided one gives their feet the proper attention, and so

If You Have Weak Ankles,
If You Have Broken Down Arches,
If You Wear Your Shoes Crooked,
If You Have Corns, Bunions or Painful Callouses

or have trouble of any sort with your feet, you should take advantage of our demonstration to be held all next week by one of Chicago's foremost foot specialists, Dr. Schramm.

He will gladly EXAMINE YOUR FEET WITHOUT CHARGE and explain how you may obtain immediate relief and permanently correct all foot troubles with Dr. Scholl's scientific appliances and corrective devices for the feet.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW CLOSES TONIGHT

Expenses Have Already Been Met and Everybody is Happy.

Northern Indiana's greatest automobile show will close tonight at 11 o'clock, after a week far surpassing the expectations of the Auto Trade association under whose auspices the show is given.

Hundreds of school children took advantage of the reduced admission fee Saturday morning to visit the exhibition. They were admitted for ten cents.

According to figures given out at the box office fully twenty-two hundred people visited the automobile show Friday, the attendance being swelled by hundreds who came from surrounding towns and cities. More than this number are expected to attend before the doors close Saturday night.

The various exhibitors are highly gratified with results. Many automobiles have been sold and an unusual number of prospective purchasers have been secured.

The expenses for the show have already been realized from the receipts up to date and the money secured from rental of space for the exhibits. Much more expense was incurred this year than last, but the association is well pleased with results and is already planning for the 1917 show.

DIES AT AGE OF 90 YEARS.

Mrs. Doyle Was Only Survivor of Pestilence in 1830.

Washington, Ind., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Mary A. Doyle, 90 years old, is dead at the home of her son here. She was believed to have been the only survivor of the pestilence which killed nearly every one of the 2,500 inhabitants of the town of Hindostan, Ind., in 1830.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE FARMER

Suggestions for the Control of Pear Blight of Pear, Apple and Quince Trees and Apple Cankers.

In the management of the orchard, especially the apple and pear orchard, there is a period after the fruit is gathered, and perhaps after other crops have been safely harvested, that is most convenient for doing some of the careful work in the control of certain diseases and pests. There are certain fungus and bacterial diseases particularly pear blight and apple canker, which are best worked upon at this time. These diseases are principally controlled by the eradication methods rather than by spraying. With both these diseases it is not only a matter of convenience but it is a fortunate thing that some of the most important work of the season can be best accomplished at the time when it is most convenient.

Fire Blight Canker on Apple.

Pear blight is a bacterial disease which works mostly in the fleshy, growing, tender parts of the tree, including the blossom clusters, young twigs, and the bark of larger branches, and even on the body, collar, and root system of the tree. Under certain conditions the bacteria spread into the wood to a considerable extent. The disease attacks the pear, apple, quince, and other related fruits. While the leaves are attacked to some extent, particularly the leaf stems and midribs of the younger leaves, the main killing of the foliage results from the death of the twigs and branches on which the leaves are located. The dead branches and other parts give no evidence to the naked eye of the cause of their death and thus resemble somewhat limbs killed by fire; hence the name fire blight, particularly with blight on the apple, is often applied.

Pear blight eradication is quite a careful piece of work. It requires close attention on the part of the orchardist or careful training of the help who may be engaged in it. Remember that thoroughness is essential for success. It is not necessary to determine in all cases whether the blight is alive or dead on the lower margin, although somewhat helpful as a guide in determining how low to go. In actual practice it is better to cut out all the dead limbs and all the blight, anyhow, regardless of whether it is a dead case or not.

The blight eradication should always precede the pruning. Other pruning for shaping up the trees may be done, if preferred, before leaving the trees, or may be postponed until some convenient time later, but of course, before the buds push in the spring.

Apple cankers form dead spots on the twigs and branches of apple trees and occasionally extend down on to the bodies. There are several different types of apple cankers in various parts of the United States. Occasionally two or more kinds may occur on the same tree. They are caused by fungi growing comparatively slowly in the bark and killing it. They often enter in the twigs, fruit spurs, or blighted areas killed by pear blight, but may infect entirely independent of these sources. Frequently locust scars, pruning wounds, or other injuries furnish the point of entry, but some kinds of cankers infect directly into the bark.

The blister canker, common in the middle west, is particularly severe after winter killing or after the trees are weakened by extended droughts. The particular kind or species of apple canker may be determined by the grower by sending a sample, preferably the whole area of a small canker or a section of the limb showing the margin, to the Department of Agriculture or the nearest State experiment station. It is not absolutely necessary in most cases to identify the species, since the treatment, as far as worked out, is essentially the same.

The principal method of controlling apple cankers is identical with pear blight, as described above. Where the canker is located on a branch or limb which can readily be spared, and especially if it reaches half or nearly half way around the limb, it is best to saw the limb off, cutting 6 inches to a foot below the lowest evidence of disease, then disinfect and paint or apply the coal-tar creosote-oil wound paint. Cankers located on a large branch which can not readily be spared or on the body of the tree may be eradicated and trimmed out exactly as described above for pear blight areas, using the same methods and preferably the coal-tar creosote-oil wound treatment immediately on finishing the scar.

Cankers do not require the prompt reinspection and retrimming as in virulent pear blight cases, but it is a good practice to look them over the following spring and again in the fall, and rework them or saw off the branch if an occasional failure has resulted. Some cankers behave rather differently from pear blight in that they check up during the growing period of spring and summer and the tree attempts to heal them over, then in the fall and winter the canker spreads again, killing the margin of the new growth. This is frequently repeated several times as the canker enlarges. Such old cases are rather mean to work on and usually, though not always, demand the removal of the branch.

In very bad outbreaks of apple canker, fall spraying with rather thick Bordeaux mixture, at least as strong as 5-5-50, is advisable. This treatment is not usually necessary in most apple districts of the United States, but if the grower is having a real fight against apple cankers, the fall eradication should be made rather promptly as soon as the leaves are off, and the whole orchard should be sprayed with this mixture. This protects the tree against most of the reinfections in the bark and probably kills the spores on the surface of the wood and possibly many minor or incipient cankers.

CAREFUL MANAGEMENT OF BREEDING ANIMALS

By W. MILTON KELLY, New York.

The winter is the most critical period in the care of breeding animals and many farmers would find larger and more certain profits from their farm stock if they would give more time and study to the winter care and feeding of their breeding animals.

All kinds of breeding stock require good shelter—that is, dry, clean, comfortable and so constructed that there will always be an abundance of pure air without exposing the animals to cold draughts.

Brood sows and breeding ewes require plenty of room and will thrive best if separated in bunches so as to prevent crowding and fighting at the troughs and feed racks. Pregnant animals should not be kept with other animals where they will be compelled to fight their own way for a place to eat and drink, as they are more subject to injury and violent exercise is quite apt to cause serious trouble.

Exercise is an important essential in the winter management of all kinds of breeding animals and the yards should be large enough so that the animals may go out and in as they please during every pleasant day.

Many swine breeders make a practice of feeding their brood sows quite a distance from their sleeping quarters in order to induce them to exercise freely and I have found this an excellent plan for many sows become sluggish during pregnancy and will not exercise unless compelled to.

Exercise is not only beneficial to the muscular and maternal development of breeding sows, but it prevents constipation which is one of the most serious problems we have to contend with if our sows are in good flesh condition.

Breeding bulls, boars, rams and stallions should have plenty of fresh air, light, and exercise during the winter. Our animals cannot develop good bone, muscle, constitution, etc., if they are compelled to spend the winter in the dark, filthy, poorly ventilated pens and stables and not allowed to exercise during the favorable weather.

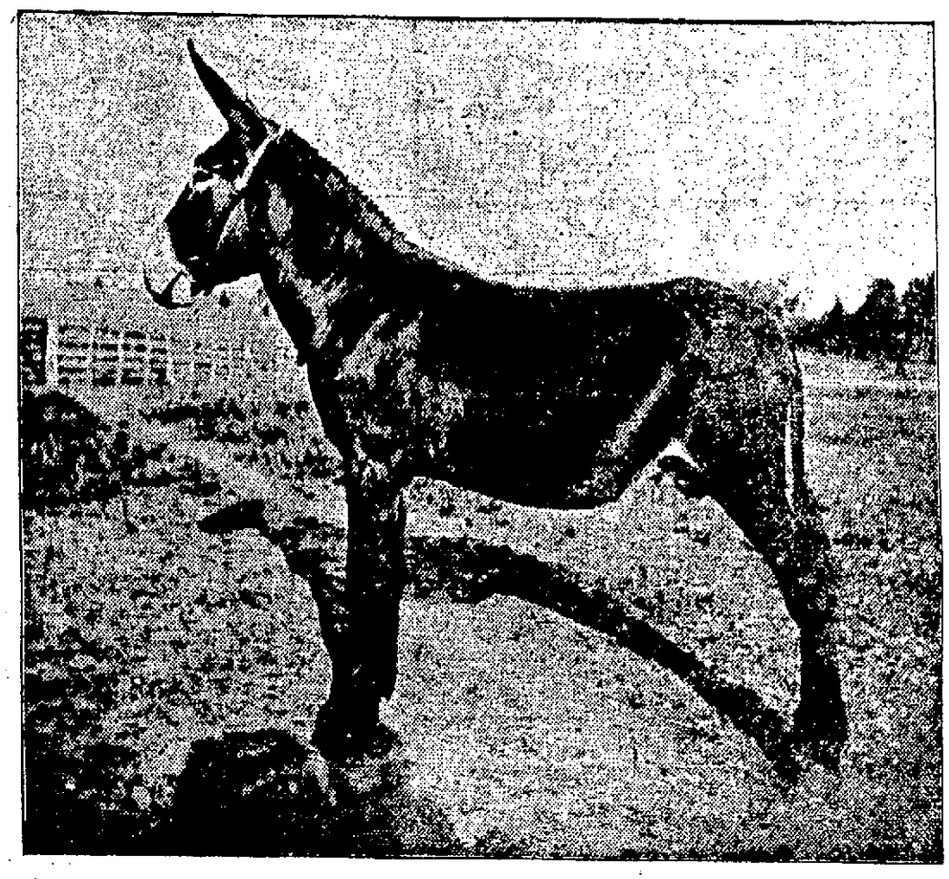
The grain ration of breeding animals had best be made up largely of home-grown grain foods such as corn, oats, barley and peas, supplemented by such purchased feeds as wheat bran, middlings and linseed oil meal.

Clover and alfalfa and mixed hay cut early and cured properly are the best kinds of roughage for breeding animals of all kinds during the winter. We must not forget the brood sows when feeding clover and alfalfa hay as these fodders will afford bulk, which is so essential in maintaining them in a healthy, vigorous, flesh-forming condition. The mechanical condition of these feeds may be greatly improved by running through a cutting box and steaming and mixing with wheat bran, middlings and other mill-feeds before it is fed to the brood sows.

All breeding animals should have an abundance of succulent foods during the winter and these may be provided by laying in a supply of corn ensilage and roots. For breeding sows, roots, vegetables and waste fruits are the best form of succulence and it will pay every farmer to raise a crop of roots to feed his breeding swine during the winter.

Some farmers and writers advocate feeding hogs corn ensilage, but I am not in favor of this practice and have seen no good results from feeding ensilage to hogs.

All changes should be gradual and the condition of the animals should be carefully noted while the changes are being made, so that the animal's digestive system will not be deranged before we can correct the ration.



A PRIZE-WINNING KENTUCKY-BRED MULE

WINTER OATS A VALUABLE CROP

Excellent Cover and Forage Crop for the Southern States in Rotation With Corn and Cotton.

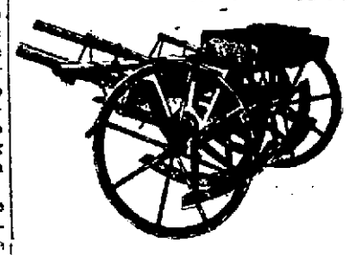
Nearly 4,000,000 acres were sown to winter oats in the southern states in the fall of 1914, doubling the acreage of the previous year. In the same year the same states grew 36,000,000 acres of cotton and 34,000,000 acres of corn. Since fall-sown oats make an excellent crop to grow in rotation with corn and cotton, it would appear that the acreage of oats could be further very largely increased to advantage.

Winter oats supply a cover crop for the land, furnish winter and early spring pasture, and produce a very desirable feed for work stock at a time when it is most needed. They usually produce at least double the yield obtained from spring oats in the same locality. Winter oats are much less hardy than winter wheat or winter rye, the northern limit of the successful production of this crop being marked approximately by the Potomac and Ohio Rivers, extending thence southwesterly across southern Missouri and central Oklahoma.

The results from grain crops in the cotton states in 1915 were, in some instances, rather disappointing because of spring drought, but satisfactory yields were obtained in nearly all cases where the seed was sown on well-prepared land at the proper time. In all the cotton states best results may be obtained if oats are sown in October or early November. In the states along the northern border of the cotton belt this crop should be sown about two weeks earlier than winter wheat, or during the latter part of September or early October. Farther south later seeding is of course possible and desirable. In the Gulf states November is the best month to sow, early in the month in the higher northern portions and toward the latter end near the coast.

Winter oats may be sown to the best advantage on land which produced a crop of corn, cotton, or cowpeas the past summer. If this land can not be plowed at least two weeks before the crop is to be sown a better seed bed can be prepared by thorough disking and harrowing than by plowing. Late plowing not only delays seeding but leaves the soil too loose for the best growth of the crop. Fall plowing in this section should be immediately followed with the disk or harrow to preserve moisture. A more uniform stand and better yield can be obtained from sowing with a drill than from broadcast seeding, though seed sown broadcast and harrowed or disked in on well-prepared land will usually produce a good stand. If the soil is fertile or the preceding crop was fertilized, 100 to 200 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre will be the only fertilizer needed by the oats this fall. About the time growth commences in the spring a top dressing of 50 to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda will greatly increase the yield.

The variety of winter oats most commonly sown in the south is Red Rustproof. Numerous selections and strains of this variety, such as Appler,



Stalk Cutter Designed to Cut Two Rows of Corn Stalks When Preparing Land for Oats.

McGehee, Bancroft, Cook, Hundred Bushel, and Lawson, are highly recommended in certain localities. The Fulghum is a recently introduced variety which matures a week or more earlier than the Red Rustproof and usually yields as well, but it is somewhat less hardy. All these varieties should be sown at the rate of 2½ to 3½ bushels to the acre, the lower rate being sufficient when the seed is drilled.

The hardiest winter oat is the Winter Turf or Virginia Gray. On account of its hardiness this variety is the safest one to sow in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, and at the higher elevations in North Carolina and Tennessee. It matures a week to 10 days later than Red Rustproof and does not yield nearly so well as that variety south of the states mentioned. It is excellent for pasture and for hay. On account of the small size of the seed and its free stooling habit only 1½ to 2 bushels of seed of Winter Turf oats are required to the acre.

PROFITABLE HOG RAISING.

To make hogs profitable we must provide plenty of range that we may keep their yards clean and sanitary.

To be successful a man must be particular with his breeding stock.

The breed is of less importance than the surroundings.

It will pay any hog grower to dip all of his growing pigs, at least once a month, to keep their skin in good condition and free from lice.

GET THE PESTS.

When your orchard is bare of foliage, you should not fail to hunt out and destroy all insect pests. All "mummied" fruits found on your trees should be destroyed by burning. They'll spread fungus trouble next summer if allowed to remain.

PROTECT THE YOUNG TREES.

It is time to think about protecting the young trees from rabbits. In the editor's boyhood days we attempted to do this by applying various preparations to the tree trunk, but we do not recall any that were effective. Last winter we saw a young orchard in which tarred building paper, costing 60 to 75 cents per 150 feet, had been tied around the trees, affording absolute protection. Cut in strips, wrap about the tree, and tie with tarred twine. The tar is a repellant not only to rabbits, but to mice and insects, and the trunks of trees protected in this way will not be injured. This may be left on during the season if so desired. The paper may remain around the trunk for two or three years without injury.—Kansas Farmer.

PROFIT IN GEESE

Geese are great foragers and will wander for miles in search of food. This is particularly true of the common kind, but the improved breeds are not as much disposed to wander and for that reason are more easily cared for.

The three principal breeds of geese are the Toulouse, China and Embden. The Toulouse is a very large, grey goose and reaches maturity when about two and a half years old. When fat they weigh about 25 pounds and sometimes an old bird will reach 32 pounds.

Toulouse geese seldom rise from the ground and are, therefore, easily kept within bounds. A fence that will turn cattle or sheep will confine them and they are at home wherever there is plenty of pasture and good water to drink. They do not require water to swim in. The pasture need not be first-class as they will eat with apparent relish a coarse grass and weeds that cattle will not touch.

GREAT DEMAND FOR FARM INSTRUCTION.

The demand for instruction in agriculture in the United States is increasing at a tremendous rate. This is seen in the attendance of thousands at the many winters' sessions held at the various agricultural schools and colleges of the country.

QUALITY COUNTS.

Where hay is high priced it doesn't pay to buy hay to feed any but high-grade dairy cows. The farmer whose herd is bigger than his hay crop seldom can afford to keep low-grade animals.

A SERVICEABLE, PORTABLE HOG HOUSE

There are numerous forms of individual hog houses constructed to be portable and adapted to accommodate a sow with pigs, or two or three hogs. Almost every portable house that is built possesses certain features peculiar to itself and rendered necessary by the circumstances which it is intended to meet. The type of hog house described here has been successfully used on the Government Experimental Farm at Beltsville, Md.

This house presents a very attractive appearance and has proved satisfactory in general service. It is simple in construction and possesses all the essentials of an ideal hog house. It can be moved from place to place whenever desired. The perpendicular walls furnish plenty of floor space, which can be used to good advantage. The doors, ventilators, and roof are so arranged as to provide for ample fresh air and shade. The wires fastened to the roof and lying on it serve to hold up the back for ventilation and to shade the ground. The back is swung open and the hooks that held it shut are hooked in these pieces of wire. In the winter the house can be closed to shut out the cold winds and the roof opened to give fresh air and sunlight to the interior.

In moving the house a good way is to take a chain or a strong rope and fasten it to the runners through the holes bored for the purpose, fasten to a clevis, hitch on a team, and take the house wherever desired.

The runners are the foundation of the house and should be of sufficient dimension (3 by 6 inches) to hold the house well off the ground. Wood which is short-lived and decays when placed in contact with the ground can not be recommended. The more durable woods are fir and cypress. Two joists are used to stiffen the floor, so 1-inch material is of sufficient thickness to make a good floor. The frame is built of 2 by 4 inch material.

The house is covered with ⅞ by 2 inch tongued-and-grooved pine boards, which is very tight and sheds water. Ten-inch shiplap could be used satisfactorily and will reduce the cost of building the house. A satisfactory fender is made by fastening 2 by 4 inch pieces flatwise 6 inches from the floor. Fenders are absolutely necessary for the protection of the young pigs.

Back View of Portable Hog House, Showing the Ventilator and Back Closed.

Paint will aid in prolonging the life of the house as well as improving the appearance. Any good paint which will stand the weather will be satisfactory, but two coats should be given to thoroughly cover the wood. The inside of the house can be given a good coating of whitewash. This will give it a clean and sanitary appearance.

The following material is necessary for the construction of the portable house:

	Board feet.
7 pieces 2 by 4 inches, 16 feet long, for the entire framework, 75
1 piece 3 by 6 inches, 16 feet long, for the two runners	27
4 pieces 1 inch by 1 foot by 16 feet long, for the floor and two ventilators	64
1 piece 1 by 6 inches by 18 feet, for braces on doors and ventilators	9
50 pieces ⅞ by 2 inches, 16 feet long, tongued and grooved, for the entire covering of the house	133
Total	308

2 4-inch barrel bolts, one for the door and one for the back ventilator.

4 button latches for the two end ventilators.

6 pairs of 12-inch strap hinges for the roof, doors, and ventilators.

6 5-inch hooks and eyes, No. 6 wire, to hold up ventilators when open.

2 pieces of No. 9 hog fence 1 by 7 feet, for two end ventilators.

2 pieces of burlap, 1 foot square, for windows.

15 feet No. 11 wire, to hold up ventilators when open.

Nails: 20-penny nails for the framework, 8-penny common-head nails for the lighter lumber; 8-penny coated nails preferred for the tongued-and grooved boards.

SAVE THE MANURE

Manure adds plant food to the soil, and it also improves the texture or physical condition of the soil. This latter effect is often its greatest value. If one wants mere plant food alone, he may often do better to add it in some more concentrated form. It is important, especially in garden operations, that the manure be rotted or composted. This is accomplished by letting it decay in piles. The compost pile should be flat on top and from 3 to 5 feet high. Cow manure is the most desirable for garden or house plants. It does not burn or lose its strength, and may be kept for a number of years if piled under shelter, becoming more available each year. It mixes well with soil and leaf-mold. When once rotted, this manure is very lasting and easily assimilated by plants.

A Covered Manure Shed.

GOOD BUTTER IN WINTER.

Good butter can be made in cold weather, but the cream should not be kept too long. Add a little buttermilk or sour milk to ripen it and do not keep it longer than four or five days. Do smaller churnings and have better butter. Turn the cream screw to run a heavier cream in the winter and the churnings will gather more quickly.

HIGHER HOME EFFICIENCY.

A revolution is going on in the homes of America. It is being brought about by the study of such subjects as health, home nursing, child welfare, foods and food values, textiles and the making of clothing, the family-budget, and household management. The outcome will be better health, and greater comfort and happiness for all at less expense.

Because there is a demand for such instruction, and because the ends sought are so desirable, schools and colleges of agriculture all over the country are offering short sessions for the study of the subjects named.

APPLES ARE HEALTHFUL.

Stick to the great American apple as at least a harmless component part of the national dietary. It is fairly packed with the austere New England virtues. Its flavor suggests prudence and self-control, and its juices symbolize intellectual pleasures.

FRUIT SHOULD BE PLENTIFUL.

The farmer can raise his own fruit cheaper than he can buy it, says one. No he can't; that is, some farmers can't, for a pound of dried peaches and a quarter's worth of prunes will last the entire season. The live farmer who wants to enjoy life as he goes along can raise fruit cheaper than he can buy it for he will want the fruit in its season from the earliest strawberry to the last of the winter apples until the strawberries come again. Fruit used in that way helps a man to enjoy life.

DEEP DIGGING PAYS.

In harvesting sugar beets I use a beet digger and dig deep with it. Some farmers do not dig deep enough and cut the beet, leaving perhaps an ounce or more of each beet in the ground. This means a loss of over a ton to the acre.—H. C. Hancey, Wayne Co., N. Y.

KEEP A FLOCK OF SHEEP.

Sheep are the great enemies of weeds and where sheep can be turned into a field, or a flock herded along the roadside, they will effectively clear up waste vegetation and in addition the trampling of their feet will destroy many insects. The sheep at the same time turn waste material into mutton and all they require is a little grain for finishing. Frequently when sold they return a profit, but the entomologists hold that even if they merely pay for the extra grain they eat their function in destroying weeds and keeping down insects makes their use well worth while.

A LITTLE HORSE SENSE.

Don't feed irregularly.

Don't water horses at public watering troughs.

Don't try to doctor a glandered horse.

PRUNING TREES.

Don't think that a tree's welfare or rapid growth depends upon the large amount of "top" you leave on it. "The larger the top the slower the growth" is a good rule to go by. Shorten in the side branches and head back the leading shoots. Don't be afraid to use the knife or the pruning shears. Remember that the tree has lost during its removal from the nursery much of its root system, therefore the top should be cut away until it corresponds somewhat with the lessened root supply. When setting the tree, don't forget to trim away all dead or broken roots.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH.

In order to keep flowers in water they should have an inch or so of the stem cut off every day. If the stem is hardwooded, split it about one inch. This will allow the water to pass into the stem more easily.

THE BROOD SOW'S FEED.

The daily ration should include little or no corn. Oats, shorts and wheat bran are good. Ground rye and wheat bran are also excellent.

Whatever the feed do not make a radical change at farrowing time. Three days before farrowing shut the sow up alone and feed a light ration.

After farrowing give the feed in the form of a slop for about a week but the first 24 hours she will be better off with nothing but fresh water.

COW-TESTING ASSOCIATION.

The best thing for any dairying locality is the organization of cow-test associations.

In Denmark the organization of these cow-test associations has more than doubled the value of the dairy herds.

Make up your mind what you intend to do, make your plans accordingly and carry out your ideas.

RURAL PROGRESS DEMANDS.

Greater co-operation in national and neighborhood matters by farm people everywhere.

A system of national highways or good roads, built and maintained by the government.

That margin gambling in farm products shall be stopped.

That local option laws be extended to and enforced in all communities.

Giant honey bees of India build combs eighteen feet high.

TOWN BOOM EDYTORIUL

We take our editorial pen in hand this wk to lash out rite & left about how dead Bingville is at this time of yr and we dont care a whoop where the chips falls. In other words if the shoe fits you, put it on and if it pinches, youll haft to wear it.

It seems to us that every yr jest after the 1st of Janooary trade & bizness & everythink else in Bingville & vicinitty is at a lower ebb than it is at enny other season of the yr and goodness knows that aint sayin mutch for enny other season of the yr neither.

Along thru Janooary and Feboary Bingville is deadern a doornail or a pickeld mackerel, or both for that matter. A stranger comink into our midst at the present writing would think that ther wassent a live soul in the hull blame town and he wouldn't be far wrong neither.

Why is it our inhabitants all dens up and hibernates and remains in a commytose condishion during this period like a passel of woodchucks we ask? Why dont you git out and hussle if it aint for nothink more than a pearants sake so folks will know you aint past on. This condishion of a fairs simply makes our blud bile. Bingville folks jest sticks by the fire and drowses along one day after tother skeercely ever pokin their noses outen their houses for fear they'll git em frostbit.

Tother day we went down to the P. O. to git our mail and the P. O. was shut. Then we went on to Hen Weathersbys store and it was shet likewise. Then we returned home in deep disgust. Eph Higgins our P. M. told us afterwards that the reason the P. O. was shet was becuz it was so tarnashion cold that there wassent no P. O. customers and he thort it would be more comfortable to lock up shop and go home and spend the afternoon by the kitchen fire and him a publick sevrant of the guvvernment, too. Hen Weathersby said later the reason the store was closed was to save wood whitch was more expensive than the profits from two seegars whitch was all he sold in the store all forenoon. Thats a nice enterprisin way for the prop. of a big business emporium to ackt aint it?

How can Bingville ever hope to take her proud place amungst the metro polusses of this country and grow & develup and attrack manufackshuring industries into our midst as long as our P. M. and our biggest and only store closes up its doors and our most respeckted cittizens sets at home huggin their stoves in a effort to keep from freezin to deth.

A cashual stranger passin through this town would think it wassent inhabited by enny humink beings a tall. In fackt its a rare site along through midwinter to see as mutch of a sign of life as a dog on the street.

If the people of this town expecks us to git out a live, newsy, breezy, bellicose & bustling newspaper theyll haft to stir around and do somethink worth while so as to git their names in the papers. When their aint no news to print how can we print it, we ask? We cant we answer.

WAKE UP AND BOOST BINGVILLE UNLESS YOU DESIRE IT TO DETERRORATE INTO OBNOXSHIOUS DESOOETOOD.

Not only that, but they had all their fethers on. We would of kep our part of the bargain and said nothink if Dave haddent went & told a certain party who told us that these hens died from pip. So if Dave desires the Bugle hell haft to pay in cash instid of in hens who have passed away of pip.

Bale Hawkins was neerly frantick with a ole holler tooth akin him tother morning about 1 a. m. Finally Bale stood it jest as long as he could, then he got mad and hauled off and hit hisself a vishish wallop on the jaw knockin hisself sprawlin into the open fire place and burning his hand like everythink. Bale said the burn on his hand so ockupide his attenshion that he forgot all about his toothake. We persoom however most folks would prefer to releeve their toothake some other way.

Mrs. Jerushy Perkins while going out to feed her hens tother morning slipt on the ice and fell on her back piazza. Jerushy throwd the pan of grain into the air and some of it went down her neck and she had to take all her close offen herself to extricate it. Jerushy was purty mad and said the hens would haft to go without their feed until evg. whitch they done.

Bill Hepburn our artistick blacksmith went to work in his shop last Monday morning as ushual but he haddent quite recovered from his spree of the Satterday before over to the co. seat and he was a leetle mite unstiddy in his legs. As a result he lost his balance and fell into his tub of cold worter whitch he cools his iron in and got soaked and ketched a turrible cold in his chest. Let this be a warning not to tetch strong drink.

Widow Hinckley and her son Bud who aint quite right in his head attended church services last Sabbath morning. Bud was real good during the service. The only thing he done was to jab a pin into Deacon Butterworth who went to sleep in the seat ahead and was snorting so loud you couldn't skeercely hear what Rev. Moore was preaching about. The deacon hollored out a swear word afore he realised where he was, then he put on his hat and went home.

Lime Peters was turrible sick Friday morning when he woke up with vilent pains to his stummick and had to send for Doc Livermore our veternary & human spechialist. Lime thinks what mite of made him sick was eating a mess of cold sawsidge and haff a mince pie and some doughnuts before he retired the nite before. Lime says he cant seem to handle sawsidge, mince pie and doughnuts at bedtime like he uster being as his stummick is a going back on him.

CALAMITY CORNERS

Its quite coolish around the eddges at the Corners this wk.

The spelling bee at the schoolhouse last Friday evg was well attended. Lem Atkins stood up longest and spelt down everybuddy there. Lem is a awful good speller.

Gale Hooker has stopt smokin and took to chewin. Gale says it aint everybuddy who has will power enuff to stop smokin like hes done.

Ezekiel 'Snodgrass is suffering from a sore toe. Zeke pared his toe nails last Sunday and pared one of em a leetle mite to clost. Zeke says they diddent need parin very bad ennyhow and itll be a cold day when he pares em agin.

Sam Snyder has purchased a new pung and with that two year old colt of his Sam has a awful stylish turnout. All the girls hereabouts is honeyin around Sam sinst he got the new pung in the hopes of gettin a slay ride whereas before he bought the pung they wouldnt look at him.

Jake Holmes old clock whitch aint mist a tick for twenty years stopt tother night at 4:30 p. m. according to the hands. Jake couldnt understand what in tarnashion made it stop until next day he made a examinashion of it and discuverd to his disgust that a mouse had built her nest in the clock and was probly a going to raise a litter of yung ones. Jake says he dont blame a clock for stoppin espeshially when a mouse bilds a nest in it.

These is about all the items whitch we can think of that has happend around the Corners this wk. In fackt things is very dull here, but of course nobuddy can tell when somethink awful or sensashional will happen. In that case you will hear about it later.

NOW AND THEN.

Glad We Cald

Last Tuesday we called at the residence of Abe Witherow to see if it would be agreeable for Abe to pay us a doller or two on his back subscripshion.

Mrs. Witherow came to the door and informed us that Abe was out and askt us if we wouldnt come in to the kitchin and git warm so we done so. Mrs. Witherow had just tuk a cupple of mince pies outen the baker whitch was setting on the window ledge to cool. We admired the mince pies and said so adding that we was allus a great hand for mince pies being as mince pies was our favorite pies. Mrs. Witherow said that she would cut one for us only she was afeard it was too hot to ete and then we said that we allus preferd our mince pie hot, so Mrs. Witherow cut one strate across the middle and then strate acrost tother way making four quarter seckshions to the pie as you mite say and told us to help ourself whitch we done.

We chatted with Mrs. Witherow whilst we partook of the pie and to our surprise we kept partooking of it until we had consumed the hole entire pie. We told Mrs. Witherow this was a great compliment to her mince pies becus a mince pie had to be purty choice when we et a whole pie at one setting. Then we departed.

We will haft to say that Mrs. Witherow is a generous woman and its to bad that her husband Abe is so stingy that he wont pay his subscripshion.

Lige Aint Mutch of a Soderer

Lige Green sent to a big male order store in Cheecawgo and got a soddering outfit whitch he thort he could make a little extry change with by doing odd jobs of soddering for folks hereabouts.

Lige told his wife he would show her what a grate thing sodder is so he tuk her warsh boiler whitch was almost new and punchd two holes into it and told her to watch him sodder same until the boiler was bettern a new one.

Well, Lige couldnt seem to make the sodder stick over the holes somehow or other—it kep droppin off on the kitching floor and burning places on the floor and at last Lige spilt some red hot sodder on his leg and jumpt up with a whoop that could be herd all over Bingville and throwd the warsh boiler clean through the kitchen winder breakin out five lights of glass.

Mrs. Lige then chased Lige outen the house with a floormop and told him if he ever set foot in her kitchen agin except for his meels she wouldent be responsible for what she done to him. The boiler is ruined and Lige has give up going into the soddering bizness.

Martha Ort to Be Keerful

Mrs. Martha Tucker, one of our most respeckted ladies of Bingville begin last September to read a continued love story in a magazine whitch she takes and the story is still continued and Martha says goodness knows how soon it will be finished and if it aint soon shell have nervus prostrashion becuz at the end of every chapter shes read the hero or the heroeen is left in some turrible perdickament that a person woulddent think theyd never git out of.

Martha said the last chapter ended with the villynn tyin the hero on a railroad track and the train was coming around a curve in sight. She says she was so worked up that she had sick headake for two days and she supposes that the hero must be dead and burried by this time and cant skeercely wait until she gits the next chapter. If we was Martha we wouldnt take so mutch stock in a tale like this—praps its eggsagerated, or praps there aint a word of truth in it.

Amelia Out In Style

Miss Amelia Tucker our raining sossiety queen and leader of the Bingville soshial whirl appeard in church last Sunday morning with a fur thing rapt tite around her neck clean up to her ears. It also cuvvered her mouth and nose and almost her eyes so that she couldnt skeercely see where she was steppin and nearly fell down twict on her way to service.

After church all the wimmen folks crowded around Amelia and askt her if she had sore throat or was she suffring from toothake being as she was bundled up so with fur around the face. Then Amelia in a awful skornful voice told em that if they was up on styles like she was they would know that what she had around her neck was cald a chinchin coller and was the very latest thing out. Then Amelia stuck her nose up in the air and started home.

We can see how a chin chin coller would be very becomink to a girl whose fase was so blamed ugly that she desired to keep it under cover, but where ennybuddy has got a purty fase like Amelia has we shouldnt think shed want to hide it.

SHUT UP!

This is to notify every cittizen of Bingville & Vicinitty who has hair or whiskers that I have shut up my barber shop until further notis being as bisness is turrible dull in my line and besides I have went into partnership cutting ise with Hen Baker of this town. Hen & me will cut your ice for you and fill your ice house full to the roof at a reasonable price. I have kep my barbershop open all winter so fur, but whats the use? Answer—it aint no use. When cold wether comes all the men folks of this dadblamed town lets their whiskers and hair grow until spring and as a result I aint cut but two heds of hair and three shaves during the last month. Ruthern starve todeth Ill go out into the cold and cut ise. Now is the time to have your ice cut. Dont wait til next summer whitch will be too late. HARVE HINES.

METHODS OF THE PREHISTORIC STONE AGE ADOPTED BY SOLDIERS IN THE EUROPEAN TRENCHES

Clubs Are Utilized By British Troops, In Attacking the Germans—Other Primitive Weapons Are Used In the Desperate Hand to Hand and Trench Fighting Which Is Now Being Waged

© BY A·R·A

Casting aside bayonets and rifles, many of the English and Canadian soldiers in the trenches have gone back to the use of weapon of the Stone Age and are now capturing Germans by clubbing them into insensibility.

Trench fighting has taken on all the semblance of prehistoric warfare and indeed the troopers, fighting with that wild spirit of the primitive man, might easily be imagined as wild cave men cudgeling their foe with their crude weapons.

Many of the English soldiers have constructed their own crude weapons. They have taken heavy clubs, almost too heavy to be lifted in one hand, have loaded one end with lead and have driven spikes into the base. One blow of such a terrible weapon leaves the victim unconscious for many hours, or kills him.

A recent report from the trenches tells of a daring corporal creeping with four of his men to a German listening post. Such a post is merely a saphead runout from the main firing trench. It is a post at which one listens for sounds of movements and patrols.

In this case the Germans weren't listening very well. The English troopers reached over into the trench and struck them on the head with the cave-man clubs and a few hours later three astonished Germans were recovering consciousness in an English trench.

BOWS AND ARROWS.

While the club is about the most prehistoric of weapons employed in the present warfare there are many relics of mediaeval times being employed. Some of the Indian troops prefer bow and arrow while some troops from Africa still throw javelins. Helmets are generally worn to protect the head against missles dropped from Zeppelins and from bursting shrapnel while shields and breast-plates are employed in many cases.

The great chasm of time that divides the present era from that mysterious period of some 4,000 years before the Christian era, the history of which is told only by the meagre finds of crude bone weapons, might easily be bridged by the imagination were one to draw a mental picture of the wild man of the Stone Age stalking game with heavy club and compare it with the shrieking, semi-demonical wild-man in the trenches today.

The weapon of these modern cave men and of those of the Stone Age are the same; their lust for bloodshed and their hatred of their foe is the same, and both displayed the same cunning that made the wild man the victor over both his human and animal foe and today makes the twentieth century cave-men of the trenches the victor in hand to hand encounters with his foe.

Indeed when the fight resolves itself into hand to hand combat it almost seems that the centuries that cloud the past are rolled away and there in the trenches of France and Belgium the wild men of the Palaeolithic age are at it in all the wild frenzy of primitive mankind.

Were it not for the uniform of the soldier and the gun that signifies the twentieth century method of slaughter, one might easily imagine the foes gripped in single-handed combat to be original cave-men.

RESEMBLE PREHISTORIC MEN.

Shaggy-bearded from long absence from the barbers, eyes bloodshot from powder smoke and long hours of watching, skin toughened and browned from wind and sun—when two such trench cave-men grasp each other in hand to hand combat then the centuries of civilization are forgotten, the lust for death of the primitive man grows upon them and they have only one great longing—the longing to kill that was uppermost in the mind of men who lived in caves and fought the wild beasts in that period before the dawn of civilization.

Yet in only a few essential ways do the men of the present war differ from the men of the Palaeolithic period. Side by side with the operations of hunting and fishing, cattle raising and agriculture, with which are connected the preparation of flour and cooking, the people of this period showed other marks of civilization. Among technical arts the pre-eminent one was the carving and skillful treatment of stone, of which weapons and the most diversified utensils were manufactured.

Swords were known and while at first fashioned by hammering and chipping iron ore, people of the new Stone Age or the Neolithic period, as it was known, learned to grind these weapons to sharpness. Later they learned to attach crude handles of bone or wood to their swords and daggers.

The arts of spinning, weaving and making pottery made their appearance in the new Stone Age. In the last especially is displayed an understanding of artistic form and of decoration by means of ornament. Ornament developed into a sort of symbolic written language. The remains of the first dwellings ever inhabited by mankind show a progressive primitive architecture. Intrenchments and burial grounds show the principles of their earth works and the cairns, those structures of huge superimposed stones, witness that the architecture of that time was in its accomplishment but little short of that of the Egyptians.

THEIR ORNAMENTS.

Among the ornamental objects of the Stone Age those particularly important and characteristic are perforated teeth of dogs, wolves, horses, oxen, bears, boars and smaller beasts of prey. How sought after such articles of adornment were is shown by the fact that even imitations or counterfeits of them were worn. Numerous ornaments of carved bones and stag-horn have been found generally diffused; of these materials ornamental plates or beads were manufactured and slung together in the form of chains. Other bead-like articles may have served as buttons or for some other ornamental use or even for technical purposes, particularly spinning and weaving. Large black beads of terra cotta occur. Besides the plates of bone and stag-horn similar ones of stone are encountered. Entire armlets of mother-of-pearl are found and others of stone, handsomely polished, are recognized as of that period. Other adornments are of hematite, jet and even of amber.

In the lake dwellings of the Stone Age are found skillfully polished ear-drops, needles with eyes, gracefully carved little combs of boxwood, and hairpins. Remains of textile fabrics, even of finely twilled materials, and even tanned leather have been found, indicating that the wild men of a forgotten period had many things in common with their brothers of the present age.

In the latter Stone Age it is known men were possessed of domestic animals and a knowledge of agriculture. The dog, cow, horse, sheep, goat and swine may be designated as the domestic animals of this period. Among the animals associated with man as domestic the dog is undoubtedly the first and oldest. It is found dispersed over the entire globe and is absent from only a few small islands.

There is no reliable evidence that Palaeolithic man already possessed the dog as a domestic animal yet in the period of the Drift man, which preceded that of the man of the Stone Age, bones of dogs have been found.

DAWN OF AGRICULTURE.

In the north of Europe, which has furnished authoritative material regarding the Neolithic culture—startum, the definite evidence so far that agriculture even then was carried on and that useful domesticated plants were grown, consists less in plant remains themselves than in stone hand-mills as well as apparatus for spinning and weaving, which point to the cultivation of grain and flax. In the lake regions it has been established that there were three sorts of wheat and two varieties of barley. Flax also was grown in the Stone Age. The variety was a small leaved one, somewhat different from our flax of today.

The wheat also was small grained but mealy. Rye and oats do not appear until the bronze age. Apples and wild pears dried in slices have been detected in the dwellings in the lake regions. The various wild cherries, plums and sloes were eaten as were the raspberries, blackberries and strawberries. In fact it seems that some of the fruit trees were planted near villages and cultivated.

The pottery of the Stone Age is in many ways crude. Fragments of large pots are distributed extraordinarily widely as to both time and space. They have preserved their original form throughout all the prehistoric and historic ages.

In the fully developed Stone Age of Europe clay vessels were all manufactured by free-hand without the turning wheel.

While in regions where caverns were frequent caves and grottoes repeatedly served the men of the later Stone Age as temporary shelters, and to some extent also as winter abodes, in the well-watered Swiss lowlands the primitive inhabitants built their huts on pile-work in lakes and marshes. The Alps of that time must have been heavily wooded and filled with wild beasts. The pile work huts must then have afforded their inhabitants a security hardly presented elsewhere. Those who founded and first built huts in Switzerland belonged wholly to the Stone Age. It is apparent that the people of that era lived together in villages for protection.

BONES AS WEAPONS.

Fishing tackle, deer-horn hooks and barbed harpoons of excellent workmanship have been found in the unearthed ruins of their huts. In several pile-dwellings well preserved ruins of nets were discovered and with them a number of stone sinkers still bound with thread and apparently used in sinking the nets. Further articles of deer-horn such as small goblets with perforations by which to hang them up, beads for necklaces, and ear drops were very skillfully carved, large buttons frequently ornamented, needles with eyes, small combs, arrows, awls and puncturing instruments, a selection of large and small needles and many other things have been found.

Owing to its superior resistance, bone, particularly that of the deer and the ox, was much used for the manufacture of weapons and utensils. The largest portions of the daggers were made of bone and the blade was inserted.

Arrow and lance heads of bone are much more common than those of flint. In mounting the bone lance-head upon the wooden shaft, a binding of thread was used and this then was covered with pitch tar. A number of bone awls and chisels of all sizes have been found, one being sharp pointed, the other set in a handle of deer-horn. The teeth of animals, chiefly of the wolf, bear, dog and swine were perforated in order that they might be worn as amulets or necklaces.

A considerable number of wooden articles from lake dwellings of the Stone Age are known. A yoke of this sort is quite similar to those used even to this day in driving oxen. Neat combs were made of boxwood. Boats of that time made of trees hollowed out, have been discovered and one was 30 feet long. Other articles of wood were threshing flails, spear shafts, bowls and cups, spoons, hammers and even toy boats. Even fragments of tables, benches and doors of wood have been discovered.

REVERTING TO SAVAGERY.

In all of which discoveries nothing has been found to indicate that the prehistoric man was any more blood-thirsty than his brothers engaged in the great European conflict of today.

Indications are that the people of the Stone Age were as domesticated and perhaps more peaceful than the people of the present day. In none of the excavations made by scientists was any evidence found to indicate that these prehistoric people ever fought a great battle either in the nature of a civil war or with an alien foe.

Nothing has been found to bear out the impression that the man of the Stone Age was a brute who captured his bride and carried, or rather, dragged her to his cave, by the hair and later killed her father with a club when he came to visit.

History is silent about the warlike nature of this man yet in the present war civilized men of the highest education and development are taking up the cudgel so peacefully employed by the cave-man in the chase and in gaining his daily food by killing animals to eat, and are using it to cudgel their foes.

At least 6,000 years and perhaps more have passed since the time of the cave man and the Stone Age. Yet in the twentieth century, in the trenches of Europe men are proving that their instincts are no higher, in fact not as high, and that their choice of weapons is no greater than it was in that forgotten era before the dawn of civilization when wild men used clubs to hunt food and not to kill their fellow man.

This Girl is Lucky.

"Young man," inquired her father sternly, "will you give her a home like the one she has been used to?"

"No," replied the truthful suitor, "for there will be no grumpy father to come home and make everyone miserable by kicking over trifles and swearing at matters in general. There will be no mother to scold her from morning till night for wasting time, merely because she wants to be neat. There will be no big brother to abuse her for not doing half of his work, and no little brother to make enough noise to drive her crazy when her head aches. There won't be any younger sister to insist on reading some trashy novel while she does all the work. She will not have with me a home like she has been used to, not if I can help it!"
